MEMORIAL DAY OPPORTUNITIES

The purpose of this issue is to get 10,000 florists to push Memorial Day as energetically as many of them pushed Mothers' Day

WITH a wonderfully successful Mothers' day business to furnish the inspiration, progressive retailers now will turn to Memorial day, only a fortnight away.

The florists made Mothers' day—made it by combining in proper proportion a suitable sentiment and profitable publicity. The Review showed the way. The trade did the rest. As is stated by a big Kansas City retailer, who has himself followed The Review's Mothers' day suggestions, "it put thousands of dollars into the pockets of florists" all over America. And now comes Memorial day, with a ready-made sentiment, with the backing of a custom almost half a century old.

There already is an enormous business for Memorial day, but the same methods and efforts that proved so profitable for Mothers' day will add immensely to it, will put still other "thousands of dollars into the pockets of florists" all over America. It is worth thinking about.

Modern Methods.

To make the flower business profitable in these modern days, the retailer must employ different methods from those in vogue a decade ago—he must not be content to await the buyers; he must prepare specialties for special days; he must let the public know of these seasonable sales; he must book orders in advance; he must organize his force so thoroughly that he can put through a big run of business on time to the minute and without mistakes. If the details be neglected in any particular, if any cog in the wheel does not perform its allotted task, the retailer will see his more systematic neighbor pass into the leadership.

Memorial day affords one of the best opportunities of the year for the florist who is in touch and tune with modern merchandising methods:

The sentimental appeal of the idea is strong.

The custom already is well established.

Same of business already done provides a fine foundation on which to build.

Specialties for the day have been developed that provide the basis for advertising.

There is the possibility of taking orders in advance and working up stock ahead of the time designated for delivery.

It is an annual event of unlimited possibilities for the resourceful retailer who remembers that we take out of a business just about in proportion to what we put into it—in intelligent effort.

The first thing to do is to arrange for something to sell. You can't push for special business without having a specialty to offer. This time it will be the cemetery wreath. The kind and price will depend on the class of trade you handle. Then you will arrange the making up and delivery. Just what do you purpose doing? What will the stock be, how put up, how handled? Do you wrap in paper, or pack in a box? Are the customers to take their purchases home or shall you deliver? How about delivery on the grave in the cemetery?

Appeal to Sentiment.

When you have decided these details, and possibly many more pertaining to your individual establishment, you are ready to tell your public of your plans. It is time to plan your advertising.

Above all things, don't refer to the occasion as an "old soldiers' day"—it is far more than that. So long as the graves of war veterans were the only ones "decorated," the day amounted to nothing for florists. It was when the general public took it up that the demand on the florists began to grow. And don't call it Decoration day—Memorial day is the official title and much the better one for fostering the sentiment so valuable to our business. Remember that flowers are "messengers of sentiment." Don't let your public forget it—you will find that even the gruffest are sentimentalists at heart.

As One Advertiser Did It.

Every Memorial day advertisement should contain a reference to the general observance of the day and to the sentiment that prompts it, something like the following, cut from a last year's advertisement of a Cleveland retailer:

"There is a beautiful sentiment in connection with the remembrance of those loved ones departed, by placing some token of respect or affection on their graves. Knoble makes a special Memorial day wreath of galax or magnolia leaves at $1.50, $2 and $2.50 (cut showing one at $2.50) that is just right for this occasion and excellent value.

JOHNSTON BROS., Florists

35 DORRANCE STREET

No Memorial Day advertisement, no matter how well displayed, is complete without an appeal to sentiment. Work in the words: "There is a beautiful sentiment in connection with the remembrance of loved ones departed, by placing some token of respect or affection on their graves on the nation's Memorial Day."

Planning the Campaign.

Busy days lie before the florist who takes full advantage of the possibilities of increasing his Memorial day sales. First of all, he must lay his plans with care. Then he must see that they are carried out with the closest attention to every detail. It may sound rather difficult to the man who never has studied selling, but to the ones who have tried it along the lines suggested by The Review it has proved remarkably easy, as the great success of Mothers' day demonstrates.

Memorial Day Wreaths

Bertermann's skilled designers have made unusual preparation for a quantity of beautiful, but moderately priced wreaths.

Bertermann's grow thousands of select peonies. Flowers will not be scarce—we will have thousands of them moderately priced. Why not have them well arranged, boxed, and delivered to you in good shape. It costs less than accepting inferior goods at the same price.

Phones Bertermann's Phones

Where Quality is Featured.

Phone West 78 or Central 179. We deliver everywhere, and charge if desired." Such an appeal will do more than bring immediate orders—it will extend in many ways the use of flowers.

On the following pages will be found a number of suggestions as to how Memorial day business can be worked up. Use them freely. It is not the idea that anyone will follow these suggestions in detail—take what fits your business and let the rest go—if they serve to make the reader think of his own individual selling problem they will have accomplished their purpose.

MEMORIAL DAY WREATHS.

An enormous quantity of loose cut flowers and cheap bouquets still is sold for Memorial day, but the business of the day really began its growth with the advent of the cemetery wreath. In the beginning these wreaths were too expensive for a large general sale, but in recent years there has been a steady decline in the cost of these specialties of May 30, and with declining cost has come increasing sales. It is nothing uncommon now for a florist with a good funeral work trade to dispose of 1,000 or more wreaths each Memorial day.

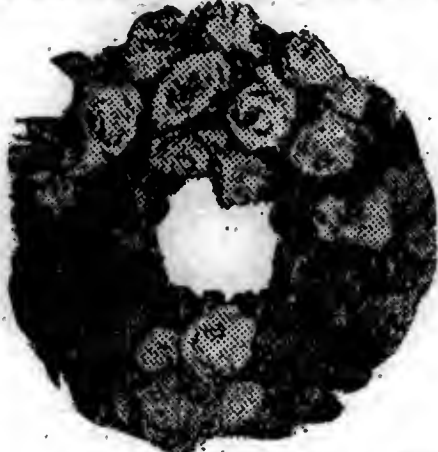

When the retailers began advertising cemetery wreaths for May 30 the price usually was $2.50 or more—it was not thought possible to do a money-making business at a lower price than $2.50. Now $2 is about the popular figure, and a great many stores feature Memorial day wreaths at $1.50. The policy to be adopted in any particular case of course depends upon the class of trade that is catered to. An extra 50 cents permits giving a great deal better quality, or a great deal better service. The average flower buyer still expects good service, no matter how low the price paid.

With the increased use of Memorial day wreaths there has come a most welcome increase in the variety available. In the beginning the Memorial day wreaths were mostly made of galax. Then the prepared magnolia leaves came into such general use that the sale of galax was noticeably curtailed. Then came prepared oak foliage, ruscus in special Memorial day colors, and a great variety of other less widely used materials. The more kinds of wreaths there are to sell, the easier it is to suit individual preferences. Variety is the one thing the average flower store stands most seriously in need of.

In some parts of the country the bulk of the Memorial day sales are of wreaths of artificial material. Until quite recently it was considered in certain circles as rather unprofessional for a florist to sell cloth, wax or metal flowers, but nowadays it is recognized that when customers would rather have tin designs than those of perishable material the florist should meet the demand, though not missing an opportunity to educate his people to better things. In a good many instances the cemetery wreaths are trimmed with artificial flowers. If that is what one's trade demands, that is what one should provide, but it is to be hoped that no florist will push such articles; instead, he should supply them only when called for and when given any latitude should trim his wreaths with the natural article. It will be found not difficult to lead the public away from metal and wax designs, or cloth flowers, for what sentiment is there in the use of factory-made flowers? The sentiment of Memorial day is lost where natural flowers are not used.

WHAT ADVERTISING DOES.

The Retailers' Best Aid.

Of course you have noted that the retail florists who appear to be making the most progress are the ones who use the most printers' ink!

Fact, isn't it?

Well, here's just one little hint, gathered from the experience of the advertising florists, that's convertible into real money next week: As surely as it pays to advertise all the time, it pays best to boost your business at the seasons of special demand.

It reminds one of the old saw about making hay while the sun shines, the modern version of which is "Push along while the going's good."

Now comes Memorial day.

The demand is there.

So is the stock.

To get them together in the store, use the newspaper. Tell the people there is something better than a bunch of snowballs when May 30 comes around.

Feature Cemetery Wreaths.

The retailers who have had the best success in advertising have featured wreaths for Memorial day. In the times in which, unfortunately, a good many florists still live, the 50-cent bouquet was the best seller for Memorial day. Now it is the wreath. People do not want loose cut flowers to put on a grave. Neither do they want a bouquet, for that calls, also, for a vase. The wreath just fills the bill. Advertise it. Here is a quotation from a letter from a New England retailer:

"About a week before Memorial day we started a series of ads calling attention to wreaths for cemetery use. The advertisements were distinct and the results were equally clear-cut and readily traceable. It is worth while recording that out of 840 wreaths made up in anticipation of the demand, only five remained unsold at closing time on Memorial day."

How to Advertise.

For the store that is located in the center of the city, where the greater part of the people can get to it, there is no way of advertising so good as to use the best daily paper. For the man located on the outskirts of a big city, the paper ordinarily has a great deal of waste circulation, but perhaps he can use it with splendid results for Memorial day and for cemetery trade in general. It often happens that, where there is more than one cemetery in a town, they are grouped. The florist who is located near the entrance to two or three cemeteries can use the best daily paper for Memorial day and get splendid results if his offer is right.

It is a curious fact that a good many men buy advertising with their eyes shut—they don't apply to it the common sense they use so well in making other purchases. Though the practice is not nearly so general as it was, a lot of men still buy advertising because they like the solicitor, or for some other equally valid reason, while others take space in everything that's offered, without a thought as to what they are getting for their money. The advertiser sees only one copy of his advertisement. It may look as good to him in his one copy of a paper practically without circulation as it looks in his one copy of the paper that everybody reads. The cost is about the same, and the appearance is similar, but there's a difference in results!

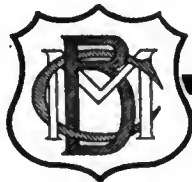

Where Newspapers Are Too Costly.

The retailer who is dependent on the trade of a small section of a large city, as so many are, cannot profitably use the high priced space of the big dailies—the paper must charge for its circulation of, perhaps, 100,000 to 300,000, while the retailer is in position to cater to only a few city blocks. That's the time to circularize. One may stuff the letter boxes and take his chances on his printed matter being swept out with that of the grocers and butchers, or one may use the mails, which costs a lot more, especially if sealed envelopes are used.

A new way is to have a neat slide to be shown on the screens of the neigh-

A specially good way, where a list of the lot owners in the cemetery is procurable, is to mail a letter to each family that has members in the "silent city." It is especially good where the families have moved away should be made at once—Flowers or plants should be ordered at once, as the florists will find it very difficult to obtain sufficient supply to satisfy the demand this season.

from town—they are almost sure to send an order and likely as not will give an order to have the plot planted and cared for during the summer, if the cemetery itself does not do that work.

But Do Something.

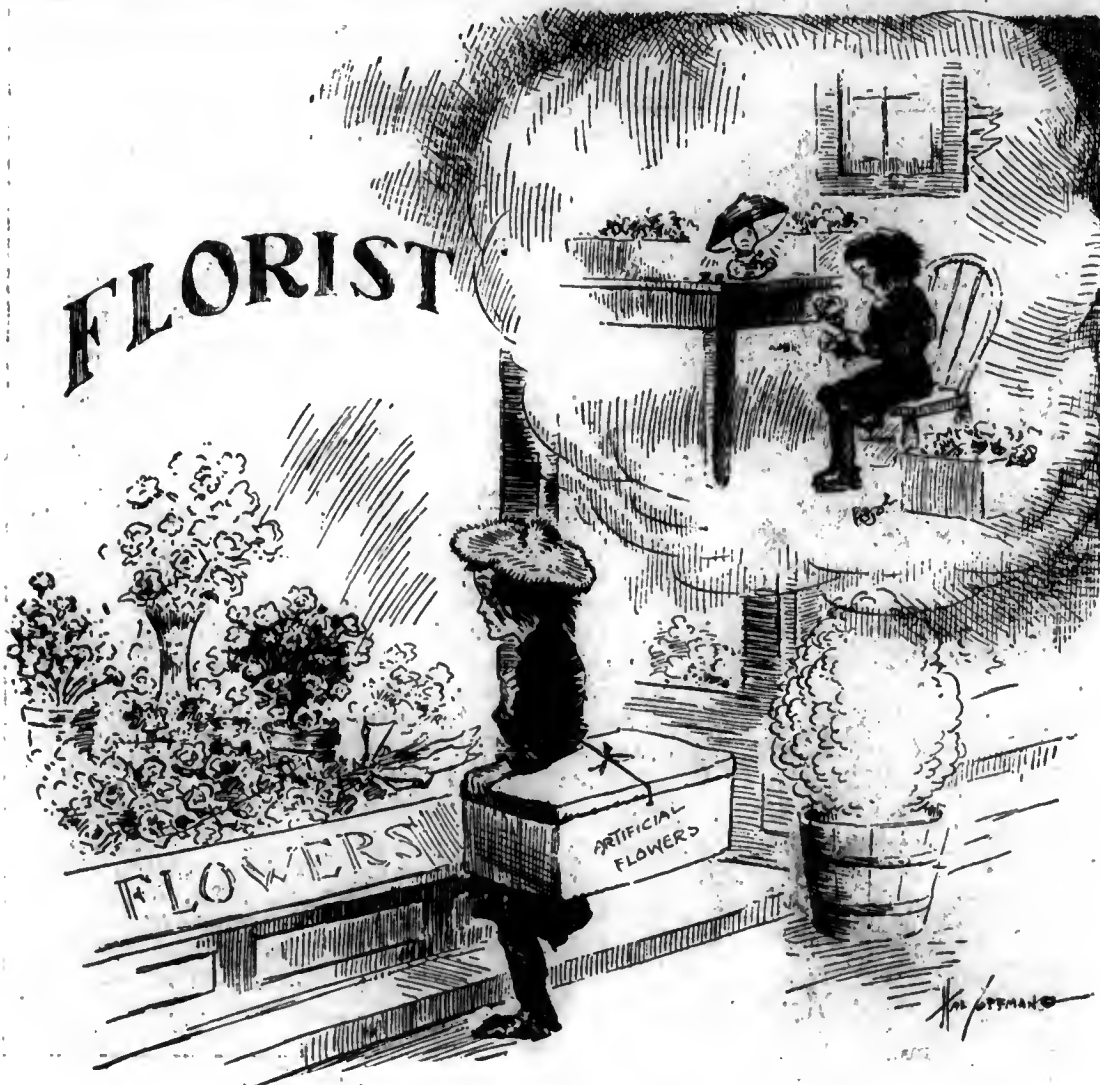

It matters little what one does in the way of advertising. Some advertising is better than other advertising, but any advertising is better than none at all. If you have tried some plan that brought results, use it again; if it did not bring a paying return, do something else. Figure out a method that fits your business. But, advertise!

THE CARNATION SPRAY.

In developing the Memorial day business the retailers have featured the wreath. The reason for it is apparent: The body of the wreath is made of a material which will permit the manufacture of a stock some days in advance of the rush, leaving nothing more than a little trimming to be done just before delivery. It simplifies the work. But a certain proportion of the customers will not want wreaths, insisting on having sprays. For Memorial day the same spray can be used that ordinarily is sold for funeral purposes. The demand, however, will be principally for sprays at the lowest price. A great many retailers have found it possible to keep business going through the summer by advertising low-priced sprays, say of carnations, at $2 to $2.50. One retailer in a good sized city has advertised such sprays for several summers, using his space for other purposes in the winter. The result has been that never a day passes without the sale of several of these low-priced sprays, while sometimes the sales run to dozens in a day. For Memorial day many of these are sold. They are put up in boxes and delivered in condition for the purchaser to take them to the cemetery. The accompanying illustration shows a spray made with the use of forty carnations and a little Sprengeri on a base of leucothoe leaves. Of course, if 4-cent carnations are used a fair selling price must be obtained, but the spray can be sold cheaply where low-priced flowers are to be had. Put a sample spray in your window, with a card telling what you can do, if you want to increase this feature of your Memorial day business. Do it today and begin taking orders.

OUT-OF-TOWN DELIVERY.

Memorial day is one of the special occasions when there is an exceptionally heavy run of orders for delivery in distant cities—people who are away from the old home like to order flowers to be placed on the family resting place in the distant cemetery. If you do no more to encourage this business, put a card in your window, and hang another in your store, telling of your facilities for the delivery of flowers in practically any cemetery anywhere in the United States.

But charge enough. One trouble with these exchange orders is that they frequently call for long trips for little money, and usually at a busy time. An order to be worth telegraphing from one florist to another should call for at least $5 worth of flowers.

ILLUSTRATING ADS.

To illustrate your Memorial day advertisement, look through this and preceding issues of The Review and pick out the style of cut you want—your local newspaper will make a reproduction for you, of the kind to print on its grade of paper. The cut shown in the Johnston ad reproduced on page 13 was made from a clipping from The Review of May 18, 1911. Dozens of florists illustrate all their ads that way—it's one of the ways in which they find The Review regularly useful. The Album of Designs also is full of cuts that are useful for illustrating retailers' printed matter. If a small reproduction is wanted to print in a newspaper, the paper itself will make the cut from the picture in the Album, but if a large cut is wanted for printing on good paper it will be necessary to order it of The Review—electrotypes are supplied at less than the cost of the original.

A NEW FIELD.

Since last Memorial day the installation of the parcel post has opened a new field for progressive florists. There are thousands of cemeteries in towns where there are no florists. The leading citizens of these country communities have the same refinements of taste as the people who live in closer touch with florists. They will buy Memorial day wreaths in considerable numbers. A large business can be done by reaching the lot owners of these country cemeteries. It can be done by letter, if the addresses are available, or by newspaper advertising. The parcel post gives quick, cheap, reliable means of delivery. A cemetery wreath can be sent for a few cents postage, and if the town addressed has a special delivery postoffice the investment of 10 cents in a special delivery stamp has the double effect of insuring the package and obtaining immediate delivery. The special delivery parcel post is almost as good as the florists' messenger delivery service could be.

HAS SHOW HOUSE UPSTAIRS.

Willis W. Kinyon has opened his new store at South Bend, Ind., and the accompanying illustration shows the tasteful interior arrangement, the store force and also a novelty in the way of a second-floor show house. The new location at 138 South Michigan street is in the heart of the city, and the store is so situated that the elevated show house affords a splendid advertising medium for the business. The display of blooms may be seen across the street, being an attraction to passers-by. When he leased the place, Mr. Kinyon arranged with the owner to remodel the interior as shown in the illustration, and in addition to a show house opening directly into his store he has the use of the main floor space for storage and packing. Mr. Kinyon says that he can keep on hand from 1,000 to 1,500 plants and is able to keep them in the best condition.

MOTHERS' DAY AT LINCOLN, NEB.

Well, in this, the first city to observe Mothers' day, this one was the best yet, even though we had bad weather. Every flower in the city was sold, and of every color. There was as much call for colored as for white flowers and it was the easiest big day of the year. Saturday's sales this year were seventy-five per cent of the total Easter Saturday sales.

All we have to do now is to see that the governor and mayor issue their proclamations, and have the ministers announce it in the churches, and publish a little advertisement, and the crowds come—and it does one's heart and pocketbook good to see them come, whole storefuls at a time, from 8 a. m. until 11:30 p. m., and carry their own packages away, in most cases, so that only the regular delivery help is needed.

Now that colored flowers go, and we have got it fixed in people's minds, all we have to do is to hold the price reasonable and do the business. As I wrote you years ago, push it. I want to say The Review has pushed it and done wonders. Thanks to The Review; long may it live! Chapin Bros.

LESSONS OF MOTHERS' DAY.

Chief of the lessons of Mothers' day is that of the power of publicity; second, the effectiveness of concerted effort.

The florists made Mothers' day. But for the florists the lady to whom we are indebted for the beautiful idea would never have got anywhere with it.

Mothers' day has made progress just in proportion to the push the florists put behind it—where the florists sat supine, there Mothers' day is practically unknown; no extra business.

The trade made Mothers' day—made it commercially—made it by individual effort directed to a common end—the sale of flowers. But Mothers' day got started wrong; too much emphasis put on one special flower.

We must change that.

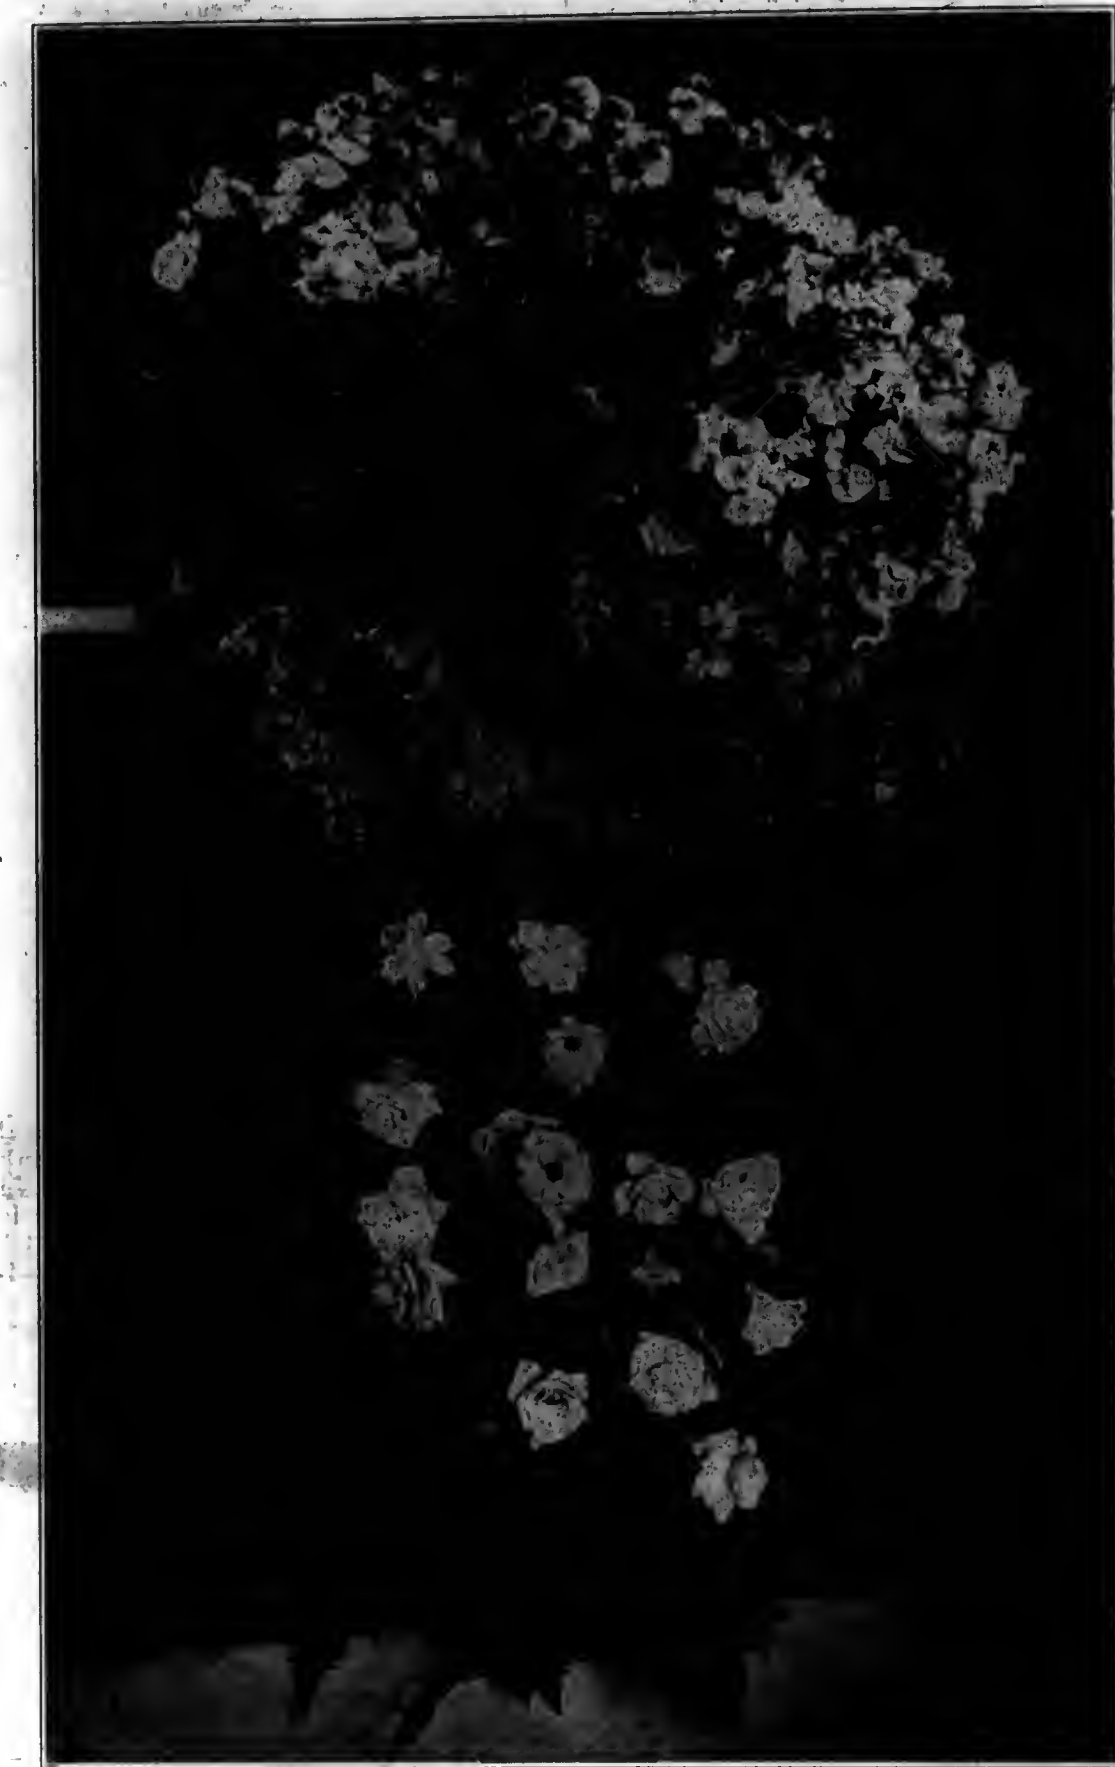

It can be done—by concerted effort. Let every individual push colored flowers and the Mothers' day demand soon will be equalized, prices brought to a reasonable level and the day made one of the most profitable and generally satisfactory of all the special flower days.

HELPING MOTHERS' DAY ALONG.

The following advertisement, three columns in width and illustrated with a cut of a carnation, appeared in Philadelphia daily papers Saturday morning, May 10:

It is Mother's Smile that Lights the Way Straight Ahead.—Mother Dear and Dearest: Wherever you are, I hope this will reach you to tell you that I am thinking of you and loving you still. Since you left the time has been long, but neither in the bright days nor in the dark nights have you been forgotten. Though others have come into my life and are dear to me, yet no one ever has or ever can take your place. That old, patient smile of yours still lights the way like the white carnation of your footsteps ahead of me along the road of life. In your memory we have gathered all the white carnations we could find (and other colors also) to the extent of 25,000, and all who visit us today are requested to accept and wear the token of a thought of mother.

The 25,000 Carnations for Our Friends will be found in the Grand Court of Honor this morning, and, so long as the flowers last, each of our visitors is asked to accept one. This year's white carnations are so few that we have taken all the carnations, in all shades, that our florists could find in their gardens.

According to our custom, we will have a Mothers' Day meeting in Greek Hall at 3 o'clock today, with Miss Anna Jarvis, the Founder of Mothers' Day, presiding. The speakers will be Dr. George W. Bailey and Mr. Frederick B. Hodgins. Our own people will render a musical program. John Wanamaker.

It resulted in the purchase of nearly 50,000 blooms. The first order of 25,000 carnations gave out in the middle of the day. More were sent for. When all that came to town were used roses were taken in their place. People stood in the line all day, each receiving one flower. It is thought that this enterprising bit of advertising gave Mothers' day a great advance in popularity in Philadelphia. Phil.

[Wanamaker's New York store worked the same plan and it is reported in the New York news-letter in this issue that 60,000 flowers were distributed.—Ed.]

FERTILIZER FOR SPRENGERI.

Will you tell me what commercial fertilizer to use for my Asparagus Sprengeri? The plants have grown in boxes for a number of years and should probably be thrown out and replaced with new plants, but I am not quite ready to do that. They are throwing up some fine new growth and I thought that, if fertilized, they might be held over for another year. A. R. M.

As asparagus is grown entirely for the foliage, some fertilizer should be used to develop leaf growth. For this purpose nitrate of soda or ammonium sulphate are perhaps the best commercial forms to use. Sodium nitrate may be used at the rate of two to three pounds per hundred gallons of water, or ammonium sulphate at the rate of three to four pounds per hundred gallons. Sodium nitrate is a little quicker in its action than ammonium sulphate. Both of the fertilizers mentioned are used for the nitrogen that they contain. In the use of commercial fertilizers, care must be exercised not to use them too strong. The plants may be watered with one of the foregoing solutions once or twice a week until the plants are again in good growth, when the solution should be used less frequently.

TYPICAL GREENHOUSE.

The accompanying illustration shows a typical florists' greenhouse. It is the establishment of A. M. Stackhouse, at Minerva, O. As so many florists do, the owner grows a variety of plants in one house, probably handling just enough to satisfy his trade. In case of a large order, it follows that he would have to call upon some of the larger growers to help him out, but the picture shows that he is a busy grower and handles quite a variety to accommodate his trade.

Commission Man's Troubles.

If the head of the commission house is careless in handling stock which is consigned, it is reasonable to suppose that his employees will be careless also. This means rough handling of flowers, which soon spoils their beauty. I have seen flowers in the retailer's icebox that showed no resemblance to the flowers the grower had produced. Who loses? The grower, commission man, retailer and, worst of all, the final purchaser. Most of the commission men are anything but careless, but just the same this condition should be changed in some manner that would work no hardships on either grower or commission man.

The commission man is the most abused man on earth. He gets the kicks going and coming. If not the grower, then the retailer. He certainly holds an unenviable position. To my mind his greatest cause of worry is the rush season or holiday time. He does not know until he sees the stock just what he has to sell. He books orders for certain amounts on certain days, and at the last minute he finds that the stock he has been depending upon did not arrive. Of all provoking things, that is the worst in the business. His blood nearly turns to water when at the last minute he has to turn down an order, and in all probability lose a good customer.

This should not be. When a commission man does the best he can for a grower during the slump season, it is no more than right to expect the grower to do the same when prices are high and stock scarce. Another point which would materially help the commission man is this: A grower who is making regular consignments should keep him posted as to the condition of his stock. If a big crop is expected, notify him, tell him if it is good, bad or indifferent, and the approximate time it will last. This would aid both persons concerned. The commission man would know when a certain crop was coming, what kind of stock and variety. He would make plans to push this crop as fast as it came in, and, if he is energetic, get a good price for it, which in turn would affect the grower's check.

The commission man should be on intimate business terms with the retailers with whom he deals. He should find out from them what the public wants,

THE TREND

OF TRADE

A YOUNG MAN'S VIEWS.

The "Get Together" Theory.

I have read with a great deal of interest the articles under the heading, "The Trend of the Trade," which have been published in The Review from time to time. To my mind the problem revolves around the "get together" theory. There are three distinct factors of our business in which we are highly interested—the grower, the commission man and the retailer. The problem should be studied from all three angles, so that we may gain a full idea and correct impression of the conditions which should be changed and undoubtedly will be changed in a few short years.

In every florists' meeting held since the first of the year the atmosphere has been charged with the tense thoughts of the wide-awake florists. They realize fully the various problems that confront the trade. They not only realize but have expressed their views fully, and in this way they have started other florists' thoughts in the same direction. And at the present day the florists over the entire country are wide-awake, wondering and discussing how conditions may be bettered.

Now, for the sake of argument, let us skim over the troubles of the grower, commission man and retailer.

Mistake of Staying Home.

The average grower is a man who stays at home most of the time. Right there is one of the biggest mistakes he could possibly make. Why? Because the man that stays at home is not in a position to know where he can get the best value for his stock. It is a big benefit for a grower to go to the large markets several times a year, and look into the selling conditions. If he has customers out of the city, let him make it a practice to call on them not less than twice a year; let them know he is interested in them; inquire as to how shipments arrive, if the stock he grows is as good as the other fellow's, and if not, ask them where the difference lies. And in a great many cases the customer may be able to tell how to remedy the fault. Don't think for a minute that simply because a man does not produce the stock his advice is not reliable, for a wide-awake retailer must be posted on all lines of the business.

One of the conditions existing between grower and commission man is detrimental to both, and is a constant bone of contention. A grower who consigns on commission has no way of holding the consignee for the goods. When he places his shipment on the train, that shipment should be under the responsibility of the commission man. Legally, the shipment belongs to the grower until sold or dumped; practically, it belongs to the commission man. It is this condition that arouses antipathy and mistrust of the grower toward the commission man.

what varieties are creating the heaviest demand, and then pass this item on to the grower. Would not all three parties be benefited by this method?

Grower to Retailer.

Now the retailer—he has his troubles, too, and plenty of them. It is principally through him that lies the success of the florist business. He is the one who directly reaches the public; therefore, he has to be constantly on the alert. Public opinion, as we all know, is a queer instrument. Yet, if this opinion is cultivated in the correct manner, nothing is too great to expect. We must all take our hats off to the retailer, when we think of the demand he has created in the last few years; of the modes and methods he has used to arouse the flower-buying public. If each man by himself has created a demand, who can imagine the result when they all get together?

Now the question is, where and how can a retailer be benefited? Here is a suggestion that might mean much or might mean little: Would not the retailer do better to deal directly with the grower? An arrangement could be made whereby both would be benefited. The grower could quote an attractive price to the retailer for the entire season on a regular order, the price to remain the same through all holidays. Any extra orders coming in during the holidays from the retailer should be shipped at market prices.

This method would not work a hardship on the retailer at certain seasons of the year when prices are out of all reason. The grower would have regular orders to depend on during the gluts and slow seasons. The public would be benefited by the lower selling price. The entire trade would be benefited by the increased sales of flowers and plants. A great majority of the people buy something else at Christmas and Easter because they think the florists are robbing them, and justly so.

When the grower and retailer decide to work together, they will soon notice a mutual benefit. The retailer could keep the grower posted concerning crops to grow, when to have them in full crop and in numerous other ways. The retailer by this method would have the satisfaction of knowing just what certain variety was coming into crop and when. Knowing this he could advertise accordingly, which would no doubt add to his yearly sales.

Keep the Windows Up-to-date.

The principal fault among many retailers is the use of old blooms. They are too set on selling all of their flowers, whether they are fresh or old. To illustrate this point I am going to cite an incident that happened only a few weeks ago. I was in one of the large cities a short time ago and happened to meet a man I knew intimately. We talked a few minutes about my business, which finally led him to tell me of an incident that happened to him in purchasing flowers. He had given a theater party and had purchased corsages for all of the ladies in his party. He went on to say that by the time the show was half over the corsages looked a week old. The flowers were evidently not fresh and should not have been used under any circumstances. The gentleman is a liberal flower buyer and was highly incensed at the treatment he had received. Hereafter he will no doubt deal with some other retailer. Can you see where the retailer gained by using those old blooms?

The average retailer does not give enough attention to his main attraction—his window. Too many crowd altogether too much stock into their windows. To the passer-by it merely creates an impression of color, and nothing more. The window should have a great deal of thought and time expended upon it, as it is an acknowledged fact among the trade that the window is the principal medium of advertising. The window should be decorated in pretty, attractive manner and method. Make the window a novelty, the talk of the town. Make the people realize they are seeing something new, either in style or arrangement, every time they pass the window. There is no argument to this statement, for it is a fact that in making an attractive window the retailer interests the public.

As to Imitation Flowers.

Why should we sit calmly by and watch the increased use of imitation flowers? Where do we gain anything? Ask yourself this question. How long would the average woman wear a dress that is out of style? She would not wear it. It is the same with any style. It is the retailer, who is constantly in touch with the public, who should change the order of things. Make the people realize, through advertisements and windows, that fresh flowers are the correct thing to wear. Put a stop to this everlasting artificiality. I have gone into a good many stores and noticed metal wreaths and bouquets for cemetery use. From my viewpoint, I cannot see where the florist is helping his business in handling this line of goods. It would be so much better to educate the people to the use of boxwood, Scotch heather, preserved oak, and other foliage that has come into use generally within the last few years.

There are still a great many faults that protrude here and there which should be changed. I have skimmed lightly over a few of the more important faults, that I may impress to a slight degree the necessity of changing the customs of our business to present-day requirements.

The best and surest way of obtaining the desired results is in your club and association meetings. It always rests with a few members to do all the talking, and usually the pushing. This should not be. Every man certainly has his opinion, and it might be the one that would hit the nail squarest. Don't be backward; get up and express your ideas. And, above all, get in the line and push. For it is you we need; not once or twice, but all the time.

W. J. Vesey, Jr.

SLOW GROWTH OF PANSIES.

My pansies kept nicely over winter, but they should grow faster. They are short on foliage and also on buds and blooms. I transplanted them in September. What feeding should I give them to make them grow bushy and flower better?

F. S.

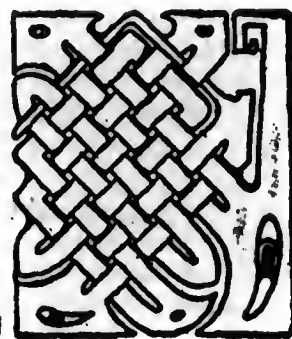

Do not be impatient with your pansies. If they are in well enriched ground, all they will need will be an ample water supply. If the soil is poor, a soaking of cow or sheep manure water will benefit them.

GREENHOUSE STANDARDIZATION

By PHILIP J. MCKEE, of the John C. Moninger Co., Chicago.

STANDARD TYPES OF HOUSES.

Are They Practicable?

The standardization of greenhouse materials is a subject that has undoubtedly been considered by every manufacturer of greenhouse materials and probably by not a few greenhouse owners. It is not a new subject, but one that is of great importance both to the makers and the users of greenhouses. Until lately there has been no direct coöperation among the manufacturers of materials or among the greenhouse owners.

Is it possible to standardize greenhouses? I believe it is and that the result of such standardization would be of great benefit both to the manufacturer and to the purchaser. This is not the result of snap judgment. Much thought and study given to this subject during several years of actual experience in the greenhouse business leads me to believe that standardization can be accomplished by the coöperation of the manufacturers of this class of material with the purchasers of greenhouses. With a full realization of all the facts, I say again that it is my honest opinion that standard types of greenhouses can be adopted, manufactured, sold and used. Neither one manufacturer alone nor one set of growers can bring this condition about, but it will be necessary for at least a majority of the manufacturers to get together and standardize their methods of production, and greenhouse owners must then buy the standard type.

Is There Any Valid Objection?

Is there any good reason why the maker of greenhouses and the buyer or user of greenhouses should not coöperate? Is there any good reason why the standardization of materials would not be satisfactory both to the manufacturer and to the user? I believe not. The making or using of standard types of greenhouses will not in any way affect the quality or quantity of stock produced. As evidence of this, there are in this country today a large number of greenhouses, being used by the most successful growers, that are of types and sizes that would be adopted under the standardization plan. [Fig. I shows a type of 27-foot ridge and furrow house that may be called almost a standard construction in the middle west.] These houses are giving just as good service in every way as other types that are not desirable from a standardization standpoint. There are today in use greenhouses of every width possible to figure in feet and inches, from eight feet to, I might say, 170 feet. The variation is not always in feet, but many times in inches and fractions of an inch. Can any one say that a difference of two, three or four inches or even a foot in a house would affect the production of that house? Would you believe such a statement if it were made? Do you think it could be backed by any good reason or by evidence of any kind?

What It Would Mean.

The adoption of certain standard types of greenhouses would make it possible for the greenhouse man to buy a house for considerably less money than he is able to buy it for today. Why? Because the houses could be made in stock, in sections—probably not a year's supply in advance, but the idle periods of the year could be normal working periods and the factory at these times would go humming along as though it were the busy spring months. Making houses in stock would not only save much for the manufacturers in a manufacturing way, but would help a great deal to reduce the enormous stock of lumber, steel, castings, pipe, etc., that it is now necessary to carry in every large, modern greenhouse plant. Carrying a large stock means vast sums of money idle, and the interest on it must come out of the pocket of the man who buys the greenhouse. Without such a stock the manufacturer cannot hope to get out even a small order, for this may call for just the things that happen not to be in stock. It must all be on hand, ready for every order, or business will be lost.

Economy in Numerous Details.

There would be a still further saving in the making of special plans, with specifications, details, lengthy estimates, much useless correspondence, etc. In fact, there would be a hundred little things on which there would be a saving. Even if the manufacturer should take a little of this saving to himself as extra profit, you could still get your greenhouse for considerably less money than it would otherwise cost.

The florist or vegetable grower would not only save money on the cost of the material for the house or range, but it would not be necessary to figure and plan, and write, and examine estimates, and sit up nights thinking about which would be the best width of house, size of bars, pitch of roof, and a hundred and one other things that ought all to be decided once and for all for everybody. He would save further on repairs, for parts would all be stock items and easily procured on short notice at any time. What an advantage this would be in case of damage by fire or storm! How easy to add houses or extend their length!

Uniformity Without Monotony.

This is not all that it would mean. Aside from the mere question of making or saving money on the materials, ease of erection, the natural simplicity of construction that would surely be brought about, and the quick and easy repairing, what a pleasure it would be to go about the country and miss seeing some of those horrid examples of greenhouse building! What a pleasure it would be to find every greenhouse or range neat and trim, spick and span, up-to-date and modern! How many failures it would help to prevent and how many successes it would really help to make!

Don't form an idea in your mind that I would like to establish a standard for just one size and kind of greenhouse. No, no; don't get that impression, for it would be impossible, and if it were possible it would not be practical. It would end competition if all houses were to be the same, and the whole greenhouse business would become stagnant, just like the water in the old pond in summer. There must be several standard types of construction and several standard widths. [Fig. II shows 34-foot houses that are so frequently called for as to approach a standard width.] The individuality of each manufacturer's product must not be changed, but become a part of the standardization plan—must conform in a general way only to the scheme of standard sizes.

How to Begin.

You are probably not aware of the fact that almost all of the greenhouses built vary in the pitch of the roof. Why should there be any variation for houses built in the same town, in the same degree of latitude and longitude, special conditions excepted? If there must be variation to conform with the angle of the sun's rays during the winter, why not establish a standard for this variation for different portions of the country? Would not this be the simpler and better method? Is it necessary to have seven or seventeen different degrees of pitch for greenhouse roofs in one certain, designated locality? It is not a necessity; it is a mistake.

The width of the house has something to do with the pitch of the roof.

Fig. II. Type of 34-foot Houses that are Almost of Standard Width.

A wide house, say forty feet, is not as steep in the roof as a narrower house would be, say twenty feet wide. [Fig. III.] The wide house would get too high if the same degree were taken as is used for the narrow house and it would present too large a surface to the wind and snow; it would mean stronger bracing and more expensive construction in many ways. Another point is, that with a house forty feet wide and over, the expanse of roof contains more glass in one body compared to the ground covered and the number of eaves, and therefore will drain a greater amount of water and melt a greater amount of snow in a given time than the amount of glass on narrow houses. The steep pitch is not required for wide houses.

Regulating the Roof Pitch.

Whatever be the reason or the necessity for pitch of roof on account of width of the house, why not establish a limit for width for one pitch and a limit for width of house for another pitch? Why have several degrees of pitch for the same width of house? One pitch is not desirable for all widths of houses, in my opinion, but if a pitch is desirable for a certain width it should be made the standard for that width. I do not believe it is necessary to establish different degrees of pitch to suit different localities, for the variation throughout that portion of the country which has need for greenhouses to any great extent is small, and does it really make a difference when you go south of Mason and Dixon's line?

For houses up to and including twenty-one feet in width, center to center of posts, a pitch of 32 degrees seems best. Whether or not this should be adopted as a standard for all types of houses, is a matter for discussion. The 32 degree pitch is one that was established a number of years ago and is practically equal to a rise of seven inches on the roof to every foot of width in the greenhouse. Probably custom or habit has had a great deal to do with the keeping of this pitch for comparatively narrow houses. There seems to be no really good argument in favor of changing the pitch for houses twenty-one feet wide and narrower and, likewise, no especially good reason for retaining it. The advantage, however, seems to be in favor of the 32 degree pitch, when construction, reflection of light, strength, wind pressure, snow pressure, ice conditions, condensation and everything else are considered, and I am of the opinion it should be adopted as the standard.

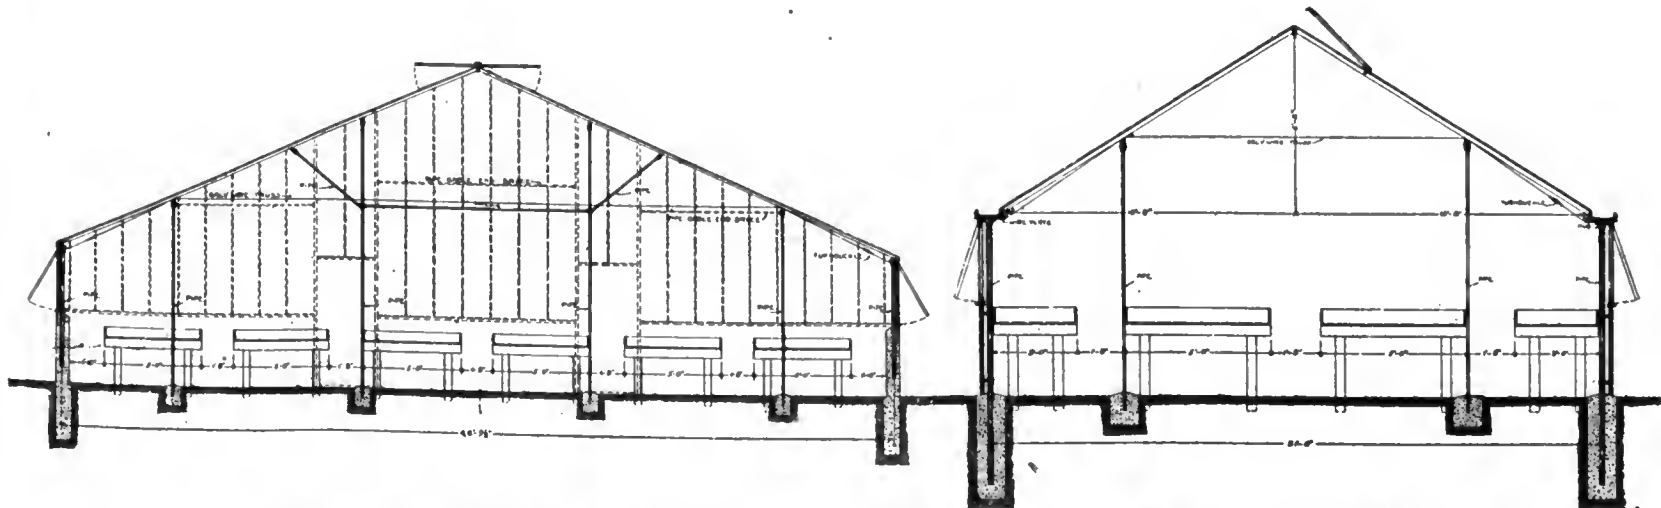

Fig. III, Illustrating How the Pitch of the Roof Varies with the Width of the House.

Increasing Width, Decreasing Pitch.

As stated, though, this is a matter for discussion and if it can be shown that some other pitch offers greater advantage, I am heartily in favor of adopting such pitch as the standard. There can be no great difference and surely some one degree should be adopted as regular.

After the 21-foot house the next width used to any great extent is twenty-five feet, center to center of posts, and here the roof pitch changes from 32 to 30 degrees. As the houses become wider the pitch decreases, partly on account of the appearance of the houses and partly from a construction standpoint. As the span becomes larger the need for a steep pitch is less, for various reasons. The volume of air is sufficient without steep pitch, the wind and snow pressure is lessened and there is a saving in materials. In houses twenty-one feet wide and less, the 32 degree roof presents a fairly steep slope to the wind, but, on account of the smallness of the house and its rigidity, this is of no serious consequence. The steep pitch causes snow and ice to disappear more quickly, gives a greater volume of air inside the house, and to some extent is a help in the ventilation and in the control of temperature; it also gives more head room, tends to stiffen the sashbars, etc.

The 30 degree pitch can be used for houses up to thirty-one feet wide. Of course, you understand this matter of pitch has only to do with houses that are even-span. Any unevenness of the span of the roof will make a change in the pitch. One notable exception is the so-called 27-foot house, using 16-foot bars on the north and 14-foot bars on the south. With this type of house, which, by the way, is one that is largely used, the pitch on the north is 26 degrees and on the south it is 30 degrees.

Advantages of Lower Pitch.

For a long time the argument was advanced that the 32 degree pitch admitted the rays of the sun in a more direct manner during the greater part of the winter than a lower pitch, and that for this reason it was better. A series of experiments conducted by the Department of Agriculture proved this to be nearly correct, but when the numerous other advantages in favor of the 28 and 30 degree pitch were weighed against this fact, the difference was by all odds in favor of a lower pitch. On the wider houses the lower pitch saves material, gives additional growing space and relieves the roof of a great part of the wind and snow pressure; the house also makes a better appearance and is easier to erect and keep in repair. [Fig. IV shows four roof pitches.]

For houses thirty-four feet wide and up to forty feet, a pitch of 28 degrees gives best results and should be made standard.

For houses over forty feet in width and up to seventy-two feet, the use of the 26 degree pitch, which is about six inches of rise on the roof per foot of width of house, seems correct. In my opinion, houses up to seventy-two feet should have the 26 degree pitch. Widths greater than this could hardly be made standard at this time, on account of the wide difference in the type of construction materials used by the various manufacturers and the variance

Standard Widths for Houses.

The question of the pitch of the roof is not as important as that of the width of the house. It will be comparatively easy to settle on the standard pitch of roof for various sizes of houses, but there is sure to be considerable argument when it comes to deciding on standard widths. There are several reasons for this. The many different types of greenhouses manufactured by various firms, and the working of materials for these various types, all have much to do with deciding on the width of a greenhouse. The location of the ground on which the greenhouse is to be built, and the size of the site will also have something to do with the width of the house. The class of stock to be grown, which makes various widths of benches necessary, will directly affect the width of the house in an effort to get an economical bench arrangement.

It is admitted there must be exceptions to any standard one may set up, whether this standard applies to greenhouse work or to any other line of industry. After going into this matter carefully, after several years of experience in the manufacture of greenhouses, and after visiting and inspecting a large number of houses and ranges of houses, I am firmly convinced that it is possible to adopt standard widths and make a success of the plan.

A FIELD OF PURITY FREESIAS.

The accompanying illustrations give a partial view of the field of Purity freesias grown by Mrs. Jas. H. Bays in Ventura county, California. The stock from which the field was planted was obtained from Rudolph Fischer, the introducer of the Purity freesia, when he first offered his stock to the trade.

The locality in which these freesias are growing was not affected by the recent freeze, which was so disastrous to many sections of California. Oranges, lemons and other citrus fruits, and even the tender poinsettias, were not frosted on the ranch where these freesias are growing. On account of the careful cultivation and the plentiful supply of water, together with the uniformity of the rows of selected seed stock, the field for some weeks presented an appearance of striking beauty, affording pleasure to all observers.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Meeting of Executive Committee.

The elegance and brilliancy of the International Flower Show has left a mark behind it, having awakened a popular feeling of appreciation. Said one man from Westchester county, "I never saw anything like this, but if you dropped the roses out it would look like a pond with a hole in the bottom," an expression which, if not elegant, was certainly suggestive. The roses displayed were without doubt the most perfect specimens of greenhouse culture, and the plant section in pots and tubs was unrivaled. The number of entries and the quantity en masse have never been equaled in the history of the American Rose Society, and this display came from members of this society. The prizes awarded went to thirty-five persons. The total value of prizes exceeded $2,700.

The executive committee will meet in New York on Friday, May 16, at Vice-President Traendly's office. The Rose Society might become a powerful organization for pushing rose culture if it could offer to each local civic or horticultural society the rose society medals. The plant growers of the United States should all join the A. R. S. Three societies have asked whether such membership could be granted.

President Farenwald has appointed the following as judges for the Hartford rose garden: Wallace R. Pierson, Eber Holmes and John Huss.

A committee consisting of Robert Pyle, Patrick O'Mara and Wm. F. Gude was appointed at the annual meeting to confer with the United States commissioner of agriculture, Mr. Houston, relative to the establishment of a rose test garden at Washington, D. C. This committee is in accord with the S. A. F. committee.

Another movement in this same direction comes from the New York State Agricultural College at Ithaca. Here is an opportunity for New York state people to make a test out in the central part of the state, where the winters are usually steady and there is an inland climate. The Rose Journal, which last year was upheld by five gentlemen, should be sustained. If we can get fifty persons who as rosarians will take space for fifty inches, it will help. Our committee on membership will take hold and help.

PERENNIALS FOR FALL SALES.

Will you kindly tell me the names of two or three perennials or other plants that I can plant now and grow outdoors until fall and then market through the columns of your paper? I can pick out my own list, but the kinds I would select might not be in demand. I have the space and the time and should like to grow at least $100 worth of some plant or plants during the summer.

P. L. W.

If you had started seeds under glass in March you would have secured stronger plants of perennials than will now be possible, but here are a few which will make good plants if sown at once: Delphiniums, Chrysanthemum King Edward VII, Coreopsis grandiflora, Gaillardia grandiflora, Campanula Medium (Canterbury bells), Digitalis gloxiniflora (foxgloves), Lupinus polyphyllus, sweet williams and Campanula persicifolia. Hollyhocks can be sown early in June and pansies and myosotis late in July. Sow under shaded sashes, transplant to nursery rows during cool, moist weather and keep well cultivated through the summer.

CATTLEYAS IN FINE BLOOM.

The accompanying illustration shows a group of Cattleya Gaskelliana grown at Hollywood Gardens, Seattle, Wash. There are eighteen plants in the group, with 125 blooms. In the foreground is Adiantum cuneatum.

SALTING MANURE.

In The Review of June 24, 1909, R. E. Shuphelt gives instructions to mix salt with cow manure, in order to make it rot better and also for the purpose of killing grubs, etc. He does not state, however, how much salt should be used to the ton of manure. Will you kindly give me this information?

B. J. P.

I have never had a hard and fast rule for applying salt to manure, but have used more or less, according to the condition of the manure, etc. The best place to use the salt is in the stable every time that the stables are cleaned, using about a small handful of a shovelful of manure. If the manure is unusually strawy, of course you should use more salt than if the litter is well shaken out, and you should use more for horse manure than for cow manure. If you are making up your compost heap and the manure has not already been salted, salt each layer of manure; put it on so that it will look as if there had been a good, heavy snow squall, making the surface quite white. I find that people seldom use too much, though that can be done, of course. You will soon learn by experience the proper amount to use, according to the condition of the manure and the length of time that will elapse before the manure is needed; use less salt if the manure is wanted quickly than if you have time to let it stand and turn it several times.

WM. EDLEFSEN IN OREGON.

The new home of Mr. and Mrs. William Edlefsen, formerly of Milwaukee, Wis., and now located at Lorane, Lane county, Ore., is shown in the accompanying illustration. In a recent letter to friends in Milwaukee, Mr. Edlefsen states that he has recovered his health in the ideal western climate and, although now 67 years old, he expects to celebrate many more birthdays. He was one of the pioneer florists of Milwaukee and upon learning of the splendid prospect for fruit growing in Oregon he went there several years ago to investigate.

Mr. Edlefsen located last July at Lorane, where he bought forty acres, part of which is now an orchard, while the rest is still timber land. He made his house and immediate grounds as attractive as possible and thinks that he now has one of the prettiest spots in Oregon. He writes that the florists' business in his vicinity is in its infancy, and that if he were twenty years younger he would again embark in that line. With a river about a block away and plenty of wild fowl in the immediate vicinity, Mr. and Mrs. Edlefsen are not worrying about the high cost of living.

Malta, O.—W. C. Scovell says that although his carnations were under water for forty hours during the flood, they were not damaged. For Mothers' day he had a record business, colored flowers selling as well as white.

Carnations

AMERICANS ABROAD.

The behavior of American carnations in England is not a matter of importance to growers here, but it nevertheless is of interest to note how they do under other conditions. The following notes are by Allwood Bros., of Hayward's Heath, Sussex, England:

"Of last season's American novelties, Rosette is considered the best in England. It is not so free flowering as many varieties, but the color is wonderfully bright and solid.

"St. Nicholas is not considered so good as Scarlet Glow in any respect, the flowers being too thin.

"Benora is all that was claimed for it and has done well over here. Unfortunately, the flowers are not popular in Covent Garden Market.

"Wodenethe produces some fine flowers, but it is not considered so good for market as White Wonder or White Enchantress.

"Brooklyn comes bad over here; the color has too much magenta in its make-up and in productiveness it is a long way behind Mrs. C. W. Ward."

TWO SIMILAR INQUIRIES.

I am sending you under separate cover some shoots of White Enchantress that are yellow at the tips. The plants are growing rapidly and, aside from this discoloration, they appear to be healthy. The house has been run cool, with a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night, or practically that. The plants are in solid beds and have a large number of shoots like the enclosed. I am a new man in the business and any information will be most gladly received. E. G. C.

Will you kindly explain what causes the leaves of White Enchantress to turn yellow? You will find samples enclosed. H. V.

The specimens forwarded by E. G. C. showed plainly the cause of his trouble. I think there is no question that it is a bacterial disease, but just how to proceed against it I am unable to say. In a recent discussion by expert carnation growers, the fact was brought out that the whole Enchantress tribe is affected by the malady that E. G. C. complains of. In the spring these yellow tips appear without any apparent cause, and the trouble seems to be general all over the country. Some think it indicates a weakening in the strain, and perhaps they are right. Others think it is caused by overfeeding, but experience does not bear out this latter theory. I am rather inclined to the opinion that it is aggravated by heavy watering without sufficient nourishment being given along with it. That, however, is merely a theory which I have not as yet tested out. If E. G. C. cares to do so, I would advise that he proceed with that theory in mind.

In reply to H. V., I would say that if the leaves forwarded by him for inspection were taken from his blooming stock, he will find his answer in the preceding paragraph, replying to E. G. C. If they were taken from his young stock, then my advice would be to dump every plant that shows these yellow leaves. They may apparently outgrow the trouble during the summer, but it will show up again next winter, just as sure as winter rolls around. The only effective way to get rid of it is in selecting the cuttings and culling out the plants from time to time as the disease appears among them.

A. F. J. B.

RUST AND SPOT DISEASE.

I am sending you some carnation sprays, which seem to be affected by two different diseases. Can you tell me what is the matter and what to do to remedy the trouble? L. M. S.

The disease on one of the specimens forwarded is the common carnation rust. Unless your plants are badly affected, this disease should give you little trouble from this time on. Too much moisture and too little ventilation are usually the cause of this disease getting started. Some also claim that an excessive supply of nitrogen in the soil will bring it on. However, if you will water and ventilate carefully, you will have little trouble with rust. Dusting the plants with Grape Dust will help to keep it away.

The other is a spot disease, which can be controlled by spraying with Bordeaux Mixture. Cut away the worst affected shoots and spray once or twice each week until the trouble disappears. There should be little difficulty in controlling this disease, now that bright, warm weather is due. A. F. J. B.

PRIMULA AND COIN.

Henry Schmidt, of Union Hill, N. J., who is well known as a primula specialist, supplied the photograph from which the accompanying illustration was prepared. It shows a Primula obconica flower in comparison with a coin the size of a silver dollar. As it is against the law to photograph United States money, Mr. Schmidt used a foreign coin, the German 5-mark piece, the equivalent of our silver dollar, one and one-half inches in diameter. Mr. Schmidt grows all the popular market primulas and has worked up his own special strains of each.

DIRECTION OF HOUSES.

I intend to build a range of greenhouses this summer. The range will consist of four houses, each 29x200. As there is a gentle slope toward the northwest, I intend to run the houses north and south, to avoid having the office in the rear. Do you think such a plan is advisable in this part of the country? My location is central Missouri. C. A. C.

The letter states that it is proposed to run the houses north and south, which is generally understood to imply that the direction of the ridge, or greatest length of the house, is north and south, but the accompanying sketches show two different plans with regard to this point. In plan No. 1 the ridges run east and west, with the office, potting room, boiler, coal room and a propagating house along the north side. In plan No. 2 the ridges run north and south, with the propagating house, etc., on the west side. While my choice would be for a north and south range in sections as far south as central Missouri, for growing carnations, palms, chrysanthemums, etc., it is undesirable to have the propagating house on the west side of the range and it will also be better not to have the boiler and potting rooms on the west side of the greenhouses.

Even though the houses run north and south, by using the west houses for roses and carnations and the east houses for palms, etc., the office could be at the northeast corner, and the propagating house could be along the east side. Unless there is some objection which is not apparent, the boiler, coal and potting rooms should be along the north ends of the houses.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

["The Genus Iris," by William Rickatson Dykes. Published in England by the Cambridge University Press, and in America by the University of Chicago Press, Chicago, Ill. Size, 12x18 inches, and one and five-eighths inches thick. Bound in half morocco. Contains seventy-eight illustrations, including forty-eight full-page plates, showing the species life size and in the natural colors. Price, $38.36, postpaid.]

It may be well to admit in the beginning that this book, "The Genus Iris," may be classed among the luxuries of life. Any single volume with such a price-mark attached to it, however large and sumptuous the volume might be, would probably be regarded as a luxury by a formidable majority of The Review's readers, and it would be foolhardy and useless for the reviewer to offer a contrary opinion. Yet every fairly prosperous individual indulges in some luxuries. Indeed, it is generally agreed to be true, though it sounds paradoxical, that a few luxuries are necessities, if one's character is to have its proper, well-rounded development. And, if this book must be listed among the luxuries, it may well be considered one of the most desirable in the list.

Anyone who is especially fond of the iris, and who wishes to find a publication that will do full justice to the exquisite beauty of the flower, could scarcely do better than secure this volume. Moreover, if there is anyone, in the florists' trade or out of it, who is proud of the completeness of his botanical library, let him subdue his pride, bow his head meekly and "walk humbly" until he has added this volume to his collection.

The book, if it is a luxury, is a luxury of the genuine sort, embodying real, substantial value. It is not bedecked in cheap finery, like many other books, so as to attract the unwary and unsophisticated purchaser, but is evidently the result of the best efforts of the most expert craftsmen to manufacture, from the best of materials, as nearly as possible a perfect piece of work. Only a few publishing houses could produce such a work if they tried, and few would have courage enough to try. The forty-eight full-page colored plates are really remarkable for their accuracy and delicate beauty. The word "iris," you will remember, is the Greek name for the rainbow, and the iris's rainbow-like blendings of wonderful colors supply a fine opportunity for

The Amended Tariff Schedules

THE report as to the amendments in the pending tariff bill published last week does not agree in all particulars with the printed copy of the bill as it passed the House May 8, 1913. In only two particulars are the variations important: Greenhouse plants not specially provided for appear in the official copy at twenty-five per cent ad valorem, instead of fifteen per cent. This leaves the opportunity open for disputes as to what is nursery stock and what is greenhouse stock, the difference in rate being ten per cent. Also the official copy of the bill does not show an age limitation on coniferous evergreen seedlings to be admitted free.

An attempt at further corrections will no doubt be made in the Senate committee and to show just how the trade's paragraphs now stand they are here reprinted from the official text of the bill. The words omitted from the bill as introduced in the House April 7 are shown in brackets, while the words added on the floor of the House are shown in black-face type.

Orchids, palms, azalea[s] indica, and all other decorative [or] greenhouse plants and cut flowers, preserved or fresh, 25 per centum ad valorem; lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, $1 per thousand; hyacinth bulbs, astilbe, dielytra, and lily of the valley clumps, $2.50 per thousand; lily bulbs and calla bulbs or corms, $5 per thousand; herbaceous peony, Iris Kaempferi or Germanica, canna, dahlia, and amaryllis bulbs, $10 per thousand; all other bulbs, [bulbous] roots, root stocks, [or] corms, and tubers, which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand.

216. Stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of Myrobalan plum, Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry, Manetti multiflora and briar rose, Rosa Rugosa, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants; stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of pear, apple, quince, and the Saint Julien plum, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants; rose plants, budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots, 4 cents each; stocks, cuttings, and seedlings, of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen shrubs and vines, and all trees, shrubs, plants, and vines commonly known as nursery [or greenhouse] stock, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per centum ad valorem.

217. Seeds: Castor beans or seeds,

15 cents per bushel of fifty pounds; flaxseed or linseed and other oil seeds not specially provided for in this section, 20 cents per bushel of fifty-six pounds; poppy seed, 15 cents per bushel of forty-seven pounds; mushroom spawn, and spinach seed, 1 cent per pound; canary seed, 1/2 cent per pound; caraway seed, 1 cent per pound; anise seed, 2 cents per pound; beet (except sugar beet), carrot, corn salad, parsley, parsnip, radish, turnip, and rutabaga seed, 3 cents per pound; cabbage, collard, kale, and kohlrabi seed, 6 cents per pound; egg plant and pepper seed, 10 cents per pound; seeds of all kinds not specially provided for in this section, 10 per centum ad valorem: Provided, That no allowance shall be made for dirt or other impurities in seeds provided for in this paragraph.

the highest skill of the artist and illustrator.

As to the accuracy of the text, the completeness and correctness of the classifications and descriptions of the species of iris, it might be safe to assume that the high rank of both the English and the American publishers would go far toward being a guarantee of reliability. However, the book itself bears the marks, the signs, the impress of painstaking and intelligent labor on the part of the author. In the introduction to the book the author himself briefly narrates the difficulties that he encountered in trying to dispel the confusion in iris nomenclature and eliminate the numerous synonymous names. He gives a sufficiently short and modest account of the exceedingly long and tedious process of arriving at the right conclusions. This process, as he outlines it, comprised the following three distinct stages: First, what might be called the book drudgery, the comparison of authorities in the great libraries at Kew and elsewhere; second, the practical verifying of results by "checking" them with the herbarium material at Kew, at the British Museum, at the Berlin Botanic Garden, at the United States National Museum in Washington, etc.; third, the still more practical verifying of results by growing specimens of all available species in the author's own garden in Surrey, England.

The first few chapters of the book are entitled: "The Literature of the Iris," "Bibliography," "The Structure, Distribution and Cultivation of the Iris," "Iris Diseases and Their Remedies," and "An Analytical Key to the Subdivisions of the Genus." Then follow the illustrated descriptions of varieties, forming the main body of the volume, and the closing pages treat of these subjects: "Iris Hybrids," "Raising Irises from Seed," "Orris Root," "Unidentified Specific Names," and "A List of Plants Wrongly Described as Irises." At the end is an excellently arranged index. And if anything else could be added to the book that would really increase its beauty or its scientific value or its practical utility, the present reviewer is curious to know what that addition could be.

Geraniums

GERANIUMS TURNING YELLOW.

I am having a great deal of trouble with my geraniums this year. The leaves are all turning yellow. It is underneath the leaves that the trouble starts. I keep them wet enough and always water them at the roots. Will you please tell me the cause and something to do for them? W. B.

Among the possible causes of yellowing foliage are too much water, too little water, overfeeding, overcrowding and starvation at the roots. Be careful in feeding to apply the fertilizer only to plants which are well rooted. Avoid chemicals. A surface dressing of Clay's fertilizer or bone meal is safe. Spread your plants out. Do not play the hose on the foliage. Pot any which are much matted with roots. Give full sun and free ventilation and your plants should soon improve. C. W.

GOOD SINGLE GERANIUMS.

Will you kindly give me the names of the single red geraniums, dark and light? I have tried to identify them by means of the descriptions in The Review's advertising columns, but without success. A. E. N.

Without seeing any flowers, I can only give the names of what I consider first-class single geraniums, for either pot plant culture or bedding. Jacquerie, rich crimson scarlet, is the finest dark red; Paul Crampel is brilliant vermilion scarlet; Rival is salmon red; The Sirdar is rich scarlet; Telegraph is Lincoln red, and Maxime Kovalevski is rich vermilion. C. W.

GERANIUMS BLOOM POORLY.

I wish to ask you for some information about my geraniums. I received my 2-inch geraniums March 19 and planted them in 3½-inch pots. I mixed the soil with bone flour and gave them a good soaking with nitrate of soda solution. The foliage is all right, but they are slow to produce buds and blooms. I want them for Decoration day trade. I have them in hotbeds. Do you think I should give them a top-dressing of bone flour? How is this done? Should it be strewn on top of the soil or mixed with the top soil, or should I give them a feeding of manure solution? Which is the best manure for this purpose—sheep, cow or horse manure? Should it be fresh or rotted? F. S.

If you gave your geraniums a "good soaking with nitrate of soda" right after shifting them into 3½-inch pots, this in itself would be sufficient to account for their present unsatisfactory condition. Nitrate of soda is a powerful stimulant, which must be used with extreme caution; only plants which are really well rooted and are showing signs of starvation should be fed with it, and then only sparingly, at the rate of one pound to fifty gallons of water.

If you have any well rooted plants it will benefit them to apply a top-dressing of bone flour, lightly scratching the surface soil afterward. Cow or sheep manure in liquid form is a good stimulant. Do not use it too freely, however, or it will promote rank foliage at the expense of flowers. C. W.

DISEASED GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

Enclosed you will find a geranium leaf. Will you please tell me whether there is a remedy for its condition and state what causes the trouble to spread to other plants? S. D.

Peter J. Nicholas.

(A Cleveland florist in the uniform of the Greek army, of which he is temporarily a part.)

This leaf had a diseased appearance. Pick off all affected leaves and throw away any plants which are badly attacked. Keep the plants clean and not too crowded. Pot any which may need it or give them a sprinkling of fine bone on the surface. It will be better not to use any strong stimulants, but if any have a starved appearance, one application of nitrate of soda, one ounce to a 3-gallon can, will benefit them. If your house is close and poorly ventilated, plunge the plants in a gentle hotbed and they will grow away much better. Do not sprinkle water on the foliage. C. W.

YELLOW GERANIUM FOLIAGE.

I am sending some geranium leaves under separate cover. I should like to know what kind of disease is affecting the leaves and whether there is any remedy. Should the foliage of geraniums be sprinkled often, once in a while, or never? L. A. S.

The leaves, on arrival, were practically all yellow. This did not look like a disease at all, but simply a case of too great dryness, or of root or soil starvation. It could also be caused by keeping the plants too crowded, or by overfeeding. Spread your plants out, pick off affected foliage and let them have the sun and plenty of fresh air. Pot any which are matted with roots or give them a sprinkling of Clay's fertilizer or fine bone to green them up. The foliage should not be sprinkled over at all; it is of no benefit and may, if persisted in, be productive of leaf disease. C. W.

PATRIOTIC GREEK FLORIST.

Peter J. Nicholas, proprietor of The Arcade and one of the best known Greek florists in Cleveland, is shown in the accompanying illustration in the uniform of a soldier in the army of Greece. When the Balkan allies declared war against Turkey, Mr. Nicholas was among the large number of Greeks who went from this country to take up arms for the king. He has written friends that he expects to return to Cleveland soon. He is well known both in Chicago and Pittsburgh, where he buys his stock.

THE ILLINOIS ASSOCIATION.

President Charles Loveridge has appointed the following vice-presidents of the Illinois State Florists' Association to serve two years: A. C. Kohlbrand, Chicago, Ill.; H. E. Smith, Danville, Ill. As members of the advisory board he has appointed W. N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill., and J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., to serve a term of two years. J. F. Ammann, Sec'y.

SUMMER CARE OF CYCLAMENS.

We have a nice lot of 3-inch cyclamens which we carried over from last fall. These plants are in fairly heavy foliage, and some are still blooming. We have them on a bench near the glass, and shaded. How shall we take care of them? Should this foliage stay on or should we let it go down? The foliage is bright green. We expect to put them outdoors. Should we repot them, and when? Any advice on this matter will be greatly appreciated. C. F. B.

The plants should not be kept dry, so as to cause the foliage to die away. Give them a shift now into 4-inch or 4½-inch pots. After the third week in May you can, if desired, place them in a coldframe on a bed of fine ashes. Cyclamens grow particularly well in frames if protected from the bright sun by lath shades and sprayed during bright sunshine. For Thanksgiving flowering, house the plants early in September. For Christmas blooming, leave them out a month later. Pick off all flowers remaining on the plants now. C. W.

TWENTY GOOD GERMAN IRISES.

My collection of irises now contains over 550 varieties, but I do not intend to propagate all of them. They are watched closely at blooming time, and of those that I consider extra good I increase my stock as fast as possible.

Avoid all manure in growing the German iris. Even to mulch with strawy manure may ruin the plants. One fall I mulched with strawy manure; the next season many of them rotted at the crown and the tops dropped off the roots. Some varieties are more susceptible to this trouble than others.

I will give a list of twenty good varieties, but of course there are many more good ones. I have bought new, high priced varieties, and generally they do not compare with many that have been on the market for a number of years. Here are some dependable sorts:

Atropurpurea,	Magnifica,
Aurea,	Mme. Chereau,
Celeste,	Mrs. Nubronner,
Darius,	Mme. Paquette,
Fairy,	Harlequin Milanais,
Dr. Bernice,	Parisiensis,
Gertrude,	Queen of May,
Her Majesty,	Jacquesiana,
Leonidas,	Silver King,
Mrs. H. Darwin,	Velveteen,

This list gives a wide range of color, and all are good.

Some claim that Silver King is the same as Florentina, but mine is better than Florentina, being a stronger grower and having larger flowers.

Velveteen and Judith are much alike. Cœrulea is one of the best of the pumila irises, a lovely shade of skyblue.

The Siberian irises are satisfactory. They do not have so wide a range of color as the German irises and are mostly shades of blue. Orientalis, intensely brilliant blue, Snow Queen, large ivory white, and Lady Godiva, blush white, flushed rose, are good.

LIQUIDS FOR ASPARAGUS.

Please state the correct quantity of each of the following substances to make 1,000 gallons of liquid for plumosus and smilax: Hard-wood ashes, Asparagus Fertilizer (pure bone and potash), Bon Arbor, blood, blood flour, bone flour, cotton-seed meal, cow manure from stable, dried cow manure, fish guano or dried fish, guano, dried hog manure, fresh hog manure, horse manure, sheep manure, hen manure, lump lime, nitrate of soda, salt, soot, tankage, tobacco stems, night soil, Nicot-fume, tobacco dust, Tobakine liquid and Worm Eradicator. C. B.

Several of the substances mentioned in the foregoing list are not adapted for use in liquid form, among these being wood ashes, cotton-seed meal, bone flour, fish guano, lime, tobacco dust and tankage.

The various kinds of stable manure mentioned may be used in the proportion of ten to fifteen bushels to 1,000 gallons of water, with the exception of hen manure, which is more concentrated and should not be used in more than one-half the quantity mentioned. Of pure guano a still smaller quantity would be required to give the proper strength. Bon Arbor and nitrate of soda should not be used stronger than one pound to fifty gallons of water.

The nicotine extracts mentioned are good insecticides in the proportion of one part of the extract to 300 parts of water. Probably salt could be used safely at the rate of twenty-five pounds to 1,000 gallons, but when using salt on smilax I have used it dry in small quantities and then watered it in.

A HUGE AGAVE.

The remarkable plant here illustrated, with its immense flower spike supported in the form of an arch, is a specimen of Agave attenuata, which belongs to the same genus as the century plant. The photograph was sent to The Review by William Hertrich, superintendent of the H. E. Huntington estate, at San Marino, Cal. It is Mr. Hertrich himself that occupies the center of the picture, his figure framed by the arching spike. Authorities state that the flower spike of Agave attenuata is sometimes six inches in diameter and from five to eight feet long, but the spike of the plant here shown, Mr. Hertrich says, was twelve feet long, and carried, after blooming, from 700 to 800 bulblets. The flowers are greenish yellow, slender and about two inches long.

Mr. Hertrich quotes a statement of Professor Bailey, to the effect that Agave attenuata has flowered only twice in the United States—in the Washington Botanical Garden in 1897 and 1898. As is well known, the agaves mature slowly and most of them, like the century plant, do not flower until they reach maturity, when they bloom once and then die. Others bloom more frequently and a few species are in flower every year.

The different species of agave vary greatly in size, from small, neat greenhouse plants to huge outdoor specimens, often unwieldy and difficult to handle. They are natives of hot, arid regions of America, but they readily show their appreciation of more favorable surroundings and are not difficult to grow. The soil should be principally loam and sand. Most of the large-growing kinds are easily propagated from suckers, but some are raised only from seeds.

DAHLIAS TOO ADVANCED.

I have a lot of dahlias which have been started in flats. They have grown extra rank. Would it be detrimental to flowering if they were cut back? Please state the best way to handle them. J. D. W.

The best plan will be to head back the dahlias and let them break away near the ground. You have started your plants rather too early. Another season plant them out without starting them at all under glass and they will do better. C. W.

NAME OF HYDRANGEA.

Will you please tell me the name of the enclosed hydrangea? M. B. C.

It is one of the new French hydrangeas, probably Mme. Mouillere. The flowers being faded, it is hard to tell exactly. C. W.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Mothers' day certainly has established its permanency as a flower day. Its influence was felt more widely this year than ever before and the carnation market especially was called on to respond to an increased demand. In fact, May 10 the supply of white carnations was entirely depleted. Prices remained at a reasonable level, even the best of the stock seldom selling at over $5 per hundred. In all other colors the regular rate of the week prevailed. Much heavier shipments and lower levels are predicted for the present week. The extremely hot weather has been followed by a cold wave, May 11 being the coldest May day in many years. There was a heavy frost in many of the outlying sections.

Apart from Mothers' day business last week was far from satisfactory. The general demand was not sufficient to absorb the daily arrivals and roses especially suffered in quality and value. The large buyers for the department store trade had the rose market at their mercy. Prices at times were cut to mid-summer quotations. Even American Beauties fell to half the levels of the preceding week. The supply is large and increasing. The same may be said of all varieties of roses, except a few of the specialties. Killarney, Maryland, Richmond, Bride and Maid bring less than half of their legitimate value.

The orchid market also is demoralized, owing to the oversupply of cattleyas. Lilies sold at low rates last week and valley also is meeting with a lighter demand. There is no surplus of the better grade of gardenias, but $2 per dozen is top price for the selected. There seems to be an unexpected supply of gladioli so early in the season and peonies began to arrive in quantity several weeks earlier than in 1912. There is no end to the lilac supply, and the price has fallen to unmentionable figures. Of sweet peas there is a great abundance, only the best grades meeting with any buying appreciation. The same may be said of daisies, tulips and stocks. Warmer weather is predicted for the east this week and wholesalers are not at all optimistic as to the outlook.

Club Meeting.

The May meeting of the New York Florists' Club was well attended, over 100 members being present when President Siebrecht took the chair.

The exhibits were limited — Eucomis punctata, by John Lewis Childs, who was accorded a vote of thanks, and the new dark red geranium, Maryland, by R. Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., which the club requested to be exhibited in pots at a later meeting.

For the entertainment committee, Chairman Weathered reported progress, and also reported for the emblem committee, announcing the acceptance of the design exhibited at the last meeting. The prices quoted were: Gold plate, 25 cents; rolled gold, 45 cents, and solid gold, $1.10. After some discussion by Messrs. Manda, Marshall, Schling and Pierson, the gold button was decided upon.

H. A. Bunyard, of the transportation committee, announced for those who will attend the Minneapolis convention a rate one way of $37.30, and a round-trip ticket for $55. A train leaving

New York at 12:40 noon on the preceding Sunday will arrive at the convention city early on Tuesday morning. The Chicago Florists' Club and the Cook County Florists' Association have extended courtesies to the New York club, and have suggested the union of its members with the Chicago boys, changing to their special on arrival in Chicago. Wallace R. Pierson and the president favor the boat trip to Duluth via Buffalo for those who can spare the time. Mr. Bunyard will give a final report at the June meeting, which will be the last until September. Chairman Kessler announced that over $300 in cash subscriptions already had been secured for the prizes at the club's outing, July 1.

P. O'Mara gave an encouraging address as to the building of the $50,000 greenhouses at Cornell, the bill having passed both houses at Albany and only awaiting the signature of Governor Sulzer. Mr. O'Mara urged every member to write the governor a personal letter in behalf of the enterprise.

The tariff bill at Washington was the subject of considerable discussion, Messrs. Scott, Vincent and O'Mara participating. Dissatisfaction was expressed with the wording of the amendments and the numerous contradictions. Mr. Vincent spoke of the efforts being made by Mr. Gude, of Washington, in behalf of the bill.

C. H. Totty's report of the National Flower Show showed receipts of $32,000 and disbursements of $30,000, leaving a balance of $1,000 each for the S. A. F. and the Grand Central Palace. The sum of $13,424 was received for rentals, and $7,635 was paid in premiums, not including cups and medals. There were over 40,000 paid admissions. A long discussion followed as to the wisdom of repeating the show in 1914. Both the Grand Central Palace Co. and the Madison Square Garden Co. are bidding for it. Preference seems general for collaborating with the Horticultural Society of New York, the value of its name being urged by Joseph Manda. F. H. Traendly also favored the repetition of the exhibition in 1914 and suggested that the prestige gained by the success this year should be utilized. Mr. O'Mara made a long and interesting address concerning the New York flower shows of the past, successful and otherwise, and gave an exhaustive history of the club's experiences in this line for over twenty years. The committee, with Mr. Totty as chairman, was continued, with instructions to report at the June meeting. A standing vote showed that the club is practically unanimous for holding a show in 1914.

Chairman Nugent, of the dinner committee, announced no deficit, and the committee was discharged with the thanks of the club.

Messrs. Adolph Goldenberg, A. E. Jackson, F. H. Poblos, Vincent Straktaus and A. N. Schneider were proposed for membership.

The members elected were: W. A. Maltus, Herman Brauch and Vivian L. Outerbridge, of New York city; Joseph Levy, Ernest Ulrich and Charles Huber, of Brooklyn; Harry F. Marquardt, Woodhaven, L. I.; Frank Grumbach, Jamaica, L. I.; A. M. Kirschner, Astoria, L. I.; Louis Enne, Flushing, L. I.; George Ehrle, Carlstadt, N. J.; John E. Sefton, Elizabeth, N. J., and John Watts, Greenwich, Conn.

James White, of Elizabeth, N. J., addressed the meeting and Mr. Vincent gave an interesting talk on affiliation and consistent and persistent effort.

A. C. Zvolanek's resignation was accepted with regret.

The death of the father of A. L. Don was announced and Messrs. Bunyard, Weathered and Sheridan were appointed to draft resolutions of sympathy with the bereaved.

The usual spread was provided by the house committee.

Various Notes.

At the New York Botanical Garden May 10 and 11 the influence of the National Flower Show was strongly in evidence in increased interest and attendance at the regular monthly exhibition. The principal prize winners were F. R. Pierson Co., Mrs. F. A. Constable, Mrs. A. M. Beoth, T. A. Havemeyer and Louis C. Tiffany. The exhibits were tulips, calceolarias, pelargoniums, wild flowers, shrubs and flowering trees.

C. H. Totty, chairman of the National Flower Show committee, gave a dinner to his lieutenants at the Martinique hotel, May 9. It was "some dinner," if all reports concerning it are correct. There were present Wm. Duckham, Harry Bunyard, Frank Traendly, Walter F. Sheridan and the host.

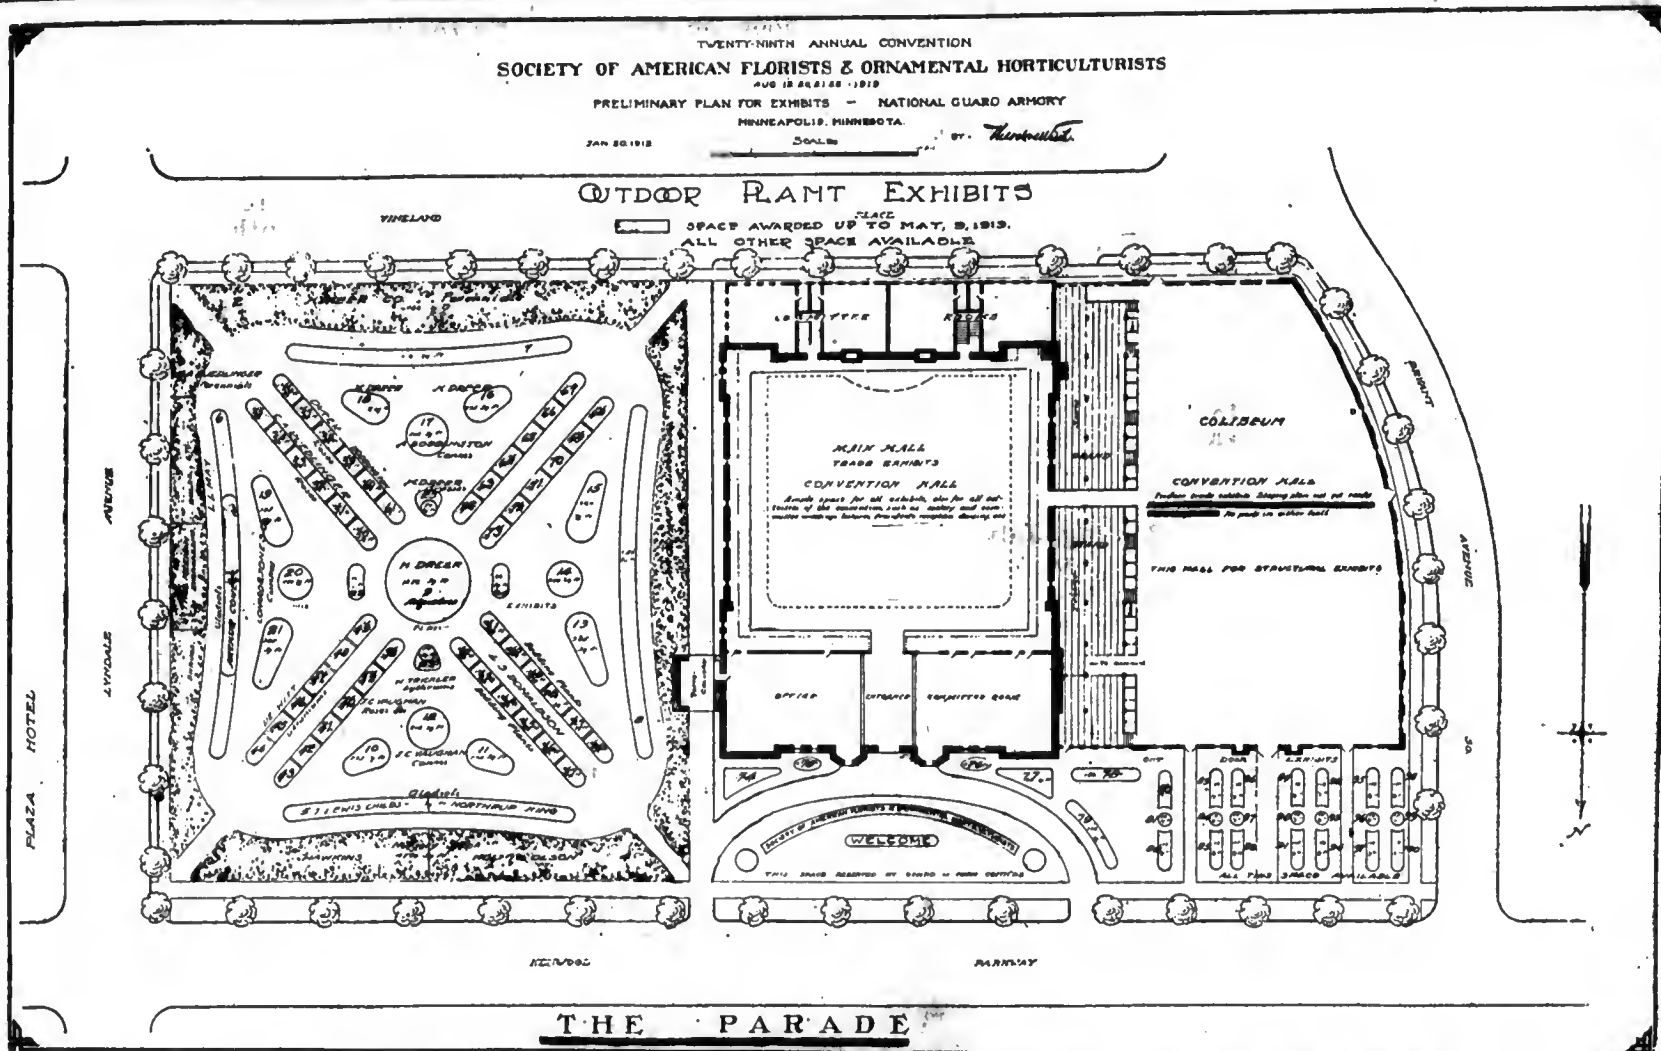

The Greek-American Florists' Association will have its annual outing July 9, at Wetzel's Grove. The New York Florists' Club will celebrate July 1, at the same place, going by boat as usual. Philip Kessler is chairman of the outing committee and reports the usual liberal provisions for prizes.

Judge Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., was a recent visitor.

His many friends will be glad to know of Harry Weston's recovery. J. J. Coan, manager of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., of which Mr. Weston is president, reports a great popularity for the new carnation, Majestic, which Mr. Weston will disseminate next season.

Wallace R. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., was in town last week.

The largest distribution of carnations for Mothers' day was made by John Ground Plan for the S. A. F. Trade Exhibits at the Minneapolis Convention Next August.

Wanamaker. Every customer May 10 was presented with a flower. The total purchase made by Wanamaker was 64,000, of which 20,000 were supplied by William Kessler. Prices ranged from $30 to $60 per thousand.

Victor Warendorff has returned from a long southern trip, which included Vera Cruz, Panama, Jamaica, San Diego, Isle of Pines, Havana, Key West and the Bahamas. Mrs. Warendorff, Sr., who has been quite ill for some weeks, is now convalescent.

An important rule made at the annual meeting of the New York Cut Flower Exchange last week provides that those renting space are prohibited from using any tables that may be unoccupied and must confine themselves to the number of square feet they pay for. Only one notice is to be given before canceling of a violated contract.

Frank Millang and family are spending their week ends at their farm in the Amawalk mountains, in Westchester county.

The death of A. L. Don, of Weeber & Don, is reported in this week's obituary column.

A. H. Langjahr is back at his headquarters after a severe attack of rheumatism.

The improvements on West Twenty-eighth street are progressing slowly, but the inconveniences caused by widening the street and cutting down the store fronts are lessening and when finished this busy floral thoroughfare will be one of the most attractive and popular streets in the city, with its wealth of color in almost every window.

J. Austin Shaw.

The eighty-second annual exhibition of the American Institute of the City of New York will be held in the Engineering building, 25 to 33 West Thirty-ninth street, September 23 to 25. Premiums will be awarded for dahlias, orchids, gladioli, roses, carnations, ornamental plants, fruits and vegetables. November 5 to 7 chrysanthemums, orchids, roses, carnations and other ornamental plants will be shown at the autumn exhibition.

THE LAST CALL.

Under separate cover I am sending The Review a print showing the space so far taken for the outdoor exhibit at the S. A. F. convention at Minneapolis, August 19 to 22. This print differs from the previous ones sent, inasmuch as it shows the ground plan of the convention halls and the outdoor exhibition space in front of the two buildings. This is the last time I will trouble you to publish a sketch of the garden, as planting time is now at hand and unless we get the exhibits between now and, say, June 10 it will be too late to plant for effect during convention week. I hope you will kindly grant my request and make use of this print.

Theodore Wirth, Chairman.

OBITUARY.

Alexander L. Don.

Alexander L. Don, the New York seed merchant, died May 8 at his home at Ridgewood, N. J., as the result of a somewhat prolonged illness with a complication of diseases.

Mr. Don was 58 years of age, a native of Brechin, Scotland. His training was in some of the representative Scottish seed houses and on coming to New York at the age of 21 years he became the agent for European seed firms. Over thirty years ago the firm of Weeber & Don was established and long since became one of the institutions of Chambers street. Mr. Weeber retired some years ago, but for the last fifteen years Mr. Don has had associated with him two sons, who will continue the business. Mr. Don has for many years been looked upon as one of the leading seedmen of the country and was universally respected.

The funeral services were held May 10 at Christ church, Ridgewood, and were largely attended, there being many flowers. Mrs. Don survives, with her two sons and three daughters.

E. G. Moore.

Elbridge G. Moore, aged 78 years, died May 1 at his home in Milford, Mass. He suffered a sunstroke in July, 1910, and never recovered from the effects. He had been a resident of Milford nearly fifty years, and had been a successful florist for thirty years, being the city's first grower. He was born in Raymond, N. H., the son of John and Abigail Moore. Before going to Milford he was in the lumber business with his father and brother in New Hampshire. He married Lucy A. Miller, who, with his brother William, survives him. The I. O. O. F. and G. A. R. conducted the funeral, May 4.

New Haven, Conn.—Ludwig Wolff has sold out his business at 158 Meadow street.

Council Bluffs, Ia.—Work is well under way in the rehabilitation of the 1,000-foot houses of the J. F. Wilcox Co., so seriously damaged in the Easter cyclone. The iron is being straightened and most of it is fit for use, some without even taking out of the roof. New woodwork has been shipped by the John C. Moninger Co., from Chicago, and the big houses will soon be in operation again.

Results bring advertising.

The Review brings results.

THE man who is prompt pay may well be critical of the stock he buys; the one who is slow pay seldom is.

The reports on Mothers' day indicate that through the country colored flowers were as easily sold as white.

It will be good news to the growers that a new nicotine insecticide is soon to be put on the market, called Nicotiana.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

No rose has enjoyed a better sale this season than has Mrs. Ward. It is one of the few varieties that realizes regularly a good price for the short stems, the reason being that the buds are favorites for corsage work.

MICHIGAN has two Mothers' days this year, the real one May 11, with the rest of the United States, and a sort of step-mothers' day May 18. It all came about through the governor of the state getting his dates mixed in his Mothers' day proclamation; he designated the third instead of the second Sunday in May and thereby caused much confusion, although nearly everybody recognized the nature of the mistake and observed the correct date.

If ever florists had reason to be pleased with the results of an attempt at publicity, they have reason to be satisfied with the business coming from their exploitation of Mothers' day. It was far ahead of 1912. The more florists advertise it, the more people come to know the meaning of the day, and the more general becomes the observance. Nothing but a disposition to rest on one's oars can prevent the day being one of the most important cut flower days on the calendar for 1914.

PRIMULA POISONING.

I noted in a recent issue of your valuable paper a reference to poisoning from Primula obconica, and the remedies suggested for it. Permit me to make an offering along that line. I have tried all the remedies generally suggested, but as a sure cure I can safely recommend hydrogen peroxide, which may be applied effectively either in the early or later symptoms of the poisoning.

I am particularly sensitive to this trouble, but as soon as I notice the irritation of the skin that follows contact with the plant, I use this remedy, and not more than two applications are needed to bring relief. I should think, judging from the well known antiseptic qualities of this medicine, that it would be especially adapted to cases that are more advanced.

W. Macaulay.

CLASSIFIED ADS CLEAN UP.

The Review published in last week's issue a few less than 1,000 classified ads. There are about the same number in this issue. Every week the ads are changing, but where changes are made they are necessitated, almost invariably, by the complete exhaustion of the advertised stock, and the advertisers, where they have anything else to sell, promptly substitute other ads. Readers of The Review have not read all of the news of the paper until they have read the Classified, and it is quite evident, by the results that are being procured for advertisers every day, that the 11,000 readers of The Review regularly consult the Classified. The growers who are wise know this. Hence the great volume of ads in this department. Each mail brings letters from satisfied advertisers, who praise The Review as a result-getter. Here are a few among the many received in the last week:

Muncie was flooded March 25, and I was flooded April 30 with a tremendous torrent of orders for my tomato plants, until that rushing stream, which lasted for three consecutive days, swept away every plant I had in my greenhouses; and they numbered into the tens of thousands. Telegraph orders came more than once from points a thousand miles away and more. And all of it came through The Review. You have no competitor. Every day's mail is piling up on my desk orders for more plants, but I am unable to supply them and have to send the money back and disappoint my patrons. The Review is to blame. Therefore please change my present classified to the one enclosed.—H. J. Potomkin, Muncie, Ind., May 2, 1913.

Discontinue our ad for salvias. We sold in one day 10,000, which were all we had. Enclosed find twenty cents in stamps for the ad.—Stuhldreher Bros., Mansfield, O., May 6, 1913.

Enclosed find stamps to cover my classified bill. Accept my thanks. The "little wonder" ads do the work. One insertion is all I should have used, as I am compelled to return money, being unable to fill all orders.—F. W. Goe, West Liberty, O., April 30, 1913.

Enclosed find check for ad service rendered, and please discontinue the ad, as we are completely sold out. We have disposed of nearly 100,000 carnation plants this spring, and we have today refused quite a number of orders. The plants were fine, but we think much of the success in moving so many of them was due to your valuable paper.—The Florex Gardens, North Wales, Pa., May 6, 1913.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Mothers' day business on this market was ahead of expectations and without a doubt the best since the event assumed its place as one of the important flower days of the year. With one accord the Chicago wholesalers report a large increase in the demand; in fact, the demand exceeded the anticipations of the most optimistic. With only a fair supply, it was found difficult to furnish as much stock as was called for. A change to unseasonably cold weather, following unseasonable heat, cut down production, but it did a great deal toward putting quality into the stock. There is this week considerable complaint as to the quality of the carnations shipped, but it is as nothing compared to what it would have been had the weather stayed hot. The principal demand was for carnations, especially white, and the local buyers readily paid prices higher than those at which the advance orders had been booked. Nevertheless, the tales of high prices paid for small lots of selected stock, or under the pressure of necessity, must not be accepted as the market price. Excellent prices prevailed, but it simply was

WE SHALL HAVE A LARGE SUPPLY FOR Memorial Day

QUALITY THAT EVERYONE ADMITS IS SECOND TO NONE.

Urge the early placing of Memorial Day Orders. It is so well known that Amling flowers are unexcelled in quality and that Amling service is unapproached for promptness, care and accuracy that a constantly increasing number of buyers look to us for their holiday supplies. Memorial day is one of our biggest days. At this season of the year what you receive is more important than what you pay. Amling prices always are right, but it is what you get rather than what you pay that is the measure of value. Order of Amling and there will be no regrets.

ROSES

We do not look for an extra large crop of roses for Memorial day, though we shall have a fair supply. Unless the weather turns unseasonably hot the quality will be especially good this year, for there never were finer roses than those we now offer. We have a full line.

CARNATIONS

Those who had Amling carnations for Mothers' day will not fail to have Amling carnations for Memorial day. A good many buyers who divided up their orders for Mothers' day will put the whole order in our hands for May 30. There are few sources of supply for the Amling grade of carnations.

PEONIES

You know, and we know, that there is a lot of difference in peonies. Good peonies are about as profitable as anything a retail florist can handle for Memorial day, while poor peonies often are a dead loss, not to mention the disappointment. We do not handle miscellaneous consignments of peonies. Our supply comes from a few sources that have proved dependable and which have been steadily enlarged. You can bank on the quality of the peonies you get from Amling. We believe we shall be able to fill every order for Memorial day.

SWEET PEAS

There are no sweet peas to compare with our Butterflies. And our supply is by far the largest in the middle west. All colors.

LILIES

We can supply fine Easter Lilies in large quantity every day in the year. Prices always reasonable.

SNAPS

Fancy long Snapdragon in all colors, but specially fine is the fancy pink—just the Killarney shade.

OUR FERNS ARE GOOD

There are plenty of Ferns in the country, but those in storage are spoiling fast, and no one wants the soft new stock while good stored stock is to be had. Our Ferns are good—never kept better. How many will you have?

a good, old-time stiff market, such as too seldom is seen nowadays. The rush started May 8, when the first shipping orders went out, and by May 9 the wholesalers were fairly swamped with the business that came in by wire and with each delivery of mail. Growers found it impossible to supply the necessary stock and prices began to stiffen. White carnations, being in greatest demand, felt the advance first, but white roses soon found an active market and it was not long before the prices received a tilt. White roses were fairly abundant, but there were not enough to satisfy the demand and buyers were forced to take anything else on hand. Saturday found the city buyers willing to pay the top prices in order to secure stock, and even on Sunday morning the market was hardly back to normal. All told, Mothers' day was a huge success. While the first call was for white carnations and, secondly, for white roses, when the white was not available the buyers took other flowers. In the end the market had the best clean-up it has known in months, a consummation credit for which the trade gives to the exploitation Mothers' day has been given in The Review.

This week opened with only light supplies and a fairly brisk market.

The weather, one day cool and one day warm, is favorable, holding production in check and maintaining quality. It is possible to procure anything one wants, but there is no surplus. Sweet peas are a little lower, due to an increased number of growers who are picking Butterflies, as the Spencer varieties are known locally. Spanish iris is less plentiful and outdoor tulips have practically displaced the greenhouse stock. Peonies are plentiful. Last week the good stock sold well, though there were numerous shipments that hardly deserved a sale at any price. This week the surplus of good peonies is going into storage for Memorial day, while the low-grade stuff is being sold for what it will bring. Cattleyas are more plentiful and cheaper. Lilac is about over, locally. A few small-flowered gladioli are seen. Ferns are advancing in price. Smilax is scarce.

Several Wholesalers Get More Space.

Zech & Mann announce a change of location to be made within the next two weeks, when that firm will move into more spacious quarters. The new home of the firm will be in the basement store formerly occupied by Poehlmann Bros. Co., at 30 East Randolph street, just across from the local quarders. The room now occupied by Zech & Mann will be taken by D. E. Freres. The latter is now on the same floor as Zech & Mann, sharing quarters with O. A. Tonner. It is understood that the Chicago Carnation Co., now in a room which adjoins the Freres-Tonner store, will throw the two rooms into one, thereby doubling its space. Whether O. A. Tonner will remain in the present quarters or go with Mr. Freres has not yet been decided, but the shift will give better facilities to all parties concerned.

Various Notes.

A. L. Randall reached home May 11 from his European trip, on which he visited all the principal sources from which florists' supplies are obtained.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., predicts that this will be the season when the peony will come in especially well for Memorial day. He predicts only moderate supplies of roses and carnations, but a plentiful supply of peonies.

At Winterson's Seed Store it is said that the approach of the close of the planting season can be seen in the falling off in counter trade.

O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., says the local lilacs are over, but that it will not be many days before some of the early peonies are ready to cut at Batavia.

C. W. McKellar reports that the Mothers' day demand exceeded his expectations.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., says that in their general satisfaction with the demand for Mothers' day the wholesalers forget that a short supply and high prices never make so good a total of sales as a large supply and moderate prices.

N. J. Wietor says that the buyers pick up Sunburst rose whenever they see it on the counter.

O. W. Frese, of Poehlmann Bros. Co., says he thinks there will be little difficulty in making clean sales on all stock cut between now and Memorial day.

Tim Matchen, sales manager for Peter Reinberg, says Mothers' day far exceeded his expectations and that white roses sold almost as well as white carnations.

The official report of the Florists' Club's meeting will be found in another column of this issue. T. E. Waters, chairman of the committee, states that the annual picnic will be held August 17.

Harry Manheim, with Hoerber Bros., says the education of the public regarding colored flowers for Mothers' day is not yet complete and points to the full-page story in the Sunday feature section of the Tribune as an example. The writer evidently had failed to read the advertisements in her own paper and made the white carnation the exclusive flower of the day.

"If Mothers' day continues its progress as a flower day it will soon be necessary to find some way to meet the demand," is the way Charles Erne, of Erne & Klingel, expresses himself. "Of course, the crops were not all on, but there is no question that there was a far larger demand than a year ago and fully double that of two seasons back."

According to John F. Kidwell, of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, the temperature went below 28 degrees on the evening of May 10, but so far no damage was done to peonies or other field stock, although some fruit trees were slightly nipped around the Wellworth Farm district.

W. J. Smyth reports an excellent April and a good start for May, with a fine run of funeral work. He now gets around without the use of a cane and his leg is almost as good as before his winter accident.

C. L. Washburn has some doubts as to whether the carnation crops will be on in time for Memorial day. "It all de-

OFFICIAL CLUB REPORT.

The Chicago Florists' Club held its regular meeting Thursday, May 8, at the Union restaurant, President French in the chair. A number of appeals from flood and storm sufferers were read, but no definite list of their requirements accompanied same. Arrangements were made to take care of them when the necessary information is received. The club also has taken up with the express companies the question of transporting such stock free of charge as may be given for the victims. Everyone is interested in this work and spoke highly of the practical way the club is handling this proposition.

The special committee appointed to represent the club in matters of publicity at the New York show gave an interesting report on the benefit derived by retailers and through them, of course, the wholesalers and growers, from the great amount of advertising exhibitors get at the flower shows, which seems to be one of the most effective ways of advertising.

The transportation committee reported that arrangements for a special train have been made with the Great Western R. R. Co., the best Pullman equipment to leave August 18. A number of letters were received from various clubs, stating that they will be pleased to join the Chicago Florists' Club special train at Chicago. An interesting itinerary will soon be sent out.

The good of the club committee has taken an active part in publicity. Chairman Waters promised some interesting items on publicity at our next meeting.

V. Niemitz, expert on horticulture of Russia, who has been traveling in our western states the last six months, was present.

The following applications for membership were received: W. H. Harris, room 618, 140 Dearborn street, Chicago; Clark T. Roberts, room 618, 140 Dearborn street, Chicago.

The Market.

Mothers' day helped the sale of carnations materially, white ones going especially well. If the local retailers would only push this a little more, it could be made quite a floral occasion. Roses, outside of a few varieties, are of rather slow sale and values have declined. Bulgaries are still popular; so are Beauties and Wards, but Killarneys are in excess of all demands. Carnations have been doing well and values have been satisfactory to the growers. It is some years since prices through April and the early part of May have been so good. Benora, Pink Delight and Gloriosa are favorites, but whites have been in strong demand of late.

Dutch bulbous stock is running out rapidly and, outside of Narcissus poeticus and late tulips, is practically over. Spanish iris is abundant and has been selling well, better than Gladiolus Blushing Bride, which is hard to move now. Good snapdragons, white and yellow marguerites and bachelor's buttons are going well. Valley continues druggy. Sweet peas have been on the toboggan and prices on these have been low. On some days no reasonable offer has been refused to make clearances. Cattleyas are moving fairly well and so are gardenias. The summer crop of these is starting to come in and prices will naturally take a tumble. For green goods the demand has been fair. Bedding plant trade is becoming active. Hydrangeas sell best among flowering plants.

Retail Florists' Club.

The Boston Retail Florists' Club held a meeting at the City Club, May 5, with a good attendance. On invitation there were present as guests Messrs. W. C. Stickel, George Cartwright and Andrew Christensen, of the Boston Flower Exchange; John McFarland and Edward Wood, of the Boston Coöperative Market, and E. Allan Peirce and William Welchans, of the Flower Growers' Sales Co. Henry Penn, the president of the club, was in the chair and a pleasant and profitable evening was spent in discussing the disposal of flowers and plants, from the point of view of the growers, retailers and wholesalers.

On a recent call at the Harvard Botanic Gardens a fine display of Darwin and other late flowering tulips was noted. The hardy borders were attractive and the greenhouse stock was all in fine shape.

William Robb, a well known practical gardener, for many years in charge of the gardens and greenhouses at the Boston City hospital, died May 3 and was interred May 5. The funeral services were held at his late home on Evelyn street, Mattapan. President Kennedy and others, representing the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, of which Mr. Robb had long been an active member, were among those present. A beautiful design from the club, of galax and roses, was included among the numerous floral tributes.

J. W. Simpson, of Reading, remains one of the kings among yellow marguerite growers. He is cutting over 12,000 long-stemmed flowers weekly, and their size amazes many growers.

E. J. Ahern, of Wellesley, is now a heavy shipper of English primroses,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The behavior of the weather has been outrageous. Just on the day when all the gardeners agree that it is perfectly safe to take tender plants from the greenhouses and frames and plant them outside, just on that day, I say, it froze! There was ice in Darby; there was ice in Lansdowne; there was ice at Chestnut Hill; there was ice in Moorestown. The tender shoots hung over; the edges of the leaves were blackened; there will be a crop of yellow leaves that will go to the heart of the man who takes pride in his profession. The extraordinary spell of cold weather came from the west. It was preceded by unusually hot weather and is now leaving. All this has made the difficulties unusual in the cut flower market. Carnations were not nearly so plentiful during the week ending May 14 as they seemed likely to be. The hot weather hurt them and thrips did harm in many of the houses. Then the cold weather checked production.

Many of the growers had no fire heat. Prices for Mothers' day advanced to $10 per hundred for select white (they had to be extremely fine to bring that price), while fancy colored brought from $4 to $5 per hundred. There were not nearly enough, particularly of the white, to go around. Roses were so plentiful that, though many were sold at satisfactory prices, there was an oversupply.

Mothers' day was the event of the week. It was more generally observed than ever before. The retailers awoke to the necessities of the case and urged the use of colored carnations with the white, and of other flowers, too.

Roses were often used when carnations could not be obtained. One house bought and distributed nearly 50,000 flowers one by one. Of these 35,000 are believed to have been carnations. The rest were roses.

Really fine sweet peas have been short of the demand all through the week. Callas are fast disappearing. Easter lilies are scarce. Snapdragon is overplentiful. Both cattleyas and gardenias have shortened in supply. The demand for southern peonies is light and prices are declining. Well-colored iris is good stock; not so the dull colors. Asparagus sprays are in

CARTHAGE, MO.

A miniature cyclone struck one of Stephen Hyde's greenhouses during the rain storm May 5, tore it up and carried it away. The demolished greenhouse was 30 x 300 feet in size and the loss totals some $3,000 or $4,000, counting the cost of repairing the other greenhouses to which this one was attached.

The other greenhouses were not touched by the wind directly, showing to what narrow lines the force of the wind was restricted. There were four houses, all of the same size, ridge and furrow style, with no partition walls between them. When the wind tore the one section away from between the others, the latter were naturally much wrenched, because they had all been joined together. The whirlwind came from the south and seemed to move directly north in traversing the length of the narrow glass building which it destroyed, but as it passed on it veered slightly to the northeast and rose as it moved on, doing no damage after leaving the Hyde grounds. It scattered glass for a thousand feet in its course north of the greenhouse, some of the panes of glass alighting unbroken that far from where they had been torn away. The demolished house was used for lettuce beds, Mr. Hyde having done a big business in shipping lettuce. No one was in the destroyed building at the time the wind struck it, but several workmen were busy in the adjoining

ST. LOUIS.

The Southwestern Market.

The market was in a much overcrowded condition in the early part of the week and all seasonable stock was abundant, with the prices somewhat lower than in the week previous. In the latter part of the week the wholesalers put the price up several notches, especially on carnations, when the trade began to lay in a supply for Mothers' day business. The price of carnations during the first three days of the week was as low as $7.50 per thousand, but afterward there was a jump to $5 per hundred. Roses also went up a few cents. These are plentiful, especially Killarneys and Richmonds. Long Beauties sold fairly well, with the supply equal to the demand.

Valley sold well, owing to the many weddings during the week. The supply was large and of extra good quality. Sweet peas had a large call during the week and the big supply that comes in daily from Kirkwood was cleaned up pretty well each day at low prices.

Peonies are in, and the first of them were cleaned up at once at $5 per hundred. American gladioli are fine, though there are not many in as yet. These sell quickly at good prices. The price of miniature gladioli fell somewhat, owing to the increased supply. Iris, lilac, snowballs and valley are among the outdoor flowers arriving.

retailers, Mothers' day business was ahead of last year, though some say the sudden advance in the price of carnations drove a great deal of trade away.

Club Meeting.

The May meeting of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held Thursday afternoon, May 8, in Odd Fellows' hall, but was poorly attended, owing to the fact that this is the busy planting month for most of our regular attendants. When President Weber opened the meeting there were fifteen present.

Chairman Ossiek, of the trustees, reported on the annual outing of the club for July, and all the arrangements as to place and date of the outing were left in the hands of the club's trustees.

A letter from President Farquhar, of the S. A. F., was read, in which he stated that he had appointed Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., as state vice-president for eastern Missouri. Mr. Denker was present at the meeting. Dr. Geo. T. Moore, director of the Missouri Botanic Garden, sent the club an invitation to hold its June meeting at the garden. The invitation was accepted with thanks. Letters were also read from the Cook County Florists' Association and the Chicago Florists' Club, inviting the members to travel on their special to Minneapolis for the August meeting of the S. A. F. These invitations were ordered turned over to State Vice-President Edwin Denker, who has the transportation in charge.

Applications for membership were received from Hugo M. Schaff, head gardener for the board of education, and James F. Fox, of the Fox Clay Pottery Co. Four delinquent members were dropped from the rolls of membership.

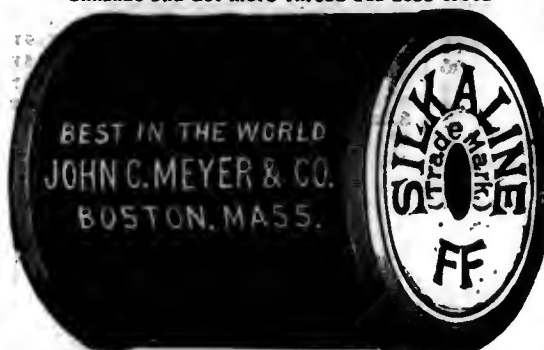

The question box brought out some good discussions. The query that brought out the best argument was, "Does the Selling of Plants and Flowers by Department Stores Hurt the Florists?" In this debate C. E. De Wever took a leading part.

The next meeting of the club will take place on Thursday afternoon, June 12, at the Missouri Botanic Garden, when a special effort will be made by the officers of the club to bring out the largest attendance of the year.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

Mothers' day trade practically cleaned up the local market. At a recent special meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club, a sufficient sum was voluntarily subscribed to advertise Mothers' day, and the publicity committee used space in all of the local daily papers, as well as the leading weekly.

Business, as far as Mothers' day was concerned, amounted to little until late Saturday afternoon, the bulk of the orders coming in Saturday evening. The orders were chiefly for cut flowers and not many ran over $2 per order. Carnations were mostly in demand, and the call for red was exceedingly heavy. Monday morning found the market well cleaned up, with a marked scarcity of stock all day.

Various Notes.

E. A. Feters' touring car was stolen the night of May 1, and when found by the police on the following day the fenders were badly damaged.

E. J. Hall, representing Wertheimer Bros., spent the first part of the week in the city.

Many appropriate Mothers' day windows were seen here, and as usual the retailers who made this effort were repaid. H. S.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

The Market.

We have had a cool week, but the weather has been clear. There was a heavy frost May 9; in fact, it made ice. No reports have been received of any damage to vegetation. It is getting extremely dry and rain is badly needed. Most of the growers have had to water carnations in the field. Stock is more plentiful than it has been for several weeks, but trade has kept up with the increase in stock and business is generally good. Mothers' day was quite an event with the trade; in fact, it was a small Easter, the only unfortunate thing being that white carnations were not plentiful. The wholesalers were compelled to ask extremely high prices to keep down the demand, make the supply meet it and try to force the sale of other stock.

The retailers are all busy, but, as Mothers' day customers are usually small buyers, it is doubtful whether they appreciate the day as much as the wholesalers; however, their business must show a largely increased volume. This is the only day in the year when people will pay the same price for a fine carnation as they are willing to pay for a medium grade rose.

A Visit to Salem, O.

V. A. Cowgill, of Salem, O., was the host, May 7, of a party of florists who invaded his town at his invitation. They were met at the train with automobiles and visited some of the greenhouses of Wallace Pettit, who has 35,000 feet of glass, all devoted to vegetables except a block of sweet peas about ten feet high, just coming into bloom. The party went from there to Joseph E. Bonsall's new place, which is planted with vegetables. Mr. Bonsall will be remembered by many as one of the large smilax shippers for years. He is the man who used to grow summer roses in houses without heat, closing them in the winter and going to Florida.

From there the trip was made to the home of Mr. Cowgill, where the party was introduced to Mrs. Cowgill and the baby, after which Mrs. Cowgill invited all to dinner. Those seated were: Geo. W. Smith, president of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange; L. L. Lamborn, of Alliance, O.; Mr. Kyle, foreman for Charles Peterson, of East Liverpool; Harry Walther, of Youngstown; Jos. E. Bonsall, of Salem; J. R. Cowgill, of Canton; O. W. Bundy and F. J. Meyerhofer, foremen for Mr. Cowgill; W. A. Clarke, of the Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co.; Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Cowgill, the baby and the elder Mr. Cowgill.

After a feast and a big cigar, served by the baby, we went through Mr. Cowgill's plant, which was formerly owned by Jos. E. Bonsall, and still has those houses of Kaiserins grown without artificial heat. He also grows, besides stock for cut flowers, a general assortment of plants for his retail trade, which is quite extensive.

A flying trip was made by trolley to Alliance, O., to see the L. L. Lamborn place, where there are about 200,000 feet of glass devoted to Beauties and other roses, carnations, sweet peas and lilies. Everything here was in fine shape and all that an up-to-date cut flower establishment should be; only cut flowers are produced. The force was just about to get the carnations into the field.

The automobiles were again called into service, and after a ride about the country the party was taken to one of the business men's clubs for supper. Everybody spent a good day, among good fellows, and it will be long remembered. Clarke.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The market is certainly having its ups and downs this spring. First the flood put a decided damper on business and now comes a street car strike which is more or less seriously affecting business. Fortunately, however, the strike has not affected shipping business.

Mothers' day proved good, at least for the wholesale houses. They cleaned up on everything that was worth while. The heavy call was, of course, for carnations. The supply was large, but the demand was so great that everything sold easily at one and one-half times or twice the price of the preceding week.

There is a good supply of roses. No one of the seasonable varieties is really scarce and the quality is excellent. The supply of Easter and calla lilies is somewhat limited, but there is no special demand. There is plenty of indoor valley, but it cannot compete with the outdoor stock. Orchids have been selling fairly well. The good sweet peas find an easy market, but the trouble is that not many of them are really good. Snapdragons still meets with an excellent call. Some good outdoor tulips are coming in. The German iris meets with a small demand. Peonies are now coming into the market regularly.

Various Notes.

E. G. Gillett, who with B. P. Critchell is a trustee of the Flower Market, reports that all stands are engaged for the ensuing year and that about all the standholders have paid their rent for the time.

C. E. Critchell offered the first peonies in the market this year. They were from the south. He is also receiving gladioli from the same point.

PRIZE ESSAYS SUGGESTED.

Mr. Jenkins, in his paper before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, of Boston, an extract from which was printed in The Review for May 8, is quite right in his assertion that a more scientific training would be of material benefit to the practical gardener and florist. We heartily agree with him, but can we all obtain a scientific training at a state horticultural college? Some of us there are who would give almost anything for such a training, even to sacrificing the whole of one's leisure to gain such an end, but circumstances only too often hold the controlling reins on our ambitions. We are unable to get the much coveted knowledge through the horticultural colleges, and many of us are employed on growing establishments quite out of touch with a florists' society of any kind. Hence we are inclined to heave a sigh of regret and let matters slide easily along until it is too late.

The gardener or superintendent of the future has certainly a keener competition for the premier places than had his present brothers, so it is up to them to do something to increase their knowledge and become eligible for such positions, irrespective of the horticultural college.

At the recent National Flower Show the N. G. A. were to consider a movement whereby the young gardeners and florists could be assisted in increasing their knowledge, with a view to improving their positions in the gardening world. Whether the consideration of this matter resulted in anything material the writer does not know, but feels sure that such an important matter should not be left unconsidered.

As one of the rising generation of gardeners, I would like to suggest that all young men under 30 years of age be invited to write articles on the various phases of horticulture and that such be judged by a committee of competent judges, to be appointed by the N. G. A.; and the three winning articles each week be published in The Review. I would suggest that criticism be offered by the judges, for criticism is the soul of progress, on the articles which they do not think would be good practice.

Most young men require some inducement to try this kind of thing, so in order to make it more attractive I would suggest that a nominal prize be given for the three best essays.

I have only roughly outlined this scheme, as no doubt it could be improved upon if put into practice, and as a suggestion it is given for what it is worth.

PAGES OF RETAILERS' CARDS

THIS department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

Florists' Publishing Co.,
 Chicago, Ill.
 Gentlemen:

During the past year I paid you $18.20 for a half inch advertisement in the Retail Florists Department of The Review. I received through this small advertisement, from January 1, 1912, to December 31, 1912, orders to the amount of $566.00. They came by mail and telegraph from New York to San Francisco and from New Orleans to Minneapolis. Since I allowed the senders 20%, the record is as follows:

Total value of orders	$566.00
Less 20% allowed senders,	113.20
Net value of orders	452.80

Here is an addition of $452.80 in business which could not otherwise have been obtained and at an expense of only $18.20.

Since my advertisement appeared only in The Review it goes to show what the retail florists through the country lose if they do not use this medium of advertising. It also goes to show that The Review is not only there with a big "R" but that it has three more big "R's" - Readers - Reliability - Results!

Yours respectfully,

Again our growers were fortunate in having a full crop just at its height for Mothers' day and for Decoration day sales. Mothers' day was never made so much of here before. Several of the leading churches held special services in its honor, and it was well advertised on the street cars and in the press. White carnations were abundant, as well as the other colors. There has been no time this season when there were more good carnations. Early commencements promise to clear up everything promptly.

We are in the middle of our black-berry winter, and May 10 the temperature came dangerously near the freezing point, although there seemed to be no trace of frost. The spring thus far has been excessively dry, so dry, in fact, that many of the peony buds are drying up rather than opening. There will be nothing like the large supply of peonies that there was last season. All colors are quite plentiful in the shops at present, and are bringing good prices. They are conspicuous by their absence in the department stores and drug stores thus far. The call for bedding plants continues heavy, although it is so dry that many growers are holding off a little before planting. There will be a shortage on salvia again this year. There never have been so many really high class hanging baskets sold as this season.

The seed business is pretty well over for this season. A visit to the two leading seedsmen this week found neither of them particularly busy, their heaviest demand being for cow peas and soy beans at wholesale. They report an enormous demand for tomato plants this season, and, as many of those plants have been lost by the drought, the calls for replant orders continue heavy. The turnip seed crop promises to be heavy. It is past all danger now, as it will be ready for harvesting within a week or ten days. The dry weather seems to have favored it. On the other hand, there promises to be a shortage of some of the field seed crops, especially winter turf oats, which is an important item with southern seedsmen.

Various Notes.

Geny Bros. have purchased a 300-foot greenhouse, which should arrive any day and will be set up at once. This is to be erected at the new place, and the old place will be gradually removed. They report an exceptionally good business the last week or ten days. Their carnations are producing the heaviest crop of the season. Their silver pink snapdragons are proving popular. Mr. Geny made a floral street car for a motormen's supper, that was quite unique and attracted considerable attention from customers before it was delivered.

Prompt Attention Given to Out-of-town Orders

Carnations are better than ever and the white ones brought a good price on Mothers' day. Cut spiræas are selling well and make a good combination with pink and red flowers of all kinds. Spencer sweet peas are coming into this market in larger quantities now and are bringing a big price. A few Spanish irises are seen here and there. Snapdragons have fallen off somewhat in the public favor. Baby gladioli are with us again.

Mothers' day was larger than ever in the scope of its trade. The fact that the Peoples' Institute had a sale of carnations and other flowers on the Saturday preceding seemed to make business greater instead of interfering with the florists' sales. Great quantities of all kinds of flowers were sold, regardless of the prevailing sentiment that the white carnations alone were the proper flowers for the day.

Various Notes.

The clergymen of this city have taken action upon the discontinuance of Sunday funerals and the closing of florists' stores on Sunday and have drawn up a petition, which was signed by nearly all the florists and undertakers. The result will be known soon.

Wm. Schlatter & Son report that business has been excellent during April and early May.

During May there will be a special exhibit, in the art room of the city library, of the formal landscape gardens of England, Scotland, Italy and America. It consists of plates, many of which are taken from "Formal Gardens in England and Scotland" and "The Art of Garden Design in Italy," both by Harry Triggs. Several distinct types of the American gardens are shown, including the sunken garden and the tea and water gardens.

Meacham & Hassell are kept quite busy with spring business of all kinds. They had an attractive Mothers' day window.

M. Aitken is doing a great deal of funeral work at present, as well as attending to a large share of other trade. He has just returned from a business

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

Victorville, Cal.—M. V. Brown has sold his business at Los Angeles and has moved here.

Reno, Nev.—Fred Fisher, formerly in the trade here, has formed a partnership with G. C. McDonald and the two have opened a store under the firm name of The Reno Florists.

Eugene, Ore.—Mrs. C. C. Brawner, who recently moved here with her husband from Huron, S. D., has purchased from G. R. Lawrence the business of the Rex Floral Co., and has taken possession.

Ashland, Ore.—Miss Ethel Davenport and Roy Walker have purchased from Leonard Lawson his 11½-acre fruit ranch. Mr. Lawson, seeing no opportunity to establish a florists' business in the west, has returned to Rockford, Ill., where he was formerly in business.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

The less said about business this week the better. Outside of funeral work there is not much doing, and stock keeps coming along in too large quantities to be disposed of. Transient business is dull, for everybody here has a garden of some kind and the cemeteries are covered with flowers evidently of the house garden order. Good quality stock sells better than poor, but there is too much even of that. Sweet peas are the best sellers in the smaller flowers, though the bright blue cornflower has cleaned up fairly well. The Spanish iris is about over, while the early gladioli are just coming in. Some peonies are seen, but people here do not know them and the demand is not great. Outdoor carnations hardly pay the cost of gathering, owing to the large number of indoor ones on the market. Cecile Brunner roses are a glut and are left on the plants. Indoor roses are still fine in quality, but there is no great demand for them. Valley is plentiful. Boston ferns are scarce in salable sizes, and even small stock is difficult to obtain.

Various Notes.

M. N. Jones, of San Diego, was to have spoken on "The Truth About Spineless Cactus" at the meeting of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society, May 6, but he failed to put in an appearance. This gave P. D. Barnhart and Dr. Houghton the opportunity to air their supposed grievances against a well known "wizard," who need not be named. Being election night, the attendance was small. J. M. Grant acted as secretary in the absence of H. W. Kruckeberg.

G. E. Miller, of Hollywood, is a young grower and one who has great success with the plants he handles, principally bulbous stock, roses, cannas and dahlias. His Spanish iris has been particularly good.

The Killarney roses at Speakman & Dille's place are extra fine just now, and the plants are making an elegant growth. Valley is also in fine order here. They are throwing out My Maryland this year to make room for Radiance.

Dieterich & Turner continue to ship large quantities of young rose stock all over the country. Preparations for the new greenhouse, 60x600 feet, are well under way.

Fred Hills is covering part of his new land with a lath house for Asparagus plumosus. The fern houses are in fine order, and the cut is good. Mr. and Mrs. Hills both take considerable pleasure out of their new touring car and they richly deserve all that is coming their way.

H. S. Morton, of Long Beach, and A. Falkenhayn have gone into partnership in the nursery business and are building a large lath house. Mr. Morton retains his retail store.

Geo. Watson is sending in between 3,000 and 5,000 carnations a day and his 65,000 field plants look fine.

Reeve Darling has taken the basement under his store and fitted it up as a workroom.

Anton Soethout and W. Childs work hand in hand at the Hollywood Nurseries, and have excellent stock in all lines, including fine imported conifers and boxwoods. Quite a large piece of land has been added to the nursery and planted, and an office and retail store are contemplated. Mr. Soethout proposes taking a trip to Holland shortly to look after his interests there.

At the Ferndale Nurseries I found William Grosser suffering from an abscess on his neck, this resulting from an insect bite. Stock is on hand for planting the new rose house.

J. W. Wolters had the decorations for a dance and dinner at the exclusive Midway County Club at Pasadena, May 8. Irises, hydrangeas and peonies were the principal flowers used. Fred Dostal was in charge.

W. Bridgport, of Eagle Rock, is sending in fine peonies, much the best coming to this market.

The stock shown at Wright's Flower Shop has been exceptionally fine of late, and, while feeling the slackness in trade somewhat, the force is kept busy. The gardenias shipped in from the Gardena plant are good.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.The Market.

A slight sprinkling of rain during the week has done much toward freshening the landscape, and a few more showers are needed. Flowers of all kinds are still plentiful, and from all indications will be so for some time to come. Inside carnations and roses are good and cheap. With the possible exception of fancy Beauties, the market is oversupplied. Tulips are practically over for the season. Spanish and other irises are now at their best and, though the stores are well supplied, most of the stock is fairly well cleaned up. Sweet peas are better than they have been at any time this year. It is not likely, however, that they will be as plentiful as they were last season, on account of the shortage of moisture everywhere. Violets are over completely. Gladioli of the smaller sorts are now in season, but of the larger varieties only a few are being brought into town. Coreopsis, gaillardias and other outside annuals have commenced to be a factor in the line of cheap flowers and the street hucksters are making good use of them. Lilac and fruit blossoms are on the wane and a few more days will end them. Valley is not plentiful. Easter lilies and orchids are in sufficient quantity to fill all requirements.

Various Notes.

Mrs. J. Scannivino has been elected president of the California State Floral Society for the coming year.

James Lee, formerly with the H. M. Sanborn Co., of Berkeley, is now connected with the Symacopulos Bros., on Broadway, Oakland, Cal.

A visit to the houses of J. A. Carbone, at West Berkeley, shows a splendid stock of orchids on hand. Several SEATTLE, WASH.

The Market.

Flowers of all kinds are scarce and the demand good. Carnations are scarcer than for many years at this season and the supply of white for Mothers' day was inadequate; so many growers discarding carnations for cucumbers this season has had a tendency to decrease the supply. Roses are arriving in fair quantity and are being used up as fast as they come in. The late flowering tulips are selling well, and double narcissi are in good demand. The sale of geraniums and other bedding stock is good. The continued dry weather has retarded planting considerably.

Various Notes.

The Mount Baker Park Improvement Club has issued its schedule of this year's rose show, which is to be held in the park June 14 and 15. A much larger show than last year is expected, and arrangements are being made for twice as much space.

H. E. Rasmussen spoke at the Mount Baker Park Improvement Club's meeting May 7, advocating a joint rose show for the whole of Seattle. His remarks were received with attention, but no action was taken and none will be until after this season's show.

Visitors to the government bulb farm at Bellingham are returning with glowing accounts of the appearance of the plants at this institution.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business conditions last week were satisfactory, although there is not a great deal going on socially. Mothers' day helped materially to clean up the stock, especially carnations, while the demand locally was disappointing. The shipping trade is what used up the surplus. Prices on carnations advanced slightly. Spring flowers are rapidly passing out of the market. Carnations and roses are coming in heavily and of excellent quality. Beauties are giving a heavier cut than at any time this season, with form and quality in accordance. Iris, snapdragon and lilac give a variety of stock. Cattleya Mossiae is plentiful, with a slight demand. There is a general scarcity of blooming plants. Hydrangeas, bougainvilleas and myosotis are about all that are to be had.

Various Notes.

Paul Riegelmann says he is satisfied with the results of his pansy beds. There has been a heavy call for his stock, which moved at good prices.

Rhododendrons, Azalea mollis and magnolias are blooming in the yards and parks.

D. MacRorie, while visiting here last week, spent some time fishing for salmon with William Martin. He carried a 20-pounder back to San Francisco to show his friends what his luck was.

Pacific Coast advertisers almost invariably report good results. Like this:

Please cut out of our advertisement in The Review the cyclamen seedlings. We sold all our surplus cyclamen seedlings as a direct result of our advertisement in your paper.—Spokane Greenhouses (Inc.), Spokane, Wash.

We want to say that our last advertisement in The Review brought us orders from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. We had, strangely enough, on following days, orders from Salem, Ore., and from Salem, Mass.—State Floral Co., North Yakima, Wash.

We are well pleased with the results obtained by advertising in the Pacific Coast Department of The Review. We sold out clean and refused many orders. The Review surely gives results.—Van Slyke & Seamons, Tacoma, Wash.

A WASHINGTON RANGE.

The accompanying illustration shows the establishment of the Walla Walla Hothouse Vegetable Co., Walla Walla, Wash., of which F. E. Mojonnier is the proprietor. There are nine houses in the range, two of King material being each 40x250 and six of Moninger material each 15x250. The ninth house is the dark rhubarb house at the right in the illustration, 18x250. The market is a broad one, the output being sold by the Walla Walla Produce Co., in which Mr. Mojonnier also is the controlling factor. Walla Walla is a city of about 25,000 inhabitants and the field covers a radius of some 700 miles, the demand being so much ahead of the supply that the addition of thirteen more 250-foot houses now is under contemplation. Thus far cucumbers, tomatoes and lettuce have been the principal crops, but in the course of time cut flowers and plants are almost sure to be grown.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.Department of Plant Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that Albert A. Sawyer, of Forest Park, Ill., offers for registration the following aster:

Name: Sawyer Asterum.

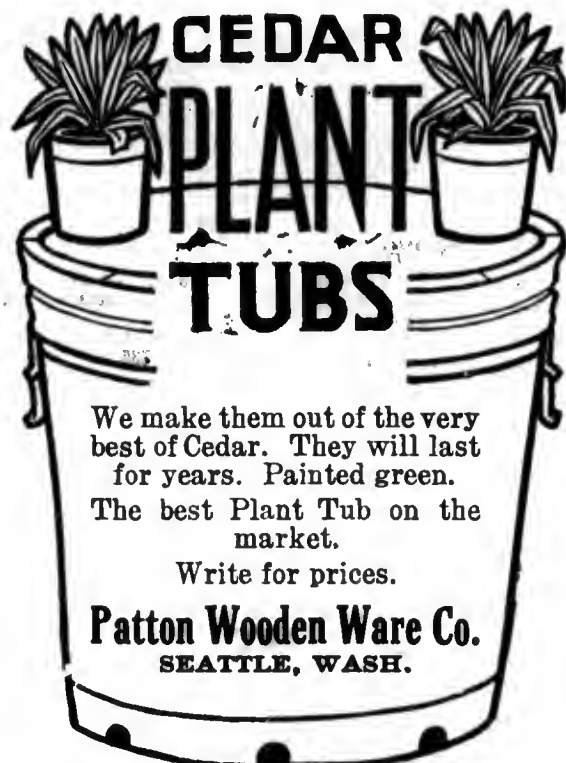

Description: During the summer of 1904 I caught a sport among my asters, having a beautiful shade of lavender, and from it, by careful selection, I have produced the Sawyer Asterum in the three colors, lavender, pink and white. The blossoms are on the order of the Hohenzollern, but the petals are much longer and thicker in bloom, making a good shipper. In contrast, however, to the Hohenzollern, the blooms of the Asterum are produced on a plant of upright growth, sending straight up strong, long stems, and is not a branching variety. For this reason I claim it is original with me, owing to its remarkable resemblance to many varieties of chrysanthemums.

Date: April 25, 1913.

(Signed)

Albert A. Sawyer.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-first annual convention at Cleveland, June
24 to 26, 1913.

DRY weather in Wisconsin is reported to have retarded the peas.

To get a farmer to plant peas this season required some tall talk—but there are plenty of tall talkers in the seed trade.

How many good crops, if we ever get them, will it take to put the situation as regards peas back where it was prior to three years ago?

D. B. GURNEY, of the Gurney Seed Co., Yankton, S. D., states that his company will erect greenhouses this summer and do a general cut flower and plant trade in the future.

PRESENT indications are that French bulb prices will rule about the same as last year except on Roman hyacinths and, possibly, large sized freesias, which will be a little higher.

THE New York seed houses still are exceedingly busy with counter trade, though mail order business has run down to such a point that night work no longer is necessary.

THE Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, has issued a booklet, entitled "Dickinson's Hand Book on Farm Seeds," that is one of the most complete in its line. It deals largely with field and grass seeds.

THE historic Astor House, on lower Broadway, New York, is to be closed May 29, and demolished to facilitate the construction of a subway. It will not seem like the old town to our Holland friends next season, we fear.

THE death of Alexander L. Don, proprietor of Weeber & Don, New York, is recorded in this week's obituary column. The business will be continued by Mr. Don's two sons, who have been in the business with their father for a number of years.

IN this column the trade frequently has been cautioned that it was unwise to book orders for hyacinth bulbs except subject to advance in duty. And the first step toward an advance in duty of 400 per cent has been taken, at the instigation of the Treasury Department.

FRANK H. COLE, advertising manager of Peter Henderson & Co., New York, gave emphasis, in a recent address, to the fact that the farm papers as a class are now operated along high standard lines. The seed trade is giving the agricultural press a constantly increasing part of the advertising appropriation, and cutting down on the big general magazines.

THE official printed copy of the pending tariff bill as it passed the House May 8 does not agree in all particulars with the report of the House amendments printed last week. The most important differences are that unenumerated greenhouse stock is left at twenty-five per cent instead of being included with nursery stock at fifteen per cent, and that there is no age limit on the coniferous evergreen seedlings admitted free. The trade's paragraphs, reprinted from an official copy of the bill as it now stands, are shown on page 25.

LATEST GRASS SEED FIGURES.

Statistics of grass seeds produced in the United States in 1909, just available, show that the total production amounted to 6,671,348 bushels, valued at $15,137,683, which represents an increase of 84 per cent over the value in 1899. The grass seeds grown in 1909 constituted 0.3 per cent of the total value of farm crops reported for that year. The figures for 1899 show a production of 4,865,078 bushels, valued at $8,228,417. The acreage of grass seeds grown in 1909 is not reported, for the reason that in most cases it would involve duplication of the acreage reported for the grasses themselves under hay and forage crops.

The statistical tables published herewith show the production and value by states, and the production and value of the varieties by geographic divisions. Considered as a group, the West

MARKETED IN FULL DRESS

Side growth gracefully tapers from one inch at the flower to three and four inches at base of stem, which adds sufficient green for a well finished bouquet. Buy Silver Pink and have all that is good in snapdragons.

Silver Pink is now growing in a number of foreign countries, carried there by its record and influence, which are safe, sane leaders. A good article is always imitated even to the use of its name. But the beautiful light, silvery shade of pink alone will hold Silver Pink in position. Other pink shades will have a limited use, but, as in the carnation, the one that pleases the public will remain. Recall the Lawson and all kindred shades of carnations. They have passed and the buyer is still calling for the light, daybreak shades. The buyer, governed by the public, rules the situation and will ever do so. Don't spend your time and money trying to break this law. The people buy what they want, hence the great popularity of SILVER PINK—the pioneer commercial snapdragon.

DON'T DELAY SOWING SEED for fall and winter blossoms. Price of seed, my own growing. $1.00 per pkt. of over 500 seeds; 3 pkts., $2.50, cash. Potted plants July and August delivery.

CURRENT TOPICS

My Original Silver Pink Snapdragon has been sold and exhibited in all of the leading markets, but not at any recent show. Show prizes on snapdragons have but little value at present. There are no rules governing the judging, and a tail-end variety in one show can easily be a winner in another show. This fact has and will keep out exhibitors, as noted in the recent shows where only two or three entries were made. SILVER PINK is not only the better of two varieties but of all of the varieties to date. Its beautiful color and splendid habit of growth stands pre-eminently alone. There is no other variety that approaches it, and now that it will reproduce in color and habit from seed with only a few pleasing sports, it can be extensively grown at small cost. We have customers that got as many as 900 plants from one packet of seed, which reduces the cost to a minimum.

Many varieties of snapdragon now offered show side growth near the the direction of Edgar Brown, botanist in charge of the seed laboratory, and publication is made of the analysis of the 189 samples found to be adulterated or misbranded, together with the names of the seedsmen by whom they were offered for sale.

Of the 499 samples of Kentucky bluegrass seed obtained, sixty-two were found to be either adulterated or misbranded, thirty-six samples containing less than three per cent of Kentucky bluegrass. An average of fifty-nine per cent of Canada bluegrass seed was found in fifty-three samples. Two samples were mixtures of redtop and timothy and seven were adulterated with rye grass, redtop, timothy, or crested dog's-tail.

Of the 307 samples obtained as orchard grass seed, seven were found to SELF-APPOINTED REVISIONISTS.

Robert Holmes, Norwich, the English sweet pea raiser, does not agree with the bulletin of Spencer sweet peas recently sent out by Lester L. Morse, to which reference has been made in this column. In a letter to an English trade paper Mr. Holmes prefaces a lengthy criticism with:

"The bulletin explains that after visiting N. S. P. S. trials at Guildford, and the growing seed crops of some firms, Messrs. Lester L. Morse, Hugh Dickson, Andrew Ireland, William Cuthbertson and Howard M. Earl constituted themselves a committee to draw up a list of sweet peas 'that would include every distinct feature in the present known category of varieties.' The floral committee of the N. S. P. S. does contain a modicum of disinterested element in its constitution, but the self-appointed committee of experts consists of unadulterated self-interest, which fact alone renders them incapable of giving an unbiased judgment on the respective merits of the numerous sweet peas now in commerce. Although this committee requires no credentials from me, I wish to record my unqualified belief in their integrity of purpose; indeed, I am certain they have been actuated by only the best motive, but there is a natural law, commonly called the instinct of self-preservation, which is inherent in the human race and beyond self-control, which disqualifies them and, in fact, makes them arch-incapables of

LAWN SILICATE

FOR KILLING WEEDS IN LAWNS

Positively effective and absolutely guaranteed or money returned.

LAWN SILICATE is unquestionably superior to any preparation ever applied as a top dressing to lawns to destroy Plantain, Buckhorn, Dandelion and other low growing, flat leaved weeds that a lawn mower will not kill. It is odorless and is easy to apply. Does not stain or injure hands or clothing. It is positively the most economical, quickest and most effective method of getting rid of weeds ever devised. A 5-lb. package covers 200 to 500 square feet. It does not kill the grass, but the weeds are practically all killed in 24 to 48 hours, and afterwards literally burned up and blown away. This is not a "fairy tale." We invite investigation. It is sold on "money back guarantee."

RETAIL PRICES, 5-lb. package, 25c; 10-lb. package, 50c; 100-lb. bags, $5.00; barrel lots in bulk, 4½c per lb. Descriptive circular on request.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Business was reported as being above the normal during the last week, while funeral work continued brisk and heavy. Mothers' day stimulated a greatly increased demand the latter part of the week. While all white flowers were in greater demand than the supply, white carnations fell far short of the call. As early as Wednesday afternoon the price on white carnations began to stiffen and continued until the height was reached Saturday of 12½ and 15 cents each, without flowers to fill the call. One large department store advertised in the daily papers for white carnations to be distributed free to its customers. Its call was for 3,000, for which it offered to pay 6 cents each. The florists and growers generally have begun their preparations for a big Memorial day rush, and already many orders have been booked for wreaths made of ivy, galax, magnolia and similar leaves.

Various Notes.

Johnston Bros. have just received a handsome new auto delivery car.

James B. Canning has been busy recently on funeral work.

Albert Holscher is cutting a fine lot of stock in several colors, both double and single.

John Burke, of the Burke-Burns Rose Co., is preparing for a large wedding decoration in New York the latter part of this month.

N. D. Newell, who spent the winter in Florida and other parts of the south, has returned to his home in Attleboro.

Baskets of pansies and verbenas plants have been in unusual demand this spring.

Governor Pothier has signed the bills recently enacted by the General Assembly, making the annual appropriation of $30,000 for the Rhode Island State College and $10,000 for the extermination of the gypsy moths.

Joseph Kopelman was in Boston last week looking for a supply of white carnations for Mothers' day.

William Hay, of Oaklawn, is cutting every day about 1,200 fine roses, for which he finds a ready market.

Lawrence Hay is finishing his spring work at the Agawam Hunt and Wampanoisset Club grounds, which are under his care the year around.

W. H. M.

Gorham, Me.—Roland Barrows is building an addition to his range on lower Main street, in which he will grow carnations only.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June 18 to 20, 1913.

CONRAD BROS. have established a private nursery at West Allis, Wis., and will grow 10,000 young trees to be used in ornamenting home sites.

A COMPANY is forming at Davis, Yolo county, Cal., to establish a nursery on a 160-acre tract near Grass Valley, recently purchased at a cost of $10,500.

THE 1912 apple crop is said to be practically cleaned up. It is estimated at 50,000,000 barrels. Predictions as to the commercial crop of 1913 are 60,000,000 barrels.

THE Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., observing its annual custom, presented the public school pupils of Louisiana, Mo., May 2, with free fruit trees for planting.

IN common pleas court at Louisiana, Mo., May 6, in Wm. P. Stark vs. Stark Bros. Nurseries & Orchards Co., petition for appointment of receiver, depositions on behalf of plaintiff and defendant were received and filed.

THREE nurseries at Toppenish, Wash., suffered by fire May 5, when the packing and shipping plant used jointly by the Washington, Toppenish and Yakima Valley nurseries was destroyed, with a loss of about $10,000. The loss on stock was not heavy, as the shipping season is about over. It is stated that the fire was of incendiary origin.

"EVERY apple tree in Oregon should be a pear tree; other places can compete with Oregon apples, but no other place with Oregon pears," was the declaration made by George A. Dorris, known as the "asparagus king" of Oregon, before the Lane County Horticultural Society, which met May 2 at Eugene to perfect arrangements for the annual meeting of the Oregon State Horticultural Society there, June 6 and 7. The meeting voiced its approval of Mr. Dorris' suggestion.

THE official printed copy of the pending tariff bill as it passed the House May 8 does not agree in all particulars with the report of the House amendments as printed last week. The word "coniferous" is shown inserted to qualify "evergreen seedlings," but no age limitation is shown. Neither is greenhouse stock classed with nursery stock not specially provided for at fifteen per cent ad valorem. The trade's paragraphs, reprinted from an official copy of the bill, are shown in full on page 25.

We are in a Position to quote prices on specimen Evergreens that will be decidedly attractive to any one who is BUYING TO SELL AGAIN. If you are in the market for anything from Norway Spruce to the finer varieties of Evergreens, send in your lists and we will give you a figure that will make you money.

AFTER A. A. N. IN 1915.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition will endeavor to have the American Association of Nurserymen hold its 1915 convention at San Francisco, during the exposition period. With the California Association of Nurserymen, which already has decided to meet in that city in 1915, it will have representatives at the Portland convention of the A. A. N. in June to interest it in going west again two years hence. It is probable that the Pacific Coast Association of Nurserymen will hold its convention in the exposition city that year.

KOMMISSIONER KOSTER.

P. M. Koster, Boskoop, Holland, has been appointed Horticultural Commissioner for the Netherlands for the Panama-Pacific International Exposition and has been at San Francisco for a number of days arranging for the exhibit which the Holland nurserymen and bulb growers will make at the exposition in 1915. In speaking of the plans, Mr. Koster said: "Holland will make one of the greatest floral and plant exhibits here in 1915 that it or any other country has ever made at any exposition. The intention is to give a proper representation of one of the greatest industries of the Netherlands. The government has already made a liberal appropriation for this purpose. There will be something like 500,000 bulbs alone planted in the Netherlands horticultural section at the exposition."

Commissioner Koster intends to visit a number of the big nurseries on the Pacific coast during his stay, and will then go to Washington, where he will confer with Dr. Loudon, the Netherlands minister to the United States, and then sail for home.

Hybrid Tea, or Everblooming Roses

Hybrid Tea, or Everblooming Roses are becoming more popular every year; while not so hardy as the perpetuals, with slight protection in winter they carry over in splendid shape and give a wealth of bloom all through the summer months and late in the fall until frost checks them.

The following collection is the latest offering in this beautiful and increasingly popular class and are two-year-old, English field-grown.

AMERICAN BEAUTY. Almost too well known for description, but as popular today as twenty years ago. Rosy carmine, shaded salmon; flowers large and full; very floriferous. $10.00 100.

ETOILE DE FRANCE. Superb crimson-red velvet, the center of the bloom vivid cerise red. The queen of the everblooming red roses. The most free-blooming and vigorous red rose ever introduced. $10.00 100.

GRUSS AN TEPLITZ. No rose in commerce can compare with this as a bedder. It is a perfect sheet of richest crimson scarlet all summer. A strong, vigorous grower. $12.00 100.

JULIET. (Novelty.) This, perhaps, is the most distinct rose ever introduced for color, which is unique. It is of the same type as Soleil d'Or, Rayon d'Or and other Austrian Briars and their hybrids. It was introduced by Wm. Paul & Son in 1910. These types require very little pruning; simply remove the dead and useless wood. The following is the raiser's description: "Outside of petals old gold, interior rich rosy red, changing to deep rose as the flowers expand. A very distinct and attractive novelty, blooming both in summer and autumn. Large and full, of powerful and delicious fragrance; most beautiful." $25.00 100.

CAROLINE TESTOUT. Bright satin rose, with brighter center, large, full and globular. $12.00 100.

KILLARNEY. This is a grand rose for either indoor or outdoor cultivation; is a strong grower, and the blooms, which are of a beautiful pink, are borne in great profusion. $12.00 100.

WHITE KILLARNEY. This white queen of the Irish roses excels any other of its class. The color is pure white. White Killarney, like its prototype, is unusually hardy and without protection has stood severe winters as far north as Boston. $15.00 100.

LIBERTY. Very free flowering, bright crimson scarlet, of an even shade throughout; floriferous. $12.00 100.

MME. JULES GROLEZ. A beautiful satiny china-rose color, very bright and attractive. A distinct and pretty rose, which should be planted extensively. $12.00 100.

Small quantities of other varieties on hand, write for prices; also on surplus bulbs, etc.

ingas, diervillas, deutzias, philadelphus, stephanandras and other deciduous flowering shrubs can be propagated from half ripened wood. About July 1 the wood is usually in a proper condition. Close coldframes are suitable. Use sandy loam. Press the cuttings in firmly and quite close together. Water well and spray freely until the cuttings are rooted. Do not afford much air and close up about four o'clock each afternoon. Gradually disperse with shading and by the end of September remove the sashes and leave the cuttings exposed until frost removes their foliage. Plant out in nursery rows as soon as the ground is open in spring.

Berberis Thunbergii is most easily raised from seeds. These should be collected in fall, stratified in dry sand and then sown in flats or a coldframe. A cool greenhouse is a good place in which to germinate many shrub and tree seedlings.

Hydrangea paniculata, H. arborescens grandiflora and other popular flowering shrubs can all be propagated from cuttings in the same way as the spiræas and other shrubs already named.

The Market.

Trade for Mothers' day was the same as last year, everything that looked like a flower being cleaned up. White carnations were the headliner, but they were soon exhausted, and then everything went. All of the florists say the same thing—they cleaned up everything in the way of a flower. It looks now as though the public will change from a white carnation to any white flower, which would be a sensible thing to do, because only a small proportion wore white carnations. People were ready to take them at any price, but they were not to be had.

Trade outside of the Mothers' day rush has been brisk, with a good supply of stock. Funeral work has been heavy for several days. The plant trade was quite heavy, especially in geraniums. People were anxious to get their plants out the few warm days we had, but a big change has taken place in the last few days. We have had several heavy frosts and reports are to the effect that a great deal of the fruit has been killed in consequence. Everybody is on the run here now with spring bedding, getting in shape to push things ahead as soon as weather will permit. The stock of spring plants is fine as a rule and everyone is looking forward to a big trade in that line.

Louis Elsass, of Chillicothe, O., has been a visitor in the city. He brought

The Market.

The last week has been an unusually busy one. Two or three large funerals, prominent weddings, the race meet and Mothers' day practically cleaned up about all available stock. Larkspur, calendulas and cornflowers are good sellers. Carnations were scarce, especially white and red. Sweet peas are good, particularly the Butterfly varieties coming from Chicago.

Various Notes.

There was a decided increase in Mothers' day sales this year. If the local florists would get together and push this day more strongly, it would mean one of the best flower days of the year outside of Christmas and Easter.

A. R. Baumer has been busy with funeral orders during the last fortnight.

The bedding season is at its height, H. Kleinstarink, F. Walker & Co., J. E. Marret, E. G. Reimers and Jacob Schulz being unusually busy with this class of work.

An elaborate home decoration was furnished by Jacob Schulz for the Wheeler-Marvin wedding. Mrs. M. D. Reimers furnished the bouquets.

J. E. Marret furnished the decorations for the opening of the new store of the Boston Shoe Co. G. E. S.

Oelwein, Ia.—Charles Hancock has opened a new store in the new Blunt building on South Frederick street.

"Get them at Dreer's"

All Seasonable Plants—Seeds—Bulbs and Sundries

HARDY PERENNIALS. The most complete collection of varieties and the largest stock in the country. Our Perennial plants have a national reputation. We spare no expense to have them in the best possible shape for the planter. Such varieties as move better when pot-grown are prepared in this shape. This does not mean little seedlings, but in the majority of cases the plants were field-grown, were dug and potted during the fall and winter months, and are just the right size to give immediate results. They are not to be compared with so-called field clumps. Try them and be convinced. See our current wholesale list for varieties and prices.

HYBRID-TEA ROSE
KILLARNEY

ROSES FOR OUTDOOR PLANTING TO GIVE IMMEDIATE RESULTS.

We have three hundred thousand 5 and 6-inch pots, the usual Dreer stock, and the style of plants your retail customers are looking for. These are all two-year field-grown plants which have been potted during the winter months, and which were stored in cold houses and frames, and which are now in prime condition for outdoor planting. The collection is the most up-to-date, including many new varieties not offered by anyone in the trade.

Hybrid Teas, Hybrid Perpetuals, Tea and Ever-blooming, Ramblers, Baby Ramblers, Moss Roses, Hybrid Sweet Briars, Austrian Briars, Wichuraiana, etc., etc. See our current wholesale list for varieties and prices.

OUR CURRENT WHOLESALE LIST

also describes the following, all of which are handled as Specialties:

Decorative Plants, Palms, Ferns, Pandanus, Bay Trees, Box-woods, Dracaenas, etc., etc.

Hardy Shrubs, Hardy Vines, Hardy Climbers, Rhododendrons, Azaleas, etc., etc.

LUPINUS POLYPHYLLUS

AQUATIC PLANTS—Water Lilies, Nelumbiums, Victorias.

Tender and Hardy Aquatics have been a special feature with us for nearly a quarter of a century; over eight acres of artificial ponds are devoted to their culture. If we can assist you in making plans or selecting varieties, the services of our expert are at your disposal for the asking.

The Market.

The local market was even except for the last part of the week, white carnations taking a big jump and selling wholesale as high as $6 per hundred. Sunday morning carnations could not be had, as everybody sold out early Saturday. Roses were scarce Monday morning. Mothers' day cleaned up everything in the shape of cut flowers. Carnations and roses held up at a fair price throughout the week. Funeral work and decorating were rather heavy. Everybody seemed to have his share of the work. The spring bedding stock is going faster this year than ever before, also earlier by two weeks. The retailers report that porch and window boxes have increased in number by fifty per cent over last year.

Various Notes.

Alpha Elberfield reports that for Mothers' day his business was far above expectations. It doubled over last year. His orders were extremely heavy, but the size of the individual orders did not increase. He predicts that in less than ten years Mothers' day will be as heavy as any other holiday.

A. F. Barbe says he has filled twice as many porch boxes this year and has hardly enough room to fill more until some are taken away.

L. G. Brown says he is too busy to have any news and that they are going as fast as they can possibly go. They are now several days behind on orders.

E. D. Ellsworth reports that his spring business is far ahead of last year and that he has no argument with his customers in regard to price.

Ed. A. Humfeld says he is two weeks behind on his orders. He planted all the stock in Electric park again this year, which he has done since the park has been known of. He used between 33,000 and 35,000 plants this year.

Nelson Jarrett has already sold three-fourths of his stock. He thinks inside of two more weeks he will be sold out. He has had to work by electric light in order to get out his orders.

W. L. Rock reports that they sold more fancy baskets for Mothers' day this year than last year and that business was heavy.

"NEW GEUM"

Geum Coccineum

Mrs. J. Bradshaw

This is one of the finest plants of recent introduction. It will put quite into the background all the Geums at present found in gardens. This fine variety produces very large flowers, 2 inches or more across, semi-double, and with plenty of substance in them, of the most brilliant scarlet. They are produced on long wiry stems, and continuously from June to October. For cutting and border decoration it is very hard to beat, and no doubt it will figure conspicuously on the show table in future.

For fifty years and more they have been extensively used in the east and there is nothing to be compared with them for beauty and producing an immediate effect. NELROSE is, we believe, the best commercial Antirrhinum yet offered. It is of a new and distinct type and is the forerunner of other varieties destined to revolutionize the culture of this popular flower.

Mr. William Wells

of Merstham, England, remarked at the International Show: "You have created a new and ideal type of snapdragon. Please give us other colors of this type."

Its Record This Spring

Winner of the Silver Cup, offered for the best cut-flower novelty, International Flower Show, New York. First at the Boston Spring Show—also a gratuity. In the markets of Boston and New York it has regularly sold for 50 cents per dozen more than any other variety handled.

"The Story of Nelrose"

Under this caption we have written a little booklet that tells the story of several years persistent work, and also gives considerable information concerning different strains of Antirrhinums, hints on culture, diseases, etc. It is now in the hands of the printer. Your copy will be forwarded on receipt of stamp.

GERANIUMS

Some growers depend on the culls left after the bedding season is over for their propagating stock. The wise grower uses the best plants he can get for that purpose. Young plants propagated for that purpose are the best. We have a few thousands of just that kind, of the following varieties:—Marvel, the best deep red; S. A. Nutt, deep red; Decorator, the best orange scarlet; A. Ricard, orange scarlet; Bte. de Poitevine, salmon.

Plant these out now for your fall propagating.

The Market.

Mothers' day No. 3 has come and gone, after creating an amount of hustle and business almost equal to a busy Christmas day. Florists went after business in such a manner as to convince one that everybody had a mother, and that the habit of sending her flowers had really come to stay. The demand for white was enormous, and to make it worse some irresponsible newspaper writers spread the idea that the public should insist on having white flowers, and should not be put off with any other color. From 88 degrees in the shade, the temperature dropped to 8 below freezing May 9 and 10, occasioning much damage to young stock throughout the neighborhood.

Various Notes.

The most interesting news of the week is the dismissal of the action brought by a local lawyer against the Dale Estate for $1,591.32 worth of water rates. The first action was brought over twelve months ago, when the lawyer made the municipality a party to his cause. It failed. Prior to the close of 1912, he appealed the case and won, but the case was sent again to a higher court, and three out of the four judges have rendered a verdict which leaves no doubt as to the raison d'être of the action, the Dale Estate appeal being allowed and the action dismissed, with costs amounting to over $3,000 against the person bringing it.

W. Wells, the celebrated chrysanthemum grower of Merstham, Surrey, England, called here on his way home from the states last week.

Walter Calvert has just erected two more greenhouses, 20x200 feet, which he intends to plant with violets. His other houses are given up to tomatoes, lettuce and sweet peas, all of which are a credit to the grower.

Mark Henderson has his new houses well on the way and, in addition to tomatoes and lettuce, he intends to grow carnations and sweet peas this season.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

The Market.

Mothers' day No. 3 has come and gone, after creating an amount of hustle and business almost equal to a busy Christmas day. Florists went after business in such a manner as to convince one that everybody had a mother, and that the habit of sending her flowers had really come to stay. The demand for white was enormous, and to make it worse some irresponsible newspaper writers spread the idea that the public should insist on having white flowers, and should not be put off with any other color. From 88 degrees in the shade, the temperature dropped to 8 below freezing May 9 and 10, occasioning much damage to young stock throughout the neighborhood.

Various Notes.

The most interesting news of the week is the dismissal of the action brought by a local lawyer against the Dale Estate for $1,591.32 worth of water rates. The first action was brought over twelve months ago, when the lawyer made the municipality a party to his cause. It failed. Prior to the close of 1912, he appealed the case and won, but the case was sent again to a higher court, and three out of the four judges have rendered a verdict which leaves no doubt as to the raison d'être of the action, the Dale Estate appeal being allowed and the action dismissed, with costs amounting to over $3,000 against the person bringing it.

W. Wells, the celebrated chrysanthemum grower of Merstham, Surrey, England, called here on his way home from the states last week.

Walter Calvert has just erected two more greenhouses, 20x200 feet, which he intends to plant with violets. His other houses are given up to tomatoes, lettuce and sweet peas, all of which are a credit to the grower.

Mark Henderson has his new houses well on the way and, in addition to tomatoes and lettuce, he intends to grow carnations and sweet peas this season.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

The Market.

Mothers' day at Indianapolis was quite a success. The market was thoroughly cleaned up and little stock was available May 12. Not only white carnations, but anything in the shape of a flower sold. There was quite a little newspaper advertising done this year and nearly every mother's son thought it his duty to buy her flowers.

Trade has been somewhat better the last week. The weather has been extremely cold for this time of the year, there being a light frost on the night of May 12. The florists doing a bedding business are hustling now, and judging by the way things have opened up this should be a good year. Good vinca vines are a little scarce this year, and the price is going up every day. There is not a great variety of cut flowers at this time. Good roses and Beauties are plentiful, as are carnations. Snapdragons find a ready call, but the supply is short. Sweet peas and daisies are cleaned up daily.

Various Notes.

S. T. Hitz & Son are installing a new boiler and erecting another greenhouse.

The regular monthly meeting of the State Florists' Association was held in the store rooms of the Smith & Young Co. May 6, with about eighteen members present. President Coles was in the chair. Considerable business was transacted. It was decided to omit the June meeting on account of the business rush of the florists. The meeting was followed by the usual lunch and social features.

Albert Marshall, formerly with A. Wiegand's Sons Co., has opened a stand at the market.

Bertermann Bros. Co. furnished the decorations for the opening of the Canoe Club.

George Wiegand has the golf fever. The Wiegands are well represented at the Highland Golf Club.

Frank Hasselman is busy with the plant business.

NEWPORT, R. I.

A large shed for gardeners' tools and a potting house are being erected on the Dr. Roderick Terry estate on Gibbs avenue.

William Jurgens has commenced the erection of a terra cotta dwelling with brick trimmings, on Butler street, to cost $4,500.

H. J. Hass & Son are maintaining an all-night service, so that flowers may be ordered at any hour.

POEHLMANN BROS. CO. Greenhouses and Plant Morton Grove, Ill.
Shipping Department:

GREENWICH, CONN.

The monthly meeting of the Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society was held in Doran's hall May 9, President Robert Williamson in the chair. The busy season had no doubt a little bearing on the attendance, which was not so large as usual. Incidentally, this was the first meeting since the society's inception that it has failed to enroll a new member. Messrs. Forster and Flaherty were elected on the executive committee in place of H. Wild, elected vice-president, and James Aitchison, resigned. A fine display of spring flowers was on view, judged as follows:

Robt. Williamson, highly commended for collection of flowering shrubs.

A. L. Marshall, highly commended for Miltonia vexillaria.

Anton Pederson, honorable mention for vase of campanulas.

Geo. E. Baldwin Co., honorable mention for collection of Cattleya Mossiae, including a white form of same.

Adam Patterson, cultural certificate for collection of sweet peas.

A. L. Marshall, honorable mention for Gladiolus Augusta.

F. Weiss, vote of thanks for Darwin tulips.

P. W. Popp, vote of thanks for standard streptosolen, an old favorite seldom met with.

A. Anderson, vote of thanks for Tulip Geaneriiana major.

Anton Pederson, vote of thanks for vase of cactus.

A. L. Marshall, vote of thanks for tree peonies and tulips.

Dehn & Bertolf Co., vote of thanks for Trollius Europæus, T. Japonica fl. pl., Centaurea montana, and delytra.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

Mothers' day and its results made the florists in Dayton feel that they were more than glad to be in business again. Business on this occasion was a wonder and surpassed all expectations, while the receipts were more than double what they were last year. Flowers, regardless of color or quality, were sold out clean and at a good price, rendering it only possible to take care of half the demand. Mothers' day, from present indications, has come to stay, and it is surely a good thing for the florists. Such days do not come amiss to the Dayton florists, who lost so much during the recent flood. All but one or two of our florists have become established again at their old locations and all report business to be picking up even better than they had dared to hope.

With the approach of Decoration day the demand for pot and bedding plants is increasing daily and there is likely to be a scarcity in the supply of these, as many people are buying more heavily this year, in order to cover with flowers some of the destruction done by the recent flood. Roses and carnations are in good supply, although the hot sun is greatly affecting their size. Baby gladioli, sweet peas, snapdragons, etc., are also fairly abundant and there is a good demand for them.

Various Notes.

Visitors last week were: John Evans, of Richmond, Ind.; Frank Farney, of M. Rice Co., Philadelphia; M. A. Le-ganger, of A. L. Randall Co., Chicago. R. A. L.

Cedar Rapids, Ia.—H. E. & C. W. Krebs, who discontinued their florists' line three years ago, to devote all of their attention to vegetables, will re-sume growing for the flower trade and still carry on their vegetable business.

Choice Plants for Immediate Shipment

A wonderful clock at Cur Saal, in Interlachen, Switzerland, one of the most famous and biggest tourist hotels of the world. The biggest wonder of nature the world has ever seen.

See that clock? It is made of flowers!

It has hands and shows the time!

See that little house in the rear, also made of flowers! There is hidden a mechanism that strikes the quarter, half and the hour. What do you think this clock is made of? It is made of plants of brilliancy—mostly of dwarf begonias, the Vernon type, short variety, pink and red. The head gardener, the creator of this clock, of this famous, world-wide known hotel at Interlachen, Switzerland, has been offered a fortune by American and other millionaires of the world, to make them a clock similar to this, but he declined the offers, saying that he was hired by the hotel company for the next ten years. I was fortunate enough, during my visit there, to obtain from the head gardener, the creator of this clock, a supply of seed and stock plants of those beautiful varieties of begonias to raise a sufficient crop of about 50,000 young plants in 2½, 3 and 4-inch pots for you to use in a similar clock, carpet bed or other outside work. A bed of these begonias, pink, the Erfordii, or the bright red improved Vernon, is a joy forever. Constant bloomers, stay always short and bushy, the hot rays of the sun have no bad effect on them. They can be grown in a sunny or shady place. We can sell you large 4-inch pot plants, either of the improved Erfordii, the beautiful pink, or the dark bright red improved Vernon, at 10c, $10.00 per 100; 3-inch, $7.00 per 100; 2½-inch, $5.00 per 100. 25 at 100 rate.

PEONIES.

"PEONIES FOR PLEASURE."

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes old and new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of these booklets.

Our catalogue of everything you need mailed on application. Write for it today.

ROSE AFTER-SATISFACTION.

When you buy G. & R. roses you get along with them the after-satisfaction—that sense of realizing all the success that should come from planting quality roses, the knowing that no better results are possible to be obtained outside of G. & R. roses. It is the after-satisfaction that has compelled us to plan to grow for the coming season one million additional roses. Think of it, the after-satisfaction selling five million roses, and demanding a million increase, in one year. "Going some," you say. Yes, but are you getting your share of this "rose after-satisfaction"? If not, why not? Plant G. & R. quality roses. None better, none so good.

WEEDS, GRASS AND OTHER GROWTH IN GARDEN WALKS, GUTTERS, TENNIS COURTS, DRIVEWAYS, ETC.

THIS fluid absolutely destroys all weeds and other growth wherever applied, and its effect on the ground prevents the growth of fresh ones for a year and thus saves a great deal of time and labor, as no cutting, hoeing or hauling away of the weeds is required.

Greenhouse Heating.

* MAY quotations for Pocahontas and New River coals, mine run, are $1.25 at the mine; $3.30 at Chicago.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

To judge from the reports in the coal trade papers, the labor troubles in the West Virginia mines have been sifted down to the one question of the recognition of the union, a proposition on which alone the men are not prepared to make a stand. It seems, therefore, unlikely that the troubles will spread to the smokeless field and improbable that the production of the florists' favorite fuel will be curtailed this summer in the measure that seemed, a few weeks ago, more than likely.

THE FUEL MARKET.

Interest in the Chicago coal market, says the Black Diamond, centers in the placing of contracts. Some of the producers of steam coal proved undependable when the coal shortage came last fall. They could not, apparently, resist the temptation to go back to the old practice of making a pretense of being short of coal on their contracts that they might have some coal to sell at higher prices on the open market. The avenues of information are a little too wide open these days to permit any such practice to prevail and as a consequence those concerns are finding it difficult to renew their old contracts, that business going of its own volition to other members of the trade. Those concerns, cut out of some of their regular contracts, are appealing to new groups of buyers, and in the struggle to place a certain tonnage, are forced to cut prices. The concerns which lived up faithfully to their contracts have not only retained their old customers at slightly higher prices, but also have taken on the new ones who are looking for a dependable supply of coal.

On smokeless coal, the placing of contracts has been rather heavy, despite the higher prices. In that field the price is determined by the law of supply and demand, plus the appreciation among the operators that certain necessary charges have too long been neglected and must at this late date be made against the coal production. There has been more or less talk that the smokeless operators could not hope to obtain their circular prices. Indeed, the reports have been frequent that the prices already have been cut. An inquiry into the facts of the situation not only reveals that prices as now announced are being held firm, but that the operators appreciate that this is but an intermediate step in the upward tendency of prices. The next rise will, it is intended, bring the values up to perhaps $1.50 on an average for the mine-run.

LOCATION OF PIPES.

Continuous Firing for Four Years Twenty-four Hours a Day Fails to Burn Out Cyclone Grates

We have installed many sets of Cyclone Grates where these figures have held true.

Any grates that show no evidence of burning after four years' continuous firing twenty-four hours a day must have something exceptionally worth while about them.

returns must be used in order to get efficiency, but how the flows and returns must be placed about the solid beds. I thought of running one 2-inch flow about three feet over the center and having the returns come down each side of the solid beds. The walks will be two feet wide and eighteen inches deep. But I am in doubt as to whether that arrangement would be an effective one. The bed $3\frac{1}{2} \times 36$ will be on the south side, with a 6-inch ditch between the bed and the wall. When the location of the pipes is determined, I can figure the number of feet of radiation that will be necessary. The new addition will be used for vegetable growing. C. F. C.

In order to give a definite answer, one should know the height of the walls and the distance from the top of the boiler to the level of the walks. If steam is to be used, as seems probable from the size of pipe selected for the flow, it will be better to carry the flow six or seven feet above the beds. Then, if the side walls are high enough to bring the plates four feet above the beds, it will be advisable to have at least two of the returns on each wall near the plates, and the others can be in the walks if they will be high enough above the boiler. Unless they are at least two feet above the boiler, either a steam trap or a pump will be required.

What Boiler?

WATER

Of course, if your range is of a size economical for heating with cast iron boilers, you won't consider for a minute putting in an unwieldy, short-lived wrought iron tubular boiler.

If it is to be a water boiler, this Sectional one of ours has a rather enviable reputation for greenhouse economy that puts a stop to your considering anything but this greenhouse boiler made especially for greenhouse work.

Knowing how essential a prompt, strong circulation is in greenhouse heating, we designed this boiler to do just that thing. And it does it.

STEAM

If you install water, and also want an auxiliary system of steam, or if you prefer steam, our steam boiler will surely suit you. A system of this kind is invaluable for sulphuring a rose house.

One thing many growers tell us about our steam boiler is its quick steaming power and the fact that, after steam is down, a vapor heat continues for some time.

You will instantly recognize the advantage of a continued "gentle heat."

Let's talk it over—you and I.

quired to heat each house to the temperature stated on the sketch. Can I successfully heat all the houses with one boiler? If so, what is the best way of protecting the pipes, which would have to run from house No. 1 to No. 3? What size of hot water boiler will be required? We burn only soft coal here. The lowest outside temperature in this locality is about 27 degrees above zero. T. S.

The sketch shows one house divided into three rooms by cross partitions, as follows: No. 1, a rose house, 20x68; No. 2, a fern house, 20x38, and a proposed carnation house, 15x20. The temperatures desired in these rooms are, respectively, 58, 60 and 52 degrees. Each room has three feet of brick and three feet of glass in each wall. Another house, thirty feet away, contains two rooms—No. 3, 15x18, and No. 4, 15x22, for which temperatures of 60 and 50 degrees are desired.

The sketch does not show which way the houses run or where it is proposed to locate the boiler. If the boiler is to be at the end of the carnation room, the rose, fern and carnation rooms could be heated by running a 3-inch overhead main under the ridge to the farther end of the rose house and then dropping a 2½-inch feed pipe down on each side of the door, connecting each of them to a coil of four pipes running to the corners and then along the side walls back to the boiler. If the boiler house is built across the end of the carnation room, no radiation will be required for the end of that room.

If the boiler is low enough so that the flow and return pipes can be carried underground from room No. 1 across the thirty feet of open space to room No. 4, it will be possible to heat all of the rooms with one boiler, rated for 1,200 to 1,500 square feet of radiation. Cover the pipes with asbestos and run them through either sewer pipe or cement conduits. Use 2½-inch pipe for the main flow and return. Run the flow pipe under the ridge through room No. 4 to the farther end of room No. 3, and, as in the other range, drop down two feed pipes, each of which should supply a coil of three pipes to run to the corners and along the walls back to the farther end of the house.

Club Holds Banquet.

"This is the age of specialization," said Adolphus Gude in a short talk given before the members of the Florists' Club, their ladies and friends, at the annual banquet at the New Ebbitt House last week. "Select your specialty," he said, "and grow that specialty just a little better than the other fellow does. You will find that the storekeepers will come around and want your stock." He urged the florists to refrain from raising prices for Mothers' day. Mr. Gude also made the speech presenting to ex-President and Mrs. David J. Grillbortzer a handsome cut glass water set, the gift of the members.

The banquet was one of the most successful affairs ever given by the club and the evening was made more enjoyable by music and songs rendered by Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Callow and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur D. Peirce. Ernest Geichner also gave a quasi-comical talk on his experiences as an employer and on other matters, which elicited both laughter and applause.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., was among the speakers, telling of his experiences abroad and of the superiority of some of the products of the domestic growers.

Mrs. J. A. Phillips and Mrs. Rosina Stauff were the speakers from among the ladies and they were followed by I. Rosnosky, of Philadelphia, who, referring to the recent flower show, stated he hoped to see in his home city two years hence a show that would outclass even the historic Boston show.

In line with the effort to secure an enactment of laws which would operate to close all business establishments on Sundays, O. A. C. Oehmler asked that the support of the florists be given the movement. He said there is but one excuse for Sunday work, and that is competition.

N. S. Hammer announced that an outing will be held by the bowling team early in August, at Chesapeake Beach.

Among those present were Messrs. and Mesdames Otto Bauer, W. E. McKissick, W. F. Gude, Richard Vincent, Jr., David J. Grillbortzer, O. A. C. Oehmler, Arthur Peirce, C. L. Linz, Edward Callow, Ernest Geichner, J. A. Phillips; Mrs. Rosina Stauff, Messrs. Webber, Adolphus Gude, E. C. Mayberry, William Marche, R. L. Jenkins, William H. Ernest, Edward Schmid, N. S. Hammer, Frank Millburn, of Baltimore; I. Rosnosky, of Philadelphia, and the Misses Waters, Gilbert and Schmid.

The Market.

Unsettled labor conditions hold business in check to a large extent. The express drivers are now out on strike and have been for ten days, which makes it impossible to get shipments promptly. Consignments are received only at owners' risk, and for this reason shipments are not consigned to this city. Every one complained of poor business all the week, but Mothers' day was a winner. Business started May 10 and grew better until Sunday, when everything salable was cleaned out. The wholesale price advanced on carnations from 2 cents to 4 cents, and there were none to be had at that. It is plainly evident that this day will be one of the largest flower days in the trade outside of the established holidays. Increased publicity this season helped the sale wonderfully, and everywhere Mothers' day was evident. The spring business is now at hand and bids fair to be big. A few warm days brought out many requests for pots of geraniums, and many signs point to a large season.

Various Notes.

J. B. Wiese expects to be in his new store in the market in a few days. The new market will be one of the finest in the country, and Mr. Wiese will have a display room equal to the fine stores of the city.

Charles Sandiford has a new touring car. R. A. S.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Mothers' day for the florists was a success, being ahead of expectations and, in fact, finding some rather unprepared. The local English press undoubtedly was the main factor in getting the ball rolling. Most of the ministers embodied Mothers' day in their sermons, while the Milwaukee Christian Temperance Union distributed white carnations to the unfortunates at the county jail.

From the wholesalers' point of view, the demand for this day was far ahead of last year. In fact, the demand exceeded the supply. White carnations were a scarce article, while the supply of the other shades was inadequate for the occasion. This, in turn, helped out all of the other kinds of cut flowers, so that by Saturday night the wholesalers were completely cleaned up.

I wish to state that I have been using Revere Hose in my Greenhouses for the past 2 years and have found it to be the best hose by far that I have ever used. My hose has been subjected to the very rough use in greenhouse & outside work, and has lasted twice as long as any other hose we have ever used. Will use in other from now on.

The Park Floral Co., located on Fifteenth street, opposite Oakland cemetery, has recently opened its plant for business. This company has leased ten acres south of the Haviland orchard and already has completed the erection of one building and expects to build three more immediately. The entire cost of improving this property will be about $5,000. W. M. Colwell, formerly with the North Floral Co., and C. Demester are the two men at the head of this new company. Mr. Demester moved to this country but two years ago. Before that time he had something like twenty-five years' experience in the business in France, Belgium and England. They expect to specialize not only in flowers but in vegetables and fruits and have a large field of strawberries planted.

Shelton, Neb.—Ed Oliver started in the business here last autumn and already has built up so good a trade that an early addition to his greenhouses will be necessary.

THERE IS ONLY ONE GARDEN HOSE THAT CAN GIVE YOU ALL THE ADVANTAGES LISTED BELOW, AND THAT IS

NOTE THE RING WHICH APPEARS AT ONE FOOT INTERVALS TO FACILITATE QUICK AND ACCURATE MEASURING

Made in continuous lengths of 500 feet and furnished on reels—does away with worrying about short ends.

The ring at every foot does your measuring accurately and quickly—eliminates the bothersome yardstick or tape. Besides, these rings add protection to the hose as you drag it over the ground.

Construction is by the latest improved methods; care to the greatest degree is exercised in both materials and workmanship—assuring you of high quality.

And prices—consistent with good quality—are extremely attractive when you consider that you are getting a hose without a peer for quality, service, usefulness and durability.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

Experimenting is costly enough, even when done in a small way, but if you let a contract for a new greenhouse to be built of a wood that is not fully certified by years and years of trial, then you surely are experimenting on a grand scale. Can you afford to take the risk? Don't let anybody tell you it is not a risk; your own judgment tells you it is a serious matter to so experiment on the recommendation of a contractor, and a contractor who does not know POSITIVELY. He may honestly believe the "substitute" is good, but can he cite the ENDURANCE TESTS? One endurance test is worth whole volumes of "belief," and "it-stands-to-reason," and "you-know-the-reputation-of-so-and-so-Wood," etc. Coming down to brass tacks, THERE'S NOTHING TO IT BUT CYPRESS for greenhouse construction. And there the matter ENDS.

WINTER VEGETABLES DUE TO CYPRESS?

This is no joke; it is plain enough to see.

If greenhouses were made of a less enduring wood than Cypress, the cost of maintenance would be so great that nobody could afford to build on a large scale for winter vegetable production. With a carpenter coming in every day or two to make repairs and replacements, the expenses would eat up all the vegetables and leave none for the customers to eat!

But when the greenhouse is made of Cypress, literally the "Wood Eternal," and the repair man is a stranger to the place, then is there a show for profit to the producer.

Looks like a fair conclusion that "winter vegetables are due to Cypress."

GET A BOOK OR TWO.

Better get a volume, or two, or a dozen, of our Cypress Pocket Library—they're FREE. Vol. 3 is authority on GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION; Vol. 20 is a new farm book, with plans for eight out-buildings—3 barns, a hen house, hog house, corn crib, silo and small greenhouse. Better get it; costs nothing. "Write soon; good-bye."

"SPOT CLEAR CYPRESS"

LOCKLAND LUMBER CO., LOCKLAND, OHIO

The Disastrous Storms and Cyclones of This Spring, which caused such heavy damage to the trade in almost all parts of the country, should no doubt teach greenhouse builders some lessons. While seemingly nothing can resist a cyclone when it strikes with full force, some styles of construction stood the heavy storms while others under the same conditions have collapsed. We recommend in our construction to use purlin posts set solid in concrete to withstand the pressure, and the purlins safely tied down to prevent the suction of the storm—and no loss has been reported to us on any of these houses with exception of one case where the storm picked up part of a shed from a distance and threw it on the houses, demolishing that part which was struck.

We further recommend the Dietsch short-roof construction, which has no purlin posts, but the corrugated-like surface which these houses present to the storm seems to offset the force of pressure and suction and no loss has been reported to us whatever.

At the same time please note that our construction, which has stood the test so well, is inexpensive.

ADVICE ON BOILERS

Do you want true heating values for your money? Many florists, to their sorrow, have made the mistake of buying cast iron boilers, which, because of their ratings, appeared to be cheaper than the Kroeschell boiler.

The extravagant ratings of cast iron boilers are misleading, and have been the cause of much disappointment and serious trouble to many growers. The fuel waste is enormous when cast iron boilers are used for commercial purposes, such as greenhouse heating, etc., etc.

Do not make a mistake when selecting your new boiler; get a Kroeschell and you will never be disappointed.

Kroeschell vs. Cast Iron Boilers

Over 1500 Cast Iron Boilers were replaced by the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler during the past six years. It is a common occurrence for a Kroeschell to replace two to four cast iron boilers at a single place: this is the CENTRAL HEATING SYSTEM PLAN, and has saved many florists hundreds of dollars per season in fuel alone, besides a big saving in labor.

OUR HEATING ENGINEER has probably had more practical experience in this line than any other greenhouse man, and we place his experience at your service.

HONEST BOILER FACTS

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Kroeschell Replaces Three (3) Cast Iron Boilers.

We purchased of you this spring a No. 6 Kroeschell Boiler, which you guaranteed would take the place of three cast iron boilers. Well, the whole thing in a nutshell is this—your word is as good as gold. Night before last we had a severe storm of snow and sleet and a very high wind; we had not the least bit of trouble. We fired the last at 10 p. m., November 24, and the next morning at 7 o'clock we looked at the houses and found it only 1 degree less than when we fired the last coal, 9 hours earlier. If this isn't magnificent work and a good test, we would be pleased to hear from anyone else that could furnish a better boiler. We know if parties wishing a boiler would get one from you they never would try any other. We think in 5 years' running of this boiler we will have the price saved in the difference in our coal bill. Wishing you the best of success, we remain,

Very truly yours,
Adam Laub & Son,
Hughsonville, N. Y.

Kroeschell Boiler Better than Tubular Boilers or Cast Iron Boilers.

Washington Court House, Ohio.
Have used upright boiler, tubular boiler and cast iron boiler. The Kroeschell Boiler heats up better and easier than any other boiler we have ever had anything to do with. If we ever buy another, it will certainly be a Kroeschell.

Very truly yours,
Poole & Purllant.

Try the Kroeschell First—It's Ahead of Them All.

I have had eight or ten other types of boilers. The Kroeschell is the best I have ever used. Your boiler heats the water very quickly—almost as fast as steam.

Yours very truly,
H. K. Lewis,
Dorothy, N. J.

THE KROESCHELL GREENHOUSE BOILER

Here is the boiler that is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists and gardeners who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler the highest praise.

10,788,000 square feet of glass was equipped with the Kroeschell Boiler during the past five years. You will find the new 1910 model Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler in every state in the Union and Canada.

Our Eastern business has been exceedingly heavy the past season.

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Cast Iron Boilers Cause Freeze-out—Kroeschell Boilers No Worry.

I bought a No. 2 boiler in 1902. Takes care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass—would take care of 2000 more. I have had a cast iron boiler, but it broke down twice in four years, always in the coldest weather. It broke down Dec. 29, 1904, and I lost all my stock in consequence. I have now two No. 2 and one No. 6 Kroeschell boilers and do not worry about their breaking down.

Grant Newport,
Cedar Rapids, Ia.

The Kroeschell Does Our Work Easier than Cast Iron Boilers and Saves 20% to 25% Fuel.

The No. 4 boiler is heating 10,000 sq. ft. of glass—it would take care of 13,000 sq. ft. easy. Have no trouble to keep temperature of 50 and 60 degrees in coldest weather. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. We had two cast iron boilers, one rated for 1200 ft. of pipe and one rated for 1500 ft. These boilers never did the work at their best and when the greenhouses were new. According to our experience with yours, we will save 20 to 25 per cent of fuel.

Hild Bros.,
Lake Forest, Ill.

Cast Iron Boilers Waste Fuel.

I had a cast iron 8 section boiler before, but was afraid it would crack to pieces. The Kroeschell Boiler is certainly a fuel saver. My coal bill to heat 5000 sq. ft. of glass surface with your boiler is less than last winter's coal bill, when I only had 2050 sq. ft. of glass heated with the 8 section cast iron boiler.

Your boiler burns any kind of fuel. I would not have another boiler than a Kroeschell, and will recommend it whenever I get a chance.

Edward Wittamer,
Joliet, Ill.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

CIBOTIUM AND CATTLEYAS.

One of the favorite large designs of the Fleischman Floral Co., Chicago, is the cross; whenever George W. Wienhoeber is approached by a customer who wants a piece that will overtop all others at the funeral of some prominent citizen, where there is sure to be a wealth of flowers, he is rather apt to recommend a big cross—and he makes many of them six or seven feet high. The accompanying illustration shows one of Mr. Wienhoeber's crosses. It was, as the picture shows, of massive proportions. The cross itself was made of prepared magnolia leaves on a mossed wire frame. At the intersection of the arms there was a mass of cattleyas with which a little Mexican ivy was used. The base of the design of course had to be large, in proportion to the height of the cross, but it could not be heavy. Cibotium Schiedei appears to be the ideal material for the purpose, with a few kentia leaves to break the line and orchids to lend richness of coloring.

IS THE WHOLESALE UNFAIR?

I was much interested in a letter from A. T. P. in The Review of May 8, page 11, under the title of "What Is the Wisest Course?" The letter tells of "an old established firm that disposes of its surplus flowers, principally carnations, to fruit stands around town at an extremely low figure, low enough so that they retail at 35 cents per dozen, while the market price at present is 75 cents."

Now, it would almost seem that the old established firm that A. T. P. speaks of must be the wholesaler that furnishes private parties in our town with flowers at wholesale prices, for receptions, pink teas, auction bridge, etc., and causes the poor retailers to be looked upon as highway robbers. Nobody seems to think that we retailers are at any expense at all, or that we have to live, though the cost of just existing is considerable these days. Besides, when flowers are sold so cheaply, people do not want anything "so common." I prefer to lose or give away my flowers when business is dull, rather than reduce the price to so low a figure, as the niggardly buyers never want to pay more when prices advance and the fastidious customers do not want to buy anything so cheap.

I wish more members of the trade would give their opinions on this subject and pay their special respects to the firms that wholesale to private parties.

THE LIVE-WIRE FLORIST.

[An extract from a paper submitted to the Kentucky State Society of Florists by William Kerb.]

I do not know of any undertaking where the business chances are greater against one than the grower's end of the florists' trade—chances such as those he must take with hail storms, wind storms, zero blizzards, freeze-outs, boiler explosions, fungoid or bacterial disease, insects, and disruption of crop plans due to varying weather conditions. Then he must figure on the wear and tear on his greenhouses, high insurance rates, and moving out the old soil and moving in the new, with a temperature hovering near 110 degrees una good salesman, polite and courteous, with some executive ability, and must be a good judge of human nature, which will assist him in handling working people. He should have some artistic ability in arranging flowers and plants, and should be a sort of mechanical genius, handy with every detail, from erecting greenhouses to installing the heating apparatus, piping, etc. He must always be on the alert, eager to learn the latest methods of other successful growers. Last, but not least, he must be square and honest and a good manager, financially. Show me a man of this caliber, turning out high-class flowers each year, and I will show you a live-wire florist. And it matters not whether he served one year or forty years at his trade, or if his former occupation was that of a butcher or a shoemaker, or whatever it may be; he is delivering the goods in his line and should be respected.

der the glass. These are only a few of the chances with which the grower must contend.

Now, in regard to the qualification of the live-wire florist: He should be

Does the retailer take the chances or have the worries of the oft-times overworked grower? He should assist all he can during the glut of the market, and do it cheerfully.

FOR A HOUSTON CARNIVAL.

The dozen shower bouquets shown on page 17 were not used for a wedding, but for an entirely different occasion, a fact that indicates the wide adaptability of this form of bouquet. The picture was prepared from a photograph sent to The Review by H. H. Kuhlmann, of Houston, Tex. The bouquets were made by Mr. Kuhlmann for the carnival ball held during the No-Tsu-Oh carnival in Houston, and were carried by the carnival queen and her eleven maids. Mr. Kuhlmann states, with no more than a fair degree of the honest pride which every expert craftsman ought to feel with reference to his work, that the bouquets were "the finest lot and largest number ever made in Houston for any one occasion."

The queen's bouquet, shown in the center of the upper row, was made of large white and small yellow orchids, valley and Adiantum Farleyense, with a frill of gold lace and a shower of valley and small yellow orchids. The maids' bouquets were made of large lavender orchids and valley, with valley showers.

CROSS BREEDING OF PANSIES.

I shall be obliged if you will answer the following questions: 1. How far apart or how far isolated should pansies be planted, so that the seed may be kept from mixing? 2. Do pansies mix while in bloom? 3. What is the procedure to produce new varieties of pansies by cross fertilization?

W. F. T.

There seems to be little or no cross fertilization of pansies caused by the wind carrying the pollen, as far as we can judge from a number of experiments, but the pollen is often carried from flower to flower by bumble bees, butterflies and some other insects. The common honey bee does not work on the pansy. The complete prevention of cross fertilization would hardly be practical if a large number of varieties are grown, but the chances of the insects crossing the flowers would be greatly reduced by planting rows of asters or other taller growing plants between colors or varieties of the pansy. Bumble bees do a lot of the crossing, but I notice that they will confine themselves to a number of nearby flowers in preference to flying over a barrier of asters. This refers, of course, to fall-grown seed. If grown in the spring, some other plant or device would have to be used to separate the colors.

The second question seems a little ambiguous, but, as I understand it, the correspondent wishes to know whether the planting together of two different colors of pansies will cause the flowers of one or the other of them, not referring to seedlings of these plants, to change color. The answer to this is most positively no. Pansies vary a great deal according to weather conditions, being lighter in color in hot weather and changing to a much darker color when the weather is cooler. Pansies that are perfectly white during the summer may often take on a purple or lilac color over part or even all of the flower when much cooler weather prevails, and sometimes one-half of a plant will vary while the other half does not. This adds quite a complication in trying to keep pansies true to name and color. Different colors will cross and mix to a certain extent if planted side by side.

As to the third question, it is not so hard to produce a new variety of pansy of real merit as it is to fix the variety so it will reproduce itself from seed. The pansy is the result of complex hybridization and, even with the best of care, there are a great many variations that will naturally occur, but only a few of these can be preserved as distinct varieties even with the best of care in isolating and selecting.

If a definite cross is desired, it will be found rather easier to take the plants that it is desired to cross into the greenhouse in the fall and do the work in the greenhouse, as the conditions are more easily controlled in that way. If kept at a violet or carnation temperature, there will be an abundance of flowers to work on from February on. The stamens of the pansy lie close to the ovary of the flower and are somewhat flattened in shape. When the variety that is to be used as the female parent has a flower bud nearly ready to open, the petals may be stripped down and the stamens removed with a small forceps or the point of a toothpick. This should then be covered with a small bag of muslin or oil paper. When the time has elapsed which would naturally have brought this bud into full flower, it will be ready to cross. The pollen from the plant that is to be the male parent may be applied with a fine brush, or, if there are sufficient flowers for the purpose, the lower petal of the flower that is to be the male parent may be carefully removed and enough pollen for fertilization will be found deposited on the tiny hairs at the base of the honey guide. This may be easily rubbed off onto the stigma of the flower to be crossed. The flower should be again covered, to protect it from other accidental fertilization, and the stem marked with a tag, as it may otherwise be overlooked before the seed is ripe. Some of these crosses may be fixed after continued selection if they prove of value, but others seem almost incapable of being fixed sufficiently to be offered as new varieties.

It is not hard to cross the different species of violas of the group to which the pansy belongs, such as V. cornuta, etc., but we have never been able to cross any of the species of this group with our native varieties.

It is only the most patient care in the matter of selection and weeding out of everything inferior to a high standard that will produce a superior strain, or a desirable new variety of pansy.

WHO KILLED COCK ROBIN?

There seems to be a peculiar fascination about tariff tinkering and a propensity among those who had a hand in the job to let everybody know it; it is a habit with congressmen. The amendments thus far made in the pending bill most certainly were proposed by McHutchison & Co., New York.

Now we learn from the Albany Times-Union of May 15 that it was Congressman Ten Eyck who "Fixed the Flower Tariff. At request of Wm. C. Gloeckner he made law clear; the whole horticultural trade is indebted to him for his work for them." Here is the story:

"The fact that the Albany district for the first time in years is 'represented' in Congress was strikingly brought home to William C. Gloeckner and other florists here and throughout the country recently. Mr. Gloeckner, with the remark, 'That's the kind of a congressman we have,' handed out some correspondence this morning which tells the story.

"For years the tariff on bulbs and other items of horticulture has been subject to an ambiguous classification in the tariff law, which has resulted in endless litigation on the part of importers of florists' things in efforts to collect duties which they paid erroneously, and which has given the dishonest European importer a vast advantage over the honest American working under this poorly constructed tariff scheme.

"The florists did not object to the rate of duties imposed, but only to the way in which the things were classified.

"Mr. Gloeckner happened to mention to a large importing house in New York the fact that Albany had a live congressman at Washington, who was anxious to do what he could for all his constituents, including Gloeckner himself, and through the congressman and through Gloeckner the matter was effectively taken up with Congressman Francis Burton Harrison, of the House committee on tariff amendments.

"Through him the proper wording of the horticultural section was secured, and Mr. Gloeckner has been asked by florists throughout the country to thank Mr. Ten Eyck for the good work he did for them.

"It is probable that at the next meeting of the Albany Florists' Club resolutions will be passed setting forth the approval of that association on Mr. Ten Eyck's courtesy in taking the matter up, and his forcefulness in bringing it to a successful conclusion."

GHEENT QUINQUENNIAL SHOW.

The eighteenth international quinquennial exhibition of the Royal Society of Agriculture and Botany, at Ghent, Belgium, was opened by His Majesty the King of Belgium, April 26. This exhibition eclipsed in size and grandeur all its predecessors. The spacious new buildings in which the show was held were admirably suited for the purpose; the whole of the arrangements reflected credit upon the organizers, and the culture and grouping of the plants formed a high tribute to the skill of Belgian horticulturists.

The 840 competitive classes were judged by 300 of the leading horticulturists of Europe, working in groups of five or six, with a chairman and secretary for each group and with Sir

Harry J. Veitch, London, as president of the jury.

The exhibition was divided into three sections, one of which was devoted entirely to orchids. The so-called azalea palace, comprising four acres of floor space, was used mainly for azaleas, rhododendrons, lilacs and carnations. The third section, including about three acres of floor space, contained palms, crotons, ferns and other stove and greenhouse plants.

Carnations were an important feature, and the marvelous development in their culture in Europe was demonstrated when compared with the show of 1908, when there were only two small exhibits. The leading honors went to England, and C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden, headed the list with a grand collection containing over 6,000 blooms. To this an award of Ceuvre d'Art was made. Gold medals were awarded to Stuart Low & Co.; A. F. Dutton, Iver; Young & Co., Cheltenham; Cutbush & Son, London; E. Draps-Boudry, Oostdunkerke, Belgium, and E. De Wolf, Alost, Belgium.

New plants—that is, plants not previously exhibited—were rare on this occasion. Most subjects had been seen at one or more European exhibitions prior to the Ghent show. Sander & Sons, Bruges, Belgium, were in the front rank with a variety of subjects, including Trevesia Sanderi, Maranta Sanderæ, Alocasia colossa, etc.—foliage plants not likely to become popular commercial lines, but extremely interesting for collections and botanic gardens. On the other hand, their new camellia, Fred Sander, should prove popular. It was a great attraction; the bright red, semi-double flowers, with fringed petals, gave it a distinct and pleasing appearance.

W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J., was awarded a gold medal for Dracæna Mandaiana, Polypodium Mandaianum, Anthericum Mandaianum, Asparagus elongatus, etc.

When the man in the show was asked his opinion about novelties, he invariably referred to the yellow peony. This was Pæonia hybrida La Lorraine, from Lemoine & Son, Nancy, France. It was a lovely hybrid Moutan variety, obtained by crossing P. lutea and P.

Moutan Queen Elizabeth, a salmon tinted variety. The Lemoines have been successful in obtaining a distinct, pretty flower, of a light salmon buff passing to yellow. The flowers are double and about four inches in diameter, with high centers, and were proclaimed by nine men out of every ten as the novelty of the show. Bee.

GREENHOUSE STANDARDIZATION

STANDARD WIDTHS OF HOUSES.

Difficulties to Be Overcome.

It would not be a hard matter for any one firm to compile a list of standard widths that would be acceptable to a large majority of the growers; the trouble would be to get the other manufacturers of material to accept it. This does not mean that there is any desire on the part of any manufacturer to be arbitrary, but rather a desire on his part to preserve the individuality of his own particular type or types of construction or to keep the widths of houses which he may have set up himself as standard widths. It is hard for us to get away from those things which we ourselves have created and which for many years we have been accustomed to regard as almost perfection. This applies to everything in life. Most of us have our convictions, our principles and our beliefs, and a determined effort on the part of anyone to stand by these is a sure indication of character. It may be said that the making of any particular article used in commerce is in many respects like a habit. Habits, good and bad, are hard things sometimes to overcome, and the habit of making a certain article in a certain way is likewise many times hard to get around.

It is a fact that for many years it has been customary among manufacturers of greenhouse material to furnish houses of any width called for. The question of the width of the house was, in almost every case, left to the customer.

Suggestions as to Widths.

Taking all things into consideration, it seems to me the following widths, with a few changes and modifications, should be adopted by manufacturers and growers alike, if concerted action on a standardization scheme is possible, and I think it is. Omitting the propagating house and all extremely narrow widths, I would start with what is commonly known as the short-roof house. The width of this house, with all materials working to good advantage and without its being necessary to use upright supports for the roof other than the wall posts, should be fourteen feet nine inches. Going from this width, the next one we come to would be a house twenty-one feet wide. It is not economical to build houses between fourteen feet nine inches and twenty-one feet, as the raw materials do not work to advantage; there is really no excellent bench arrangement to be had and the framework must be supported in the same way and at practically the same cost as for a 21-foot width. It seems to me the next width would be twenty-five feet.

The first part of this article, published in The Review of May 15, treats of the practicability of greenhouse standardization, draws attention to some of the advantages that would be secured by such a system and states some of the principles that must be observed in determining the different degrees of roof pitch for different widths of houses.

Now, in suggesting the three widths just mentioned the idea has been to suggest houses for building in range form. Either of the three widths, however, is adapted for use in a single house. The house fourteen feet nine inches wide offers in range form an excellent arrangement of 5-foot benches. The 21-foot width would work out ideally with 5-foot benches, and the 25-foot house in range form with benches four feet eight inches wide is a good type.

Widths of Benches and Walks.

There are many widths of benches used and there are advocates of each of the widths. Some of our grower friends like a 4-foot bench and claim they can grow almost as much stock on it as on a bench six inches wider, and that the stock does better on account of there being more outside rows. Others, again, as loudly maintain the advantages of a 5-foot width, saying the increased distance between the plants causes them to do better, and that their production is not only greater in quantity, but finer in quality.

This bench matter ought to be thrashed out on a scientific basis. Someone ought to get all of the arguments together, pro and con, for various kinds of stock, and then by a process of elimination decide on the proper width of bench. It can all be done, but it means an outlay of time and money. Some of us, however, are in a position to do work of this kind and, for the benefit of all concerned, it ought to be done.

Another matter is the width of the walks. Some of the best growers maintain a width of eighteen inches is all that is needed in a commercial growing house, while others will stand for nothing less than twenty inches. There are others, again, who want walks as wide as twenty-four inches. In my opinion, the 24-inch walk is entirely too wide, except for a few of our heavy-set men, who need a great deal of room. It seems to me a width of twenty inches is about right. The standard widths suggested are figured on a basis of walks approximately twenty inches wide.

Houses in Range Form.

The next width would be a house twenty-seven feet wide, but this width is desirable only for range form. The first house in a range of houses twenty-seven feet wide should be twenty-eight feet nine inches wide. A house twenty-eight feet nine inches in width allows for four benches five feet wide, and five walks approximately twenty-one inches wide. Using walks twenty inches wide, this house would be twenty-eight feet four inches. The cost for building material for the house twenty-eight feet four inches wide is practically the same as for the house twenty-eight feet nine inches wide. Detached houses should be built either twenty-eight feet four inches or twenty-ty-eight feet nine inches, and if this detached house is to be the beginning of a range all additional houses can be twenty-seven feet wide. You will please understand that in speaking of houses in range form it is understood that there are no dividing walls between the houses and that the range is open all the way through. [Fig. V shows a 27-foot house and one twenty-eight feet nine inches.]

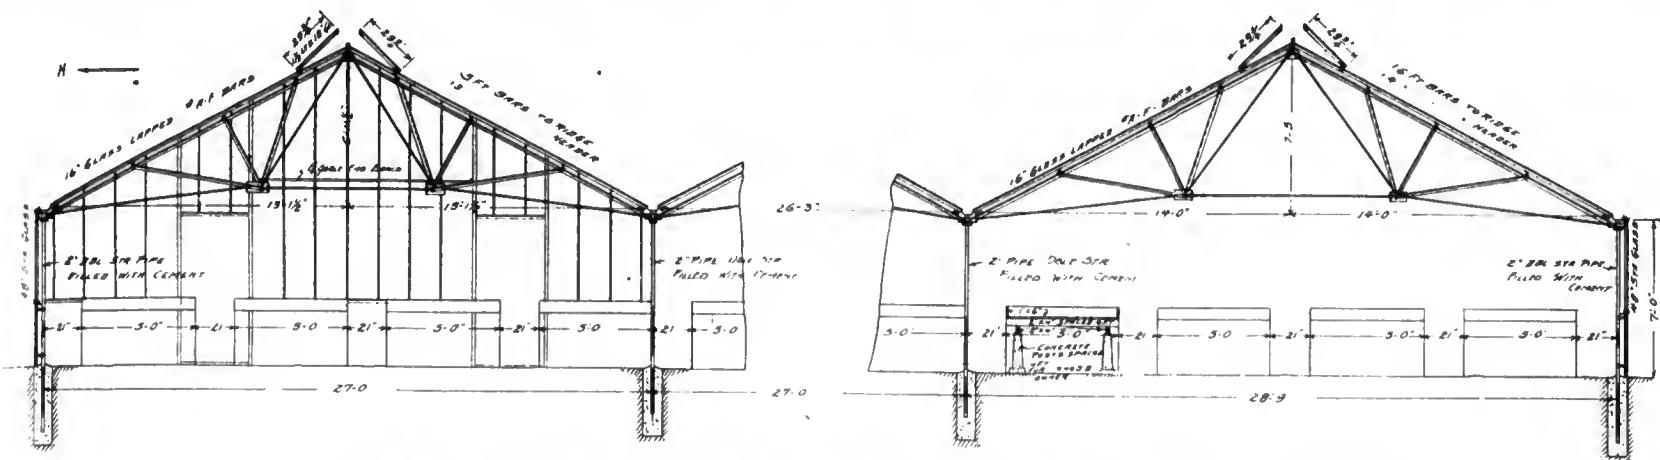

Fig. V, Illustrating Houses Twenty-seven Feet and Twenty-eight Feet Nine Inches Wide.

There is a limit to the width of houses for building in range form and my idea is that this limit is reached in the 34-foot house. The 34-foot house permits the use of five benches five feet wide and five walks about twenty-one inches wide. From this you will see the 34-foot house is a desirable type only when built in range form and there are the same objections to it as there are to the 27-foot width, in that the first house or the start of the range must be a larger house. This first house would need to be about thirty-five feet eight inches.

Widths of Detached Houses.

Now we come to the houses that can be built in detached style only, or, in other words, must stand alone, as single units. In these detached houses there is always one walk more in a house than there are benches. In other words, if there are six benches, there must be seven walks, unless what are known as side benches are used against the walls, on the outside. These side benches are sometimes desirable, but in our first start on the standardization scheme let us disregard them entirely. To get started on the detached houses, let us assume that five feet is the ideal width for benches and that twenty inches is the ideal width for walks. Let us design our first house to contain six benches, each five feet wide, a total of thirty feet of width of benches. This makes it necessary to have seven walks, each twenty inches wide, a total of 140 inches, or eleven feet eight inches. This would give us a width of forty-one feet eight inches. To provide for concrete walls, brick walls, etc., let us set up our first house as forty-two feet. From this basis we can progress to any other standard width by simply adding five feet for each bench that would be added and twenty inches for each additional walk, or a total of six feet eight inches for every bench that we add. [Fig. VI shows the arrangement alternating 5-foot benches and 20-inch walks.]

This makes our next house forty-eight feet eight inches, the next one fifty-five feet four inches, the next one sixty-two feet, the next one sixty-eight feet eight inches, the next one seventy-five feet four inches, and so on.

The Benches and Walks Again.

The standard widths which I have mentioned are, as you can readily see, based on something that is not standard. In other words, it has been necessary to set up a standard width of bench and a standard width of walk in order to figure on any standard width of house, and so we go back again to the question of which width of bench is the ideal width. It has always been my idea to decide first on the width of the bench and the width of the walk, and then build the house above them. When we have finally decided on a standard bench and a standard walk we have absolutely solved the entire standardization scheme, as far as the width of the greenhouse is concerned.

All of the measurements given for the widths of houses are from center to center of walls, or rather wall posts. Others may want to establish standard widths based on inside measure or outside measure, but that really makes little difference, so long as the standard will permit of an ideal bench arrangement.

Construction Details.

Can we ever hope to standardize the thousand and one different patterns of material and the thousand and one different methods of building walls, roofs, benches, etc? If I correctly view the standardization scheme, I do not think this will ever be possible, nor do I think it practical. My idea is to let every manufacturer preserve the individuality of his product. Let every manufacturer strive to better his designs, his patterns, his construction and every part of his product. The idea is to standardize greenhouses so that every manufacturer making this class of material can carry in stock his own individual product for all standard sizes of greenhouses. This, it seems to me, is the common-sense way of looking at it.

But here we run against an obstacle that would hardly occur to the layman. Suppose that we would establish a width of forty-two feet for our first detached greenhouse. Suppose this width has been figured from center to center of wall posts and that gutters measuring twelve inches in width are used on each of the walls. Here comes another manufacturer who makes an ice-clearing eave plate, and on account of the difference in placing the posts, etc., his center to center measurement would be different, using the same interior arrangement for the benches and the walks. How are we going to overcome things of this character? Frankly, I do not just see at this time how these difficulties can be surmounted, but is it really essential to carry the standardization scheme as far as this? Could not each manufacturer, accepting the standard widths as finally decided on, make his own standard designs, using his own individual patterns? Would this not be practical, anyway?

Sections and Size of Glass.

The size of glass for greenhouses is probably more standard than any other thing. It is probably safe to say that seventy-five to eighty per cent of all the greenhouses built in the United States in 1912 were glazed with 16x18 glass, and probably eighty-five to ninety per cent were glazed with sixteen inches between the roof sashbars. This width of sixteen inches seems to be the happy medium, for it permits the use of 14x16, 16x18, 16x20 and 16x24 glass. The same number of square feet of glass in the first two sizes would be the same price, while in the next two sizes the price runs from 20 to 35 cents per box more. The size of glass has much to do with the length of the sections. If greenhouses can be manufactured and put up in sections, these sections must be standard. Using 16-inch glass permits making standard sections approximately eight feet four inches in length for all iron frame houses.

Growers and manufacturers should all get together on this question of the width of glass and then the manufacturers can easily decide on the standard sections.

One of the prime objects in writing this article has been to start a discussion on the subject. The writer hardly presumes the scheme, as outlined, could be adopted in its entirety. There are many things to be decided on and the subject requires the thought and attention of the best minds in this line of industry. It is the writer's hope that something may come of this and that the day is not far distant when both the manufacturer and the consumer shall reap the benefit of a standardization scheme. There is no doubt whatever that standardization will benefit everyone concerned.

propagating purposes. The grower failing to do these things is likely sooner or later to have much trouble with diseased plants, which intelligent foresight could have obviated.

Geraniums for Summer Flowering.

At most of the summer resorts there is considerable call quite late in the season for geraniums and such customers are generally willing to pay a good price for plants which will give some immediate effect in beds, boxes or vases. Some growers make up fancy earthenware vases of one color and find they sell well. These are filled some time before they are likely to be wanted and are, or should be, well bloomed when customers come looking for them. The ivy varieties and others, the result of crosses between the ivy and zonale sorts, are splendid for this work and the singles are just as good as the doubles in many ways, especially for window and piazza boxes, as they bloom even more persistently.

BREMOND FRERES' NEW FREESIA.

Albert & Leon Brémond Frères, of Ollioules, South France, who succeeded to the bulb growing and exporting business of the late Louis Brémond, their father, are about to introduce a new variety of freesia, which they call Excelsior. They claim that it is superior in every way to Freesia refracta alba. The bulbs and blooms of the new variety are said to be much larger than those of F. refracta alba, the bulbs being often as large as eleven centimeters in circumference, or somewhat in excess of four inches, while the flowers are from three to four times larger than those of F. refracta alba. The originator describes the foliage of Excelsior as elegant, the fragrance strong and the stems long. It usually is grown in the open, but also can be forced.

SEASONABLE CULTURAL NOTES.

Winter Geraniums.

Work on Memorial day stock will occupy most of the time at the disposal of the average country florists these days, but it is well not to neglect other plants which are to do service later in the year. Do not overlook the geraniums which you may wish to have in flower for next Thanksgiving or Christmas. Once they get badly pot-bound and dried up a few times, they are of little further value for growing along. Give them a shift, no matter if it is quite a small one, just to keep the little roots active. Use some well decayed manure in the compost and a little fine bone, and firm the compost well. If you have a coldframe at your disposal, where these geraniums can be plunged to their brims in fine coal ashes, they will not require so much water and will grow vastly better than on a hot greenhouse bench.

The varieties to be grown for Christmas flowering must depend on the colors usually in demand. As a rule, such reds as S. A. Nutt, Jacquerie, Paul Crampel, Ricard, The Sirdar, Grant and Maxime Kovalevski are in greatest demand, with a moderate call for the pink shades, and few wanting the whites. Next to scarlet, the salmon orange shades will be found the most popular and growers will not go far wrong in stocking up on them.

Geraniums for Stock.

Often florists sell out their geraniums too closely, leaving an insufficient number to plant out for stock or for beds as an ornamentation to the entrance to the establishment. The grower who will fill a good-sized bed or border with each of the geraniums he grows, and label them so that he who runs may read, will not only beautify his home grounds but advertise his stock and educate the public on varieties they will want another season.

It is a big blunder to wait until every late customer is satisfied and then plant out the hard, dried up remnants for stock. They probably will live and grow, but will never give the cuttings you ought to have. It is as necessary with geraniums as with other plants to have clean, thrifty stock for WARENDORFF RESTS.

Bermuda, where the Easter lily grows, is a favorite resting place for the New York florists—at the close of a hard season, or before a busy one, the nerve-racked retailer or the care-burdened grower will slip away for a few days' quiet ocean trip to the islands where it is always summer. There isn't much seclusion about it, for one is almost sure to meet business acquaintances. For instance, when the camera man was there a few weeks ago, there, too, was Victor Warendorff, manager of the Warendorff store in the Ansonia hotel, New York. You see the result. Mr. Warendorff's trip was rather longer than usual this season, including the Panama canal, Cuba and the Isle of Pines.

CURLED LEAVES ON BAY TREES.

Can you tell me what causes the leaves of bay trees to curl like the enclosed sample? The trees have been kept in a temperature of 40 to 42 degrees. They are in fine condition with the exception of this one defect.

The cause of this trouble is not exactly clear, but the specimens enclosed look as though the plants had suffered from lack of water at some previous time.

ASPARAGUS FOR FORCING.

I have some 9-year-old asparagus roots that I bedded ten inches deep in well rotted compost under the benches of my greenhouse, February 7. I want to crop them next year. What would be the best way to handle them?

W. F. G.

Asparagus for forcing should be dug as near to the time it has to be forced as possible. The roots should not be exposed to the air any more than is necessary. Nine-year-old roots should be first-class for forcing. You say you covered them ten inches deep with compost. You could have had a fine crop a week or two later had you barely covered the roots. You put too heavy a covering on them, and while you may get a late picking, these roots will be of no value whatever for forcing next winter. Dig fresh roots and get them into the greenhouse without delay. Just cover the roots, water well and then leave them alone. In a warm house stalks can be cut in ten to fourteen days; it will take longer in a cool house. The roots should have had a good freezing before lifting. C. W.

ashes. Give them sufficient space so that they will not crowd too soon. If you have good plants now in 3-inch pots you are all right, but just as soon as they need a shift, give it to them. Be sure that thrips and aphids are not allowed to cripple and disfigure the plants. If you do not care to smoke, give them a spraying once a week with Aphine or some of the nicotine extracts.

Tuberous-rooted Begonias.

Tuberous-rooted begonias are perhaps the most useful of all summer-flowering plants of a moderate size and as they are persistent bloomers, no florist can go far wrong in growing a good batch of them. As bedding plants their sphere is somewhat limited unless partial shade can be given them, although they succeed well in the open at seaside resorts where the nights are cooler and the atmosphere softer than inland, but for piazza boxes or window boxes where shade can be given, for hanging baskets and for standing in groups on piazzas they are among the most valuable of all flowering plants.

Tubers are inexpensive and it is not too late even now to start a batch. These plants will start to bloom within a couple of months and will be found useful. Tuberous begonias want a cool, airy greenhouse and the shade must not be too heavy or it will make the plants drawn and soft. They are liable to be attacked by thrips in the early stages of growth and either a weekly fumigation or spraying must be given to keep it in check. When in active growth and well potbound, liquid manure can be given twice a week with benefit.

Sedalia, Mo.—The Archias Floral Co. reports an unusually busy season and the force under C. H. Gleason, the foreman, is constantly at work filling orders.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Gardenias.

Where an early winter crop of gardenias is wished for, and where the plants are to be grown in benches, planting should, if possible, be done by the early part of June. Of course, good gardenias can be had from much later plantings, but early plantings, which allow the plants to send their roots through all the soil, are far less liable than the later ones to get cold feet and drop their buds.

In the way of compost use one which is fairly coarse and through which water will pass freely. It is best to shake out the finer particles of soil. Add to this some cow manure and leaf-mold, not too much decayed, and some coarse sand and the plants will revel in it. Better leave out bone and other fertilizers until the gardenias need some stimulants in the way of top-dressings. Plants can be set 12 x 18. Leave a little saucer-like depression around each plant, and when watering soak each plant individually rather than wet the whole bed. Let the plants dry out fairly well between waterings. An excess of moisture is likely to bring along the yellows later in the season. Play the spray nozzle on the hose among the plants to keep the mealy bug in check.

Cyclamens.

Keep the young cyclamens potted along carefully. If you can get these in nice flower for Thanksgiving and Christmas there will be no trouble in disposing of them. No matter whether you are planning to grow your plants in the greenhouse or in coldframes through the summer, it will pay to at least partially plunge them in fine coal

GREENHOUSE INDUSTRY

AS A MARKET FOR COAL

SECOND LARGEST ITEM.

Cost of Fuel in the Trade.

Five years ago the coal salesman who got the greenhouse trade was the jolly good fellow. Today—and the florists' contracts are each season better worth having—the man who brings home the bacon is the one who can tell the florist how to reduce his fuel bill and make it work out in practice.

Is there any other industry in which fuel consumes so large a part of gross income? Perhaps! And if there is, that field is especially well worth the careful, serious, studious attention of the coal trade.

Just how much coal goes under greenhouse boilers in a season nobody really knows, but it is so big that it seemed important to the United States Census Bureau to find out. However, the census people did not make out very well with floriculture; such of the figures as have been published have been sharply questioned by the trade authorities, and the Census Bureau never has ventured to tell what it found out about fuel consumption. Of course the fuel consumption varies widely with the character of the coal and the tightness of the greenhouses. To a certain extent, also, it varies with the severity of the season, the character of the heating apparatus and the ability of the man in charge. Nowadays, too, a great many greenhouse establishments operate pumps, dynamos and refrigerating apparatus, adding something to the cost of fuel over what would be required for warmth alone.

Eighteen Pounds to Foot.

Taking the replies of a number of widely separated florists, burning various kinds of fuel under various conditions, it appears that the average season's consumption is about eighteen pounds of coal for each square foot of glass exposure. That is no rule of thumb, but it seems to be a fairly accurate general average and, curiously enough, the average seems to be extremely close to the experience of the larger establishments of the middle west, where acres are under glass and where New River and Pocahontas coals are the favorite fuels.

Now, eighteen pounds of coal of itself does not make a very big pile, but there are any number of greenhouse establishments through the United States that contain from a million to two million square feet of glass. He is not a very big florist who does not have 50,000 feet, and even the smallest florists burn two or three cars of coal a season.

In Cook county, Illinois, alone there is over ten million feet of greenhouse glass! Just how many feet of glass there are in the greenhouses of the United States nobody knows. The census tried to find out, but hasn't published its findings. [In its issue of May 1, The Review published the census figures of area covered by glass in 1909, showing 105,165,730 square feet.—Ed.] Those in position to keep best in touch with such matters estimate that the greenhouse industry has just about tripled in size and in importance to the coal trade in the last fifteen years. The principal increase now by new people entering the field is in the west, though glass area still increases rapidly in the east and the bulk of those in the business still are in the section east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio.

Heavy Cost of Cartage.

Ten years ago the greenhouse trade entered a boom period—the florist did not care any more about the cost of fuel than he did about the price of the luncheon the coal salesman bought him when the florist came to town. But things are different now. While the industry still is growing rapidly—the mills that make a specialty of greenhouse structural material build millions of feet of greenhouses a year and increase their output every season—the old, happy-go-lucky methods no longer suffice. There is a good profit in the business—no one ever hears of a grower going bankrupt—but the old-time easy money is not there. Production has so nearly caught up with demand, at the big growing centers at least, that the good money depends on improving quality, maintaining production and keeping down the cost of operation.

One of the ways of cutting cost of operation is of direct interest to the wholesale coal trade. The older greenhouses were located just anywhere. Nowadays no one would think of starting a greenhouse range for growing cut flowers anywhere except beside a railroad, where a sidetrack is obtainable, so that coal can be received in dump cars. As an instance of this, a big greenhouse plant near Chicago just now is removing at a cost of close to $100,000 from a location over half a mile from the railroad to one beside the railroad's right of way. The owners found that from a small beginning the cost of cartage had increased with the size of the plant until it amounted to $6,000 per year.

Going After Business.

Wages is the big item of cost in a greenhouse. It is a popular idea that flowers "just grow," but the fact is that good flowers in quantity can only be had at the cost of skilled labor, and lots of it. There are many greenhouses that carry 200 to 300 names on the payroll. Fuel is the next biggest item of expense; also, it is the one in which the most important saving can be made. The grower cannot cut down his help without his income suffering, but if he can reduce his coal consumption he isn't slow to adopt the apparatus that will do the trick. That's why the coal salesman who can give his customer intelligent and disinterested advice in such matters makes so many firm friends among florists.

The average coal man hasn't paid much attention to the greenhouse trade. It's big business, but it's difficult to obtain by the methods used to get the factory trade. A few florists have city offices, where the buying and selling are done, but by far the greater number of the big greenhouses are far from the main traveled road, out in the country, miles from where a coal salesman has any other customer. Out of sight is out of mind. Consequently the average greenhouse buyer isn't drummed to death, the way the factory manager usually is, even though the greenhouse uses several times as much coal. Consequently the florist has the mail order habit. He buys practically all his supplies at a distance, by mail, so why not his coal?

Interesting the Trade.

As a matter of fact, those coal operators and jobbers who have tried getting the greenhouse orders by mail have found it paid, directly and indirectly. Coal men are not advertising experts; coal is coal in so far as their advertisements usually go, but most of them can put some selling talk into their letters when they learn of a new buyer who is in the market for, say, fifty cars, as his season's supply. And the inquiries from the florists who wanted only two or three cars, for immediate shipment, have been valuable. Even the inquiries from the one-car-at-a-time man are useful. Such a letter came in one day to a selling agent who had been trying to interest a retailer in the same town with the florist. The selling agent wrote for details and found the florist had little shed room and no cartage facilities but burned about three cars a season. He then wrote to the best retail coal dealer in the town, whom he had never before been able to interest. He quoted the retailer a price and told him to go after the florist's order. The retailer got it, and when he ordered the car for the florist he ordered two cars more to go into stock. The retailer used ten cars of that coal that season.

Probably there is no grade of fuel taken from the earth that isn't burned in greenhouses, but the West Virginia smokeless coals have come to be more largely used in greenhouses, perhaps, than any others. It may be that these coals have been fortunate in having the assistance of a number of manufacturers of grates, who have recommended the coal to go with the apparatus, but it seems that, if this is the case, the shoe would fit as well on the other foot and that all those interested in the sale of anthracite or western bituminous coals have to do to establish a big, permanent and steadily widening outlet for their product is to show the greenhouse man what apparatus he needs to burn that special grade of coal at a saving over present costs.

Regular Delivery a Factor.

The big greenhouse contracts usually are made early. Every grower wants to fill his storage space to its capacity during summer, and the larger his requirements usually the more fore-

Coal men are not advertising experts; coal is coal in so far as their advertisements usually go, but most of them can put some selling talk into their letters when they learn of a new buyer who is in the market for, say, fifty cars, as his season's supply. And the inquiries from the florists who wanted only two or three cars, for immediate shipment, have been valuable. Even the inquiries from the one-car-at-a-time man are useful. Such a letter came in one day to a selling agent who had been trying to interest a retailer in the same town with the florist. The selling agent wrote for details and found the florist had little shed room and no cartage facilities but burned about three cars a season. He then wrote to the best retail coal dealer in the town, whom he had never before been able to interest. He quoted the retailer a price and told him to go after the florist's order. The retailer got it, and when he ordered the car for the florist he ordered two cars more to go into stock. The retailer used ten cars of that coal that season.

Probably there is no grade of fuel taken from the earth that isn't burned in greenhouses, but the West Virginia stoveless coals have come to be more widely used in greenhouses, perhaps than any others. It may be that these growers have been fortunate in having the assistance of a number of manufacturers of grates, who have recommended the coal to go with the apparatus, but it seems that, if this is the case, the shoe would fit as well on the other foot and that all those interested in the sale of anthracite or eastern bituminous coals have to do to establish a big, permanent and steadily increasing outlet for their product is to show the greenhouse man what apparatus he needs to burn that special grade of coal at a saving over present costs.

Regular Delivery a Factor.

The big greenhouse contracts usually are made early. Every grower wants to fill his storage space to its capacity during summer, and the larger his requirements usually the more fore-handed he is in this important particular. The man who uses only a few cars may take chances on the open market at a late date, but the big fellows cannot afford to. One of the important items of service that counts strongly for or against a coal man, but over which he has little control, apparently, is the matter of regular

GILBERT LEONARD GRANT, than whom few men have been more closely identified with the development of the florists' trade, especially during the years in which the industry was finding its footing, died Sunday, May 18, at Seabright sanitarium, Santa Cruz, Cal., following an operation for appendicitis.

Mr. Grant had for some years made his home at Overlook, near Soquel, Cal. He had enjoyed his usual health until the end of April, when an abdominal difficulty of long standing became acute. Diagnosis was made by Dr. B. H. Bush as probably appendicitis, but some of the symptoms were obscure and he asked to have the advice of Dr. Emmet Rixford, professor of surgery at Leland Stanford University, the most noted surgeon in the state and one of the ablest in the country. Dr. Rixford was assisted by Dr. Rumwell, who came down from San Francisco with him, and by Dr. Bush. The presence of the distinguished surgeon excited no little interest among the medical fraternity of Santa Cruz and the operation was witnessed by Dr. Piper, who gave the anesthetic; Dr. Bell, Dr. Congdon and Dr. I. C. Bush. It proved to be a peculiarly aggravated case of long standing, but the patient rallied strongly and quickly was considered out of danger. Indeed, his condition was so good that May 6, in a note to his business associates in Chicago, dictated to his daughter, he said: "Just a line to let you know I am getting along even better than the doctors anticipated; I expect to be up and around again within two weeks from this date." May 8 he wrote with his own hand: "The operation has made a new man of me." His progress continued excellent until May 15, when complications developed that necessitated a second operation, which, in his weakened condition, was followed by dissolution, at 12:55 p. m. May 18.

The descendant of Matthew Grant, one of the original company who came, in 1630, to Dorchester, in the Mary and John, Gilbert Leonard Grant was the son of Gilbert William Grant and Susan Lawton Grant, born at Jersey City, N. J., June 15, 1859. His father was a wholesale merchant in New York until 1861, in which year the family removed to Cleveland, O. Here the son received his education. He passed through the grammar grades, but was then obliged to go to work, as his father lost everything in the oil-refining business during the period in which Mr. Rockefeller was putting into execution his plans of "benevolent assimilation." He learned telegraph operating, but after a few years at the key drifted into the florists' business. Seeking a larger field, he removed to Chicago in 1883, and was engaged in the wholesale florists' business until 1885, when he became editor and manager of the American Florist, then being established. He continued in this connection for fourteen years, disposing of his interest in 1897 to organize the Florists' Publishing Co., and found The Florists' Review. He continued the president of the company and the editor and manager of the paper until his death, although from 1903 he gradually freed himself of the details of active work and had for several years made his home in the foothills of the Santa Cruz mountains overlooking Monterey bay, in California.

As a publisher Mr. Grant became known in all the principal printing centers of the country. He was a pioneer and leader in developing many of the processes now every-day matters in the trade. Some years ago, when Mr. Grant was stating his requirements as to presswork, binding and mailing to the head of an establishment doing that sort of work, he was told: "You are trying to get out a high-class magazine at daily-paper speed, and that's an impossibility." He didn't believe it was impossible, and it proved not to be. Mr. Grant early saw the coming importance of the half-tone engraving, and was one of the first Chicago publishers to use it freely. It was then necessary to send photographs to Philadelphia, there being no Chicago engraver in a position to use the process. In view of the present almost universal use of the half-tone plate it is interesting to recall that this was little over twenty years ago. As an editor his aim was to hold his course ever close to the commercial side of his subject, the main function of a trade paper, as he saw it, being to assist its readers in making two dollars grow where only one grew before, not only by the expansion of business but through the elimination of waste and the thorough utilization of up-to-date methods.

In 1892 he and William Falconer founded the publication Gardening, of which he continued as business manager from its inception until 1897, during which time it was the leading journal published in America for non-commercial gardeners and florists.

In 1892 Mr. Grant became a member of the Chicago Publishers' Association, the name of which was afterward changed to the Chicago Trade Press Association. He was its vice president in 1893 and 1894 and its president in 1895.

Mr. Grant took, in 1886, the initial step that led to the organization of the Chicago Florists' Club, serving as its secretary during the first four years of its existence. In 1890 he was placed in the chair, serving two terms, and was again its president from 1895 to 1898. In 1890 he was one of the founders of the Horticultural Society of Chicago and was its secretary in 1891 and an active member of its executive committee continuously for many years. In the early days of flower shows in Chicago he was indefatigable and it has been said that it was largely due to his talent for the work that the exhibitions in Chicago soon became known as the largest and most successful flower shows held anywhere in America.

While devoting so much of his time outside of business to the florists' and publishers' organizations he still found opportunity for equal activity in the affairs of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In 1883 he became a member of Phoenix Lodge No. 233, of Cleveland, transferring in 1884 to Excelsior Lodge No. 22, of Chicago. He became chief officer of the lodge in 1886. In 1885 he joined Chicago Encampment No. 10 of the Patriarchal branch of the I. O. O. F. and was its chief officer in 1887. In 1889 he became a member of the Grand Lodge of Illinois.

Almost from its inception Mr. Grant was a member and for many years an active participant in the affairs of the Society of American Florists. His name was added to the roll in 1887 and has been there continuously ever since. He attended every convention from 1887 to 1902, and most of those since, several times in the last ten years having made the journey from California especially to attend the annual August gatherings. Another trade organization in which he took special interest, and of which he has been a member since its inception, is the American Carnation Society.

Mr. Grant's last trip east was for the purpose of attending two conventions, in August, 1912. He came to Chicago as a California delegate to the first national convention of the Progressive party and assisted in the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt for the presidency. Keen interest as he took in that part of the work, it was second to the pleasure he derived in assisting in nominating for the vice presidency his friend, Governor Hiram Johnson, who is at present so conspicuously in the public eye in the matter of the alien land bill in California.

Gilbert Leonard Grant married at Cleveland, May 21, 1879, with Josephine Elizabeth Nichols, adopted daughter of Martin Van Buren Rose, her mother's brother, and known as May Louise Rose. She was born in a village called Tanner's Brook, in New Jersey, March 10, 1861. Her mother died when she was but 3 months old. Mr. and Mrs. Grant lived the happiest of home lives. They had six children: Maud Ethel, now the wife of Walter S. Miller, secretary and treasurer of the Florists' Publishing Co.; Alda Rose, who married Harold L. Graham, now living at San Diego, Cal.; Gilbert Walter, who died in the U. S. Bennington when that vessel was blown up in the harbor of San Diego July 21, 1905; Bessie Mabel, now the wife of James Olive, a photographer in Santa Cruz, Cal.; Edwin Robert and Helene, now living at Overlook with their mother.

Most democratic of men, G. L. Grant occupied a place in the regard of those who knew him that neither time nor distance could affect. He was known as one who always could be counted on—everybody knew just where to find him. He was frank and direct in all his dealings. With him the first consideration was the right or wrong in a proposition. If a thing appeared to him to be wrong he would have nothing to do with it, and if it were right he would go ahead, doing cheerfully for right's sake what some men would do grudgingly if at all. He was kindly, generous, thoughtful, tolerant. Inflexible of purpose, it was not his nature to quarrel with those whose attitude toward himself was not as he would have liked it—rather, he went his way; his combativeness was not aroused until he found right being disregarded—then he became adamant. Those of his business associates who came to know him best feel that humanity is the loser in his death, but that humanity is greatly the gainer from his having lived.

AN APPRECIATION.

We wish to express our high regard for the late Mr. Grant. Both Mr. Bassett and myself have known him well for the last twenty years and always admired his many good qualities. He was a thoughtful man in every way; thoughtful of others, gentle of manner, and always kindly spoken. Of his ability we all know and his knowledge of the flower business was wonderful. Last summer, when we were just starting to build at Gregg's Station, he came on a visit to us and, climbing up on top of a tall scaffold, he told what he would like to build there, as he surveyed the surrounding land with his eyes. His plan was quite similar to our own, but he had a number of splendid features in it which we gladly adopted. He was enthusiastic as to his idea of a modern greenhouse establishment and showed he had a master mind, both as to details and in grand general plan. He was practical in everything. To those who knew him he was a most entertaining talker on all subjects, but especially on horticulture, for on that subject he was the best informed man we ever met. He was one of the foundation stones of the florists' trade and helped to build the trade to its present position more than any one man that we know of. His death is a great loss to us all and it is hard to express in words the feeling of sadness it has occasioned.

OBITUARY.

William C. Strong.

William C. Strong, for forty-eight years a resident of Waban, Mass., and for many years owner of an extensive nursery at Brighton, died in New York May 14, at the home of his son, 80 Morningside drive, where he had been living for the last year or two. Mr. Strong, who had been four times president of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, was a native of Hardwick, Vt., where he was born ninety years ago. He removed to Newton and established himself on a large farm when he was a young man. He was always an active member of the Newton Highlands Congregational church. He gave up business nearly fifteen years ago. His wife, who had been dead about two years, was a Miss Sarah J. Davis, of Newton. He leaves one son, Dr. Lawrence Strong, at whose home he died, and two daughters, Misses Margaret Strong, of New York, and Isabel Strong, of Washington, and a brother, Dr. E. E. Strong, of the American Board of Foreign Missions.

C. L. Doran.

Charles L. Doran, at one time a prominent Sixth avenue florist, in New York, died May 15, aged 58 years. He retired from the trade to become a contractor in the employ of the city and was successful. J. A. S.

The Market.

For the middle of May cut flower business was good right through last week. Mothers' day gave the market a pretty good cleaning up and there is now no great surplus of anything. Roses are perhaps the slowest moving flowers on the list, but even on these the clean-up is fairly good. Of American Beauty some nice flowers are coming in, not, however, in any great quantity. These sell well, thanks to the remarkably cool weather experienced for ten days. The quality of all roses continues remarkably good. In yellows Lady Hillingdon is now quite a favorite, coming next to Bulgarie in popularity. Carnations are still moving well. Of course there are some poor flowers which are hard to move, but good prices are obtainable for the bulk. Nearly all growers still seem to be somewhat off crop.

Sweet peas are abundant. For the long-stemmed stock there is a good call, but a lot of poor flowers are hard to sell at any price. Dutch bulbous flowers are now limited to late tulips and Narcissus poeticus. Another week will finish these. Spanish iris and Gladiolus Peach Blossom and Blushing Bride are each abundant. There is an abundance of callas and lilies. There are too many antirrhinums. The demand is best for the pink shades. Yellow marguerites continue to have the preference over such whites as Mrs. Sander and Queen Alexandra. Double bachelor's buttons sell well and the quality is first-class. Gardenias are rather more plentiful and there is now a good supply of Cattleya Mossiae, with some gigas and Mendellii. Lily of the valley has been moving more slowly the last few days. For green stock there has been a tolerably good call.

Business in bedding plants now is becoming quite active. The call for pansies, myosotis, daisies and geraniums is the best.

Club Meeting.

There was an attendance of 150 at the club meeting May 20. Wilfred Wheeler, Concord, the new secretary to the state board of agriculture, gave an eminently practical talk on fruit culture, which was much appreciated, and a lively discussion followed. Several new members were elected. The field day at Madbury, N. H., on the next day, May 21, was referred to and the president stated that an attendance of 150 and a special train were assured. A committee was appointed to draw up suitable resolutions on the death of William Robb, late head gardener at the Boston City hospital and a club member for many years. It was announced that there would be the usual ladies' night, with an attractive program, at the June meeting. Three new members were elected. A letter of good cheer and some flowers were voted to John Barr, sick in Corey hospital. M. A. Patten & Co. were awarded a report of highest merit for Carnation Princess Dagmar on the exhibition table.

Exhibition.

There was an interesting and varied exhibition at Horticultural hall May 17. The Blue Hill Nurseries had a fine collection of named lilacs, also an assortment of hardy perennial flowers. The Breck-Robinson Co. received honorable mention for a group of evergreens, rambler roses, Phlox Miss Lingard, rhododendrons and chrysanthemums, nicely arranged.

Thomas T. Watt had a variety of orchid plants, also a number of cut spikes. Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane, had a fine stand of cut orchids, also a group of the new French hydrangeas. William Thatcher, gardener to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, had vases of Clarkia Salmon Queen and Gladiolus nanus in variety.

For six herbaceous calceolarias W. C. Rust, gardener to Mrs. C. G. Weld, won with fine specimens; second, Mrs. J. L. Gardner. A first-class certificate was awarded to Geo. F. Stuart for varieties of Calceolaria Stuarti, showing a considerable range of color. T. D. Hatfield, gardener to Walter Hunnewell, secured a first-class certificate for a group of a fine new deep yellow hardy azalea introduced by E. H. Wilson, shown under number.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co. had an extensive collection of Darwin and Cottage tulips, filling over 500 square feet of space, finely arranged. They received a bronze medal for these. A large table of the new Lilium myriophyllum, mostly in 3-inch pots, grown from bulbs the size of a filbert, and carrying one to three flowers each, was quite an attraction. They received honorable mention for Viola cornuta atropurpurea and primulas and a similar award for Rehmannia hybrida and Clematis montana rubens. The plant of the last named in full bloom had been growing outside unprotected for three years.

For forty-eight pansies M. Sullivan, gardener to W. Whitman, was first and J. L. Smith, gardener to A. W. Preston, second. For display of late tulips R. G. Chamberlain, gardener to Francis Skinner, won with a splendid lot, and A. W. Preston was second. For twelve varieties of Darwins and twelve varieties Cottage tulips, Mr. Chamberlain won, showing fine flowers.

A. W. Preston had a grand lot of Lilium candidum. W. Whitman showed a long table of late tulips and show pelargoniums. Mrs. J. L. Gardner had an excellent group of orchids tastefully arranged. W. C. Rust had a specimen Cattleya Mossiae, also standard hydrangeas. Mrs. E. M. Gill had her usual nice display of miscellaneous flowers.

In the vegetable classes there were some good exhibits. Edward Parker, gardener to Oliver Ames, was the most successful competitor, capturing five first prizes.

Various Notes.

David Weir, for eighteen years superintendent of the Brandegee estate, Brookline, retired May 17. Mr. Weir was one of the best known practical gardeners in the vicinity of Boston, and in his retirement, due to advancing years, will have the best wishes of a host of friends. He sails for Glasgow June 7, and will stay abroad until October. He has not visited Scotland for thirty-six years. On his return he will pay a visit to California and spend the winter there. Mr. Weir was given a handsome testimonial by the employees on the Brandegee estate, most of whom had been with him many years.

Charles Evans, of Watertown, is equipped for Memorial day with an excellent lot of Crimson Rambler and Dorothy Perkins roses and hydrangeas.

A. A. Pembroke, of Beverly, one of our most successful carnation growers, will plant a large batch of the new white Matchless next season. He will try carrying over some of his plants a second year. Several local growers have had splendid success with this plan.

Extensive improvements are to be carried out on the estate of Mrs. C. G. Weld, Brookline, where W. C. Rust has charge. A new English flower garden and an additional range of glass, 210 feet long, are included in the additions.

A call on H. M. Robinson & Co. showed this enterprising firm to be getting nicely settled in the new quarters. The four huge ice chests are all completed and everything will soon be in apple-pie order. The firm is preparing for an immense Memorial day trade.

May 17 was tag day for the Frost hospital, Chelsea, 12,000 carnations being sold on the streets in the morning for $2,000, and almost as many more in the afternoon.

Lester H. Mann, of Mann Bros., has been on the sick list for a few days, but is on active duty again.

S. J. Goddard finished planting out his carnations in the field May 19. He says his carnations have never yielded better returns than during the last season. Retail trade with him shows a steady increase.

Welch Bros. Co. is looking for a great Memorial day business. In addition to natural flowers, the company has stocked up heavily on artificial floral designs, etc., for which there is an insistent demand.

W. H. Tomlinson, of Dorchester, is busy these days disposing of dracenas and hydrangeas.

H. H. Bartsch, of the W. W. Edgar Co., says business could hardly be better. They have an immense stock of bedding plants, but the way orders are coming in shows that they will soon be cleaned out.

George W. Ayer, of Reading, was still shipping double violets this week to the Boston Coöperative Market. He also has a fine lot of Spencer sweet peas.

Charles Rapp, of Melrose Highlands, is cutting a nice crop of Cattleya Mossiae.

Perry Green, of Quincy, is at present a heavy shipper of pansies and Glaadiolus Blushing Bride.

W. S. Phelps, of Marlboro, has had the market to himself for some time with hardy larkspurs. He also has fine snapdragons.

Harry Quint, at 164 Tremont street, reports business up to date as good, with heavy call for Mothers' day.

W. C. Strong, of Waban, who died May 15 in his ninetieth year, was probably the oldest living member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. He joined it in 1848 and served as president most ably from 1870 to 1874. He was for a long term of years one of the most active workers for the society's interest. For quite a number of years the deceased gentleman conducted a flourishing nursery business, making hardy roses a specialty. Up to the last year or two Mr. Strong regularly attended the exhibitions at Horticultural hall and took a keen interest in everything pertaining to the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The Mishawum Flower Co., of Woburn, is at present a heavy shipper of spiraea and sweet peas to the Boston Coöperative Market.

James Farquhar is at present busy on landscape contracts and has a large force of men at work on them.

J. R. Shields, of Woburn, is shipping to the Boston Coöperative Market carnations of splendid quality for the season.

Thomas A. Cox, of Dorchester, is kept hustling these days supplying customers with rambler roses and hydrangeas.

Robert Hutcheon, of Stoughton, has a splendid lot of ten weeks' stocks, spiraea and carnations for Memorial day.

New England has experienced a spell of unusually low temperatures for the middle of May. Killing frosts destroyed early crops in some sections. The temperature May 10 fell to as low as 20 degrees in parts of New Hampshire, lilacs and other shrubs in flower being completely spoiled.

W. N. Craig.

DENVER.

The Market.

Trade for Mothers' day was entirely satisfactory, and while the demand was mostly for white carnations, in their absence other flowers and other colors sold well. Everyone is looking forward to a good Memorial day business. There is promise of a good cut of everything in the greenhouses, as well as some outdoor stock, such as snowballs, German iris, peonies, etc. Lilacs, unless there are some late varieties, will be gone by the last of May, being in their height now. Ferns have been exceedingly scarce for the past month, those coming from the east being of poor quality and hard to dispose of when there is anything else to be had. Smilax is also scarce, and is almost impossible to get.

Various Notes.

The dance and card party given by the Colorado Florists' Club at Cotillion hall was a success socially. Mr. Forter and Mr. Schilling seemed to be busy every minute during the evening directing the program.

At the last meeting of the Colorado Florists' Club a fine paper on "Designing" was read by Frank Fraser. It was the means of starting a discussion, and that, together with the question box, made the meeting an interesting one. C. R. Root presided, with E. P. Neiman as secretary and E. S. Kennedy as treasurer.

The store of the Colorado Seed & Nursery Co. is about the busiest place in town since spring business began. William Horlacher says he thinks he walks 1,000 miles a day.

C. U. Fohn, in charge of the greenhouses at Glen Eyrie, Colorado Springs, stopped off on his return from a trip to the Isle of Pines, where he is interested in a 50-acre grapefruit and orange grove.

Although many are complaining of a dull season, it is evidently not so with Emil Glauber. He has a new seven-passenger National automobile.

A new store has been opened at 110 Broadway by Sandberg & Davis.

N. E. De Golier, of Loveland, was in town on his way to Michigan to see his mother, who is ill.

A fine new ice-box adds greatly to the attractiveness of the store of the New York Floral Co.

Some fine orchids are being shipped into Denver by S. Knudsen, of Boulder, Colo. Mr. Knudsen will go into the orchid business more extensively next year, having just received a large number of plants, and he expects to be able to supply the flowers regularly.

The two stores of A. C. Sinram have been discontinued, and the stock and fixtures are in possession of T. D. Long, who has been appointed trustee by the creditors. Mr. Long will dispose of everything to the best advantage, and the proceeds will be divided among the creditors. M. R. J.

Brockton, Mass.—Robert McIntyre, 114 Gladstone street, has built an addition to his greenhouses.

St. Marys, O.—H. J. Vander Horst has completed a new greenhouse, 30x90 feet, using concrete construction.

Corry, Pa.—A. W. Warren, proprietor of the Corry Floral Co., plans to build another greenhouse in order to extend his wholesale trade.

Madison, N. J.—The Aphine Mfg. Co., which makes a general line of insecticides for gardeners, is introducing a new nicotine product on the market. It is called Nikotiana and contains twelve per cent nicotine.

Atlanta, Ga.—Irving Gresham, who is connected with C. A. Dahl Floral Co., has leased the store and greenhouses of the West View Floral Co. Mr. Gresham will continue his connection with the Dahl concern, and also operate the West View Floral Co. This change in no way affects either concern, but will bring Mr. Gresham into both.

Brunswick, Me.—Thomas Pegler, who came here a few months ago from Boston, where he had sustained a breakdown in health, has again suffered from the effects of overwork. He has been absent for some days, and did not let his friends know of his whereabouts, but he has returned to his home and his condition is improving.

New Britain, Conn.—Mrs. Elizabeth K. Eggert was the victim of an employee, George Esmond, according to her complaint to the police, whom she asked to arrest the man on the charge of stealing $50. She sent the man to the bank with money and checks to deposit, she says, and he neither went to the bank nor returned to her store.

Now for possibly the busiest week of all the year—the last week in May.

THE florist who gets a reputation for being prompt pay has a great advantage over the one who is known as being slow.

THE war of the roses is an ancient affair that promises to be completely outclassed by the modern war of the snapdragons.

NICOTINE extracts are not becoming any more plentiful, rather the reverse, and higher prices are predicted for insecticides.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE little Cecile Brunner rose has made a great hit as a corsage flower. It is popular on both coasts and, as travelers are flower buyers, or flower buyers are travelers, whichever you please, the call for Cecile Brunner is being heard in the best flower stores all over the country.

P. M. KOSTER, of Boskoop, Holland, horticultural commissioner to the exposition from the Netherlands, was in San Francisco recently making arrangements for location of site and for its landscape treatment. He gave out a statement that the Netherlands proposed to make as large a horticultural display as any country ever had made at an exposition, and that in the Netherlands section alone something like 500,000 bulbs will be planted.

RIGHT now every florist should take time to think over his financial situation. The man who sells at retail and gives credit will find his best customers leaving in June for their summer homes and if accounts are not settled within the next few weeks they will run until autumn. While some do it, few florists really can afford to carry their customers indefinitely; it makes the florist himself slow pay, if nothing worse. Of the numerous things that handicap the florists' business the evil of lax credits, slow collections and bad debts is the most embarrassing.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

Public notice is hereby given that R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., of White Marsh, Md., offers for registration the following geranium:

Name—Geranium Maryland.
Description—A semi-double geranium, the result of a cross of Alphonse Ricard and La Pilote, showing the character of growth and habit of blooming of La Pilote combined with the size and substance of Alphonse Ricard. The color is a most dazzling, fiery red. The florets average about two inches in diameter. The foliage has a heavy chocolate zone.
Date—May 10, 1913.

John Young, Sec'y.

GET WHAT YOU WANT.

Results have demonstrated that the wants of the trade are best satisfied by making them known through the columns of The Review. Like all other departments of the paper, that have worked a world of good for those using them, the department devoted to help and situations wanted, for sale, for rent and exchange propositions, as well as to business opportunities, is continually getting in its good work for the trade, and The Review is constantly receiving letters commending its far-reaching value.

Every week The Review finds good positions for capable growers, managers and sales people who seek new connections; it makes known the wants of wholesalers and retailers to capable people who want to better their positions; it sells and rents greenhouses; it sells equipment that growers and others desire to dispose of; it effects exchanges of property and equipment, and it puts good business opportunities squarely before the factors in the trade who are most likely to be interested.

Below is the proof of the indisputable statement that The Review is the medium to use to get what you want:

You are still running our boiler ad. The boiler was sold on Monday following the first insertion. We are getting more letters than we have time to answer. Take it out quick. Enclosed find $1 for The Review for another year.—Constien Bros., Upper Sandusky, O., May 12, 1913.

PREMIUMS OF NATIONAL SHOW.

The cash premiums have all been awarded and distributed, as have also the silver cups so generously donated by different parties.

Checks were mailed to the Rose, Carnation, Sweet Pea and Gladiolus Societies some two weeks ago.

The committee is making this fact public at this time so that if any winner has not received his prizes in full, he will kindly communicate at once with the secretary, John Young, 54 West Twenty-eighth street, New York.

The medals will be sent out as soon as they are received from the mint and a complete report of the show will be submitted to the S. A. F. at the convention in August.

The flower show committee begs to publicly thank every individual and society that helped to contribute toward the success of this exhibition.

Chas. H. Totty, Chairman.

The Great Central Market.

A more generous supply of stock has been on hand for the last few days and as a result prices have been somewhat easier than for the last three weeks. Although there is hardly any oversupply, the wholesalers do not find it easy to obtain fancy prices and it has been the rule for the buyer to name the values on most lines. Both roses and carnations have increased in number and the latter have ceased to command the figure that was the case a week ago, when the supply was not so abundant. Peonies also have taken a hand in the market and from now on the daily arrivals will affect the sale of other more staple stock. The quality and quantity improved with the last few days and excellent stock can be had at moderate prices. Almost any grade or color is to be had. Thus far

Large Supplies of MEMORIAL DAY STOCK

IT IS so well known that Amling flowers are unexcelled in quality and that Amling service is unapproached for promptness, care and accuracy that a constantly increasing number of buyers look to us for their holiday supplies. Amling prices always are right, but it is what you get rather than what you pay that is the measure of value. Order of Amling and there will be no regrets.

CARNATIONS

Those who had Amling carnations for Mothers' day will not fail to have Amling carnations for Memorial day. A good many buyers who divided up their orders for Mothers' day will put the whole order in our hands for May 30. There are few sources of supply for the Amling grade of carnations.

PEONIES

You know, and we know, that there is a lot of difference in peonies. Good peonies are about as profitable as anything a retail florist can handle for Memorial day, while poor peonies often are a dead loss, not to mention the disappointment. We do not handle miscellaneous consignments of peonies. Our supply comes from a few sources that have proved dependable and which have been steadily enlarged. You can bank on the quality of the peonies you get from Amling. We believe we shall be able to fill every order for Memorial day.

SWEET PEAS

There are no sweet peas to compare with our Butterflies. And our supply is by far the largest in the middle west. All colors.

ROSES

We shall have fine crops of Roses in all varieties for Memorial day—probably shall run out of short roses, but can furnish medium to long in quantity. Unless the weather turns unseasonably hot the quality will be especially good this year, for there never were finer roses than those we now offer. We have a full line.

LILIES

We can supply fine Easter Lilies in large quantity every day in the year. Prices always reasonable.

SNAPS

Fancy long Snapdragon in all colors, but specially fine is the fancy pink—just the Killarney shade.

OUR FERNS ARE GOOD

There are plenty of Ferns in the country, but those in storage are spoiling fast, and no one wants the soft new stock while good stored stock is to be had. Our Ferns are good—never kept better. How many will you have?

the peonies have been from Sarcoxie, Villa Ridge and other southern points. Vincennes is beginning this week and within a day or two the full flood will be on. Large sales are being made, for business is good, but quantities are going into cold storage for the holiday trade; the select tight buds are being wrapped, packed and hauled to the refrigerating plants to be brought back when the rush comes around in the closing days of the month.

In roses the Killarneys are showing evidence of better quality and the supply is somewhat heavier than a week previous. White is not so abundant, but the pink is in good supply. Of Maryland the quantities are gradually becoming more noticeable with the approach of warmer days. Richmond also is in fair supply, but there is some trouble in filling all the orders for the yellows, there being hardly enough to go around.

Carnations are holding up well in quality and the demand seems to be strong enough to move them out without any great cut in prices. All colors are abundant and, with favorable weather for the next few days, the wholesalers hope that the crops will be on in full force for the Memorial day demand. Sweet peas are again arriving on the market in large numbers and, while the stems are not, as a rule, so long as heretofore, the flowers are of good color and texture. The Spencers predominate. Other stock is in good supply and, although valley is in demand, there is plenty of the best grade to go around. Lilies can be had in numbers. Cattleyas are more plentiful, but not meeting much demand. Daisies sell well. Snapdragon continues plentiful, but quality is deteriorating and demand has fallen off. Outdoor tulips sell well in limited quantities. Spanish iris is less plentiful. Small flowered gladioli are becoming abundant, but only a few America and King have come in. Greens are plentiful.

Hunt Business Discontinued.

One of the oldest concerns in the trade closed its doors Saturday, May 17, when T. T. Clark, receiver for E. H. Hunt, Inc., acting on the orders from the Superior court, brought the business to a final windup prior to issuing a statement of stock on hand, for which sealed bids will be received within the next few days. After thirty-five years of activity in the wholesale cut flower, florists' supplies and seed trade, the concern passes out of existence. About two months ago Mr. Clark was appointed by Judge Dever to act in the capacity of receiver, to either put the business on a paying basis or close the books. Since March 24 Receiver Clark has had charge of affairs and up to last week it was thought matters might be straightened out, but May 16 it was decided to close the doors and sell the merchandise on hand to the highest bidder.

Various Notes.

Fred Sperry, of the old firm of Vaughan & Sperry, now A. L. Vaughan & Co., has again gone into the wholesale cut flower commission business. He has bought an interest in the Los Angeles Flower Market, at Los Angeles, where he has been located for some months. The other stockholder in the corporation also is a former Chicago florist, Charles E. Morton.

The A. L. Randall Co. received the first copies of its new catalogue from the bindery May 19 and will soon have the entire edition ready for mailing. It is much the largest and most complete catalogue the house has thus far issued.

A. Miller, A. T. Pyfer and N. P. Miller, who are the transportation committee of the Cook County Florists' Association, last week sent a circular letter to all members of the S. A. F., inviting them to join with the association on its special train via the St. Paul railroad from Chicago to the Minneapolis convention of the S. A. F.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., spent a day last week with the E. G. Hill Co., at Richmond, visiting other points on the way.

O. Johnson says the Batavia Greenhouse Co., Batavia, Ill., only forty miles from Chicago, will cut a few peonies by the end of this week. This would indicate large local crops by Memorial day.

C. W. McKellar made a trip of 175 miles in his 6-cylinder touring car May 18, paying a visit to the Eldredge greenhouses at Belvidere. He says he thinks peonies will be more plentiful than ever before for Memorial day.

ceived a carload of palms and aspidistras from Belgium.

T. E. Waters, manager of the supply department of Poehlmann Bros. Co., made a business trip to Duluth this week.

John Byers, of the Chicago Carnation Co., is being envied for his luck. In the cigar store raffle in which many of the wholesalers' employees participate he won a gold chain last week and this week won a watch to go with it.

N. J. Wietor, of Wietor Bros., says that May thus far has been even better than May of last year.

Notice has been given to the creditors of the Geo. M. Garland Co., bankrupt, that May 17 the trustee filed a petition for an order to sell certain real estate and personal property. The referee has set the hearing of said petition for May 29 at 10 a. m., at room 907 Monadnock block.

Tim Matchen says rose cuts have increased materially in the last few days but that there has as yet been no surplus.

Frank P. Brigham has rented the Fairview Greenhouses of the B. Eldredge estate at Belvidere and took charge May 15. The establishment consists of some 60,000 square feet of glass, producing cut flowers which are consigned to the Chicago market. Mr. Brigham has been in charge for three years.

E. E. Pieser says he believes the peony will be the life-saver again this Memorial day, just as it has been several times in the past. He thinks other flowers are likely to be in lighter supply than usual, while peonies will be more plentiful than ever before. That the peony is more popular than ever for Memorial day purposes he says is shown by the fact that the advance orders are larger than ever before. The printer managed to get the price of Richmond on the our selection roses in the advertisement of Kennicott Bros. Co. last week.

The E. Wienhoeber Co. had the family order, casket cover and about twenty-five pieces, for the funeral of Jacob Theurer at Graceland chapel May 17. The deceased was president of one of Chicago's largest brewing companies and the showing of flowers was the most lavish seen at any recent funeral. There were about 125 pieces, all large and costly.

Zech & Mann will move into their new quarters early next week, in order to have the additional room that the new place affords ready for the Memorial day shipping rush. The old quarters will be used until everything is in readiness at 30 East Randolph street, where the firm will do business in the future. Mr. Zech says that the larger quarters will permit them to handle the increase in both supply and trade that has crowded the old quarters and at the same time make it possible to go after an unlimited amount of shipping business.

N. P. Miller, of Kennicott Bros. Co., will rent his greenhouses at Wilmette, now being run by his sons, who want to go into another line of business.

Lubliner & Trinz are going slow in the matter of selecting a permanent home for their flower store. They are doing a fair business at the temporary location on Washington street, but are devoting most of their attention to the moving picture business. They are running four theaters in Milwaukee and a big one in Chicago, while a second large Chicago house is to be opened early in June.

An inspection of the Bowmanville ranges of J. A. Budlong leads Phil Schupp to think the crops will be hitting the high mark by Decoration day. He says the carnations have come along rapidly in the last few days. Valley, among other things, is enjoying a good demand.

A. E. Hunt has had considerable work in the bedding stock line during the last few weeks and says all hands have been busy trying to take care of all the outside work that has been offered for execution in Evanston.

Peonies have cut a big figure with John Sinner during the last few days and he does not anticipate any shortage on this flower for some time to come.

Ernest Farley, formerly connected with the Chicago market, has returned from a trip to the Pacific coast, where he found employment in the retail end of the business.

M. C. Gunterberg found an excellent market for peonies last week, and the backwardness of the season in some sections has made it necessary to look for additional shippers.

F. C. Hoerber, of Hoerber Bros., made a trip to Des Plaines this week and had a look at the crops and the plant where the storm caused damage the latter part of March. "Could hardly tell we had any trouble, as the three houses hit are now in good shape and the new concrete stack is progressing nicely," he reported.

A. Henderson & Co. moved into new quarters this week, taking over a ground floor location on the River street side of the building where they have been for the last year. The street store affords more room, inasmuch as it includes a large basement, which is to be used for a storage room. The new address is 369 River street.

Charles Erne, of Erne & Klingel, says his firm had a busy time for the last two weeks and remarks at the same time that Killarney and Sunburst have been selling as fast as they came in, although the former are more plentiful than before.

Several large funeral orders gave the Bohannon Floral Co. a busy time last week and among the most elaborate jobs was a casket cover of orchids, lilacs and lavender sweet peas, which was sent out May 19.

John Kruchten says the Festiva maxima peonies he has received this week have sold on sight to city buyers at good prices.

Bassett & Washburn report that out-of-town advance orders for Memorial day are unusually heavy on carnations.

John F. Kidwell, president of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is optimistic about the holiday supply and says the growers shipping to his house report excellent prospects.

The American Importing Co. will add to its office force June 1 Max Trachman, who will have charge of the florists' supply department. Business continues good with this concern and with several additions to the line everybody is kept pretty busy.

The Raedlein Basket Co. reports having received several cases of new goods from the factories in Germany, but says the force has been too busy to open them. A new machine, ordered some time ago to make the linings for cut flower baskets, will be set up in the near future. The motor car which has been out of commission has been put in shape to make a vigorous campaign this summer among the local retail trade.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The last week was fairly satisfactory in the wholesale market, a shortening of supply towards its close making a general cleanup possible. Prices held firm at the quoted rates, with a slight improvement in some lines. The approach of Memorial day will make any material concession from present quotations unlikely, and doubtless will steady and improve conditions until its observance has again become a memory. The present season compares favorably with other years at this time.

The general supply of carnations during the week increased daily, and May 17 $2 per hundred for the best was the general quotation, and from this down to $10 per thousand to the large buyers. The department stores seem to have shelved cut flowers partially, in their efforts to close out their and in many varieties. The best gigas and Mossiae seldom sell above 40 cents. No decorations or funerals of importance during the last week have created any undue demand. Lilies seldom sold above 6 cents and 2 cents was top for valley. A lot of the outdoor-grown valley is seen. Peonies are coming fast and shipments are expected to be heavy before the week is over. The flood of lilac is at its height. This week will likely remove it from the market. It has fallen to 15 cents a bunch and is a drug. There is no limit to the sweet pea shipments, and most of the arrivals are excellent. Gardenias are below the average in quality and few in number. There are always plenty of daisies, stocks and mignonette. Gladioli seem out of season and there is little call for them. Quite a number of shipping orders for cut flowers are being booked for Memorial day. The plantmen have anticipated a tremendous call for this occasion, and the greenhouses are filled to overflowing with all the popular varieties.

Various Notes.

The death of Charles L. Doran is recorded in this week's obituary column.

Large shipments of the southern peonies began arriving for H. E. Froment May 17.

Joseph Fenrich and family are already located for the summer at their home by the sea, at Bradley Beach.

The boiler room, rear shed and the ends of three greenhouses were destroyed by fire at the plant of E. D. Badgley, at Murray Hill. The damage of $2,000 was covered by insurance.

John Donaldson, John Miesem and Alex. Burns, Sr., visited the large greenhouse plant of Alex. Burns, Jr., at Spring Valley last week. Some 200,000 square feet under glass are devoted will play a vitally important part in getting your flowers into your customers' hands and getting their money into your cash drawer. Hundreds of florists have found this out to their steadily growing profit. They've found that in addition to saving them big money, the McCray has boomed business with a rush—by keeping the flowers in the beauty and freshness of perfect condition—and by displaying them with the very limit of attractiveness.

The Right Display Is the Big Secret of Success In Your Business

Maybe you've never looked at this Refrigerator question in its true light. Getting the right flowers is only half the battle. Selling is your big proposition.

A McCray Refrigerator

Write for our Catalogue No. 73, which gives all the facts—lots of useful information which you should have whether you're in the market now or not.

Alexander McConnell of New York City, whose refrigerator is shown in the cut, writes us as follows:

"The refrigerator you installed in our place of business has been very satisfactory in every particular. The flowers retain their freshness and color. The refrigerator is ventilated in so satisfactory a manner that the glass is never covered with moisture; consequently the stock can be inspected without opening the doors. The box is also economical in its requirement of ice."

The Rising Eastern Market.

Peonies have commenced arriving from the near-by fields. The cool nights that we have had now and then, with a timely rain, bid fair to give good quality and plenty of blooms for Memorial day. The market has fallen off a little during the week ending May 21, which is not to be wondered at, with Mothers' day a week past and Memorial day still a week away. In fact, when this week is compared with the corresponding week of previous seasons there is every reason to be satisfied. The crops have been heavy, but most of the stock that has reached the market in good condition has found buyers at prices that may be termed fair to middling. The difference between well-grown stock that has had care and poorly-grown stock that has not is apparent at a glance and the latter has a hard time indeed in the crowded market.

The features of the market outside of the all-important peony may be briefly described thus: Outdoor sweet peas have come; Cattleya gigas leads Cattleya Mossiae; double cornflower has reinforced single and is fashionable for boutonnières; asparagus sprays are in brisk demand and rather short supply.

There is an excellent out-of-town demand, from the south principally. Beauties, carnations of high grade, valley and a few other flowers are chiefly used. The sweet pea crops in that section are now at their height outdoors.

ing the annual reunion a scene of great animation. The grounds, thanks to the weather and to Charles W. Cox, were in exquisite condition, the grass bright green, evenly trimmed, without a bare spot to mar its beauty. The weather had not done so much for the beds as it had for the lawns. A beautiful bed of fancy geraniums had its luster dimmed by the rain, while many of the others plainly said that they would look a thousand times prettier in a fortnight. Then I shall hope to coax Mr. Cox to talk about his planting. Meanwhile I shall simply mention a pretty little bed over on one side that was formed with Ficus elastica, edged ration day. The late frosts hurt stock in some places, including many of the peonies, and considerable fruit is reported lost.

The wholesalers are handling immense quantities of stock, such as peonies, double white narcissi, miniature gladioli and sweet peas. The large crop of roses and carnations has a tendency to keep down prices, and the firms are glad to clean up at any price. Beauties also suffered last week. The retail stores nearly all handle bedding plants and, though it is still early, there are many people who must get their beds planted even if they do suffer from the cold nights. As stock is cheaper in the cut flower line, there are more purchasers and large quantities are moved.

The plantmen are just as busy as they can be and the stock is selling at the same old figures, as there never seems to be any change in prices in the plant end of the game, except in the case of an occasional dealer who cuts his prices in order to clean up quickly, and it is doubtful whether that is good

FORT MORGAN, COLO., May 17, 1913.

Please ship via express, promptly, one thousand fancy cut ferns for Memorial day use. The ferns which we have been getting from you have been so much better than those received from wholesale houses nearby, where they have been rehandled, that we feel justified in shipping them so far. Only wish that we could use enough to ship more frequently.

policy, as there is generally a scarcity of good stock at the end of the season.

Various Notes.

The McCallum Co. has had a small auto truck in use during the last week, to make the city deliveries, and it looks as if it would soon be necessary for everyone in the business to have a truck in order to keep up with the times.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co., at Bakerstown, has let a contract to the King Construction Co. for three large soil sheds, built in somewhat the same style as a greenhouse. About a car-load of sheet iron will be required for covering.

T. N. Barnesdale, of North Negley, has thrown his large grounds open to the public, that all may enjoy their beauty. There were thousands of visitors there last Sunday.

W. J. Smith is cutting a handsome lot of sweet peas and gladioli at his place in Canfield, O.

Strawberry growers report crops badly injured by frosts. Cherries and peaches also suffered.

The late reports on Mothers' day were to the effect that it was a small Easter and much better than in any previous year.

The E. C. Ludwig Floral Co. reports last week a banner week for funeral work. Mr. Ludwig is getting the auto fever and will probably be the next to purchase a machine.

The I. S. Crall Co., of Monongahela, reports trade as first-class. The firm's immense stock of bedding plants is moving out rapidly.

The Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, May 13, at the Carnegie Museum. It was not a favorable time, as many of the regular attendants were detained on other business, but there was a fair crowd in attendance and all were well repaid for going. Professor Jennings

The Market.

The weather has been unusually cool during the last week, retarding outdoor stock and keeping greenhouse products from accumulating. Roses of all kinds are used up as fast as they come in and the same is true of carnations. Outdoor valley and lilacs have come into the market, but do not meet with much demand. Sweet peas are finding a larger place in the list of flowers offered for funerals, etc. Pink and white spiræas are selling well and there are a few good pink hydrangeas on sale. Pansy plants are all sold. Violets are a back number. Asparagus Sprengeri is beginning to get scarce and ferns are poorer than ever, making it necessary to use leucothoe sprays a great deal for green. All outdoor work is being pushed along and everybody is making big preparations for Memorial day. Quite a number of orders are booked for that day.

Various Notes.

L. D. Robinson reports Mothers' day trade as extra good. He made a specialty of boxes of cut flowers, which sold for $1 and $1.50. He is doing a great deal of outdoor work, filling window boxes, planting beds, etc.

"All sold out of white carnations," was what Osterman & Steele said on Saturday, May 10. They are showing some attractive baskets of sweet peas in water in their window.

Len Morgan made a business trip to Cromwell, Conn., last week, to purchase stock from A. N. Pierson.

James Irwin was confined to his home last week because of a troublesome boil on his arm.

N. F. Higgins had more funeral work for Mothers' day than regular business.

William Schlatter is growing some fine baby gladioli. He made a business trip to Boston recently.

T. F. Sheehan, of State street, did an elaborate decoration at the Auditorium, May 12, for the ball of the Knights of Columbus. Palms, American Beauties and Killarney roses were used. He also sold about 270 corsages for the same occasion.

A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., is sending some good valley and baby gladioli to this market.

J. W. Adams is more than busy with outdoor work. He received a large importation of bay trees last week.

The flowers and plants used at the Worthy hotel are now furnished by M. Aitken. Mr. Aitken did a big business on Saturday, May 10.

Since the Brainard Co., of Thompsonville, Conn., has gone out of the cut flower business, the Springfield florists are getting the trade from that town and Hazardville.

The frost of May 12 was quite heavy, but did not do any serious damage to early plants and flowers.

The Smith College garden party and dance brought some business to this city in the way of corsages, etc.

Matinee corsages, made up of rosebuds, forget-me-nots, sweet peas, etc., are finding favor with the public here.

The Southwestern Market.

The business reported for last week, both wholesale and retail, was large almost daily, but the great quantity of stock consigned to this market during the week was too much for the demand to consume in any one day. The prices have gone down to what they were just before the raise for Mothers' day. The top price for carnations was 2 cents in hundred lots. In these the market affords an abundance of stock in all grades, with the quality excellent. Enchantress in all its varieties has the best call. Roses are quite plentiful and the prices reach to about 8 cents for choice, with the lower grades from 1 to 4 cents. Killarneys are in the majority at any of the wholesale markets, with Richmonds next. Beauties have been coming in well, with a fairly good demand at any time. Callas and Easter lilies sold well last week and the supply is large and of good quality.

Sweet peas are also plentiful. The big shipments that came in daily could hardly be cleaned out in any one day. The prices were quite reasonable. Peonies are coming in heavily and will be at their height by the end of this week. Cape jasmines from Texas are arriving in good shape and meet with a good demand. Shasta daisies are becoming too numerous and are down to $1 per hundred. The yellow ones, Garden. Henry Shaw, founder of the garden, was one of the first members enrolled in the club, twenty-seven years ago.

There is some talk of organizing a ball team of employees of the wholesale houses, to battle with any of the retailers having teams named after them.

W. A. Rowe, of Kirkwood, is sending to the Windler Wholesale Floral Co. extra fancy lily of the valley, which has a big demand for the many weddings taking place lately.

The Nicotine Mfg. Co., at 7 to 9 Washington avenue, is again supplying the local wholesalers with nicotine. Owing to the scarcity of tobacco dust, this firm was closed down for a long time, but now is running full time.

Oscar Kuehn, boss of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Wire Shop, was again winner of the first prize in the amateur photography contest conducted by a local newspaper. He has become quite an expert in the photographic line of late.

Frank Windler celebrated his twenty-third birthday May 18, passing out good cigars. Al Gumz, his partner, informs us that Mr. Windler has the matrimonial bee buzzing in his bonnet, but will not give out the name of the lucky young lady.

nues. This makes four flower stores within a few blocks of one another.

The Frank Wild Floral Co., of Sar-coxie, Mo., is shipping to this market a lot of cut peonies of extra fine quality, which find a good demand.

The working force at George Angermueller's put in a busy week attending to the demands of both shipping and local orders for cut flowers and supplies.

Henry Ostertag, proprietor of the House of Flowers, says business last week taxed his working force to the limit, with weddings, funeral work and decorations.

The seedsmen say they have had an extra busy season so far. The St.
Louis Seed Co. and the Schisler-Cor-neli Seed Co. have had an extra force of clerks to handle the counter trade.
They say the prospects are good for a large representation of our local seedmen at the convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Cleveland,
O., June 24 to 26.

Julius Schaeffer, at 318 North Kings-highway, reports a splendid lot of business during the month in all kinds of work.

Otto Sander, at Delmar boulevard and Kingshighway, says his business shows an increase this month in wedding work, and a nice lot of box trade.

The trustees of the Florists' Club, Messrs. Ossick, Cannon and Guy, will meet next week to look up a place and his eight houses, which are entirely separate, may be utilized for rose plants in small pots. The new houses contain ground benches only, on which the planting of stock roses for propagating purposes was recently completed. Mr. Doyle will depart from the usual custom of growers in this locality, in that he proposes to keep the same plants on these benches for two, and in some cases perhaps three years, allowing them to freeze solidly during the winter months. By this plan it is evident that an extra early crop of propagating wood will be secured and the only problem remaining will be to take care of the cuttings. The outcome of the experiment will be watched with interest by other growers here. The output of these houses is contracted for by a mail order catalogue florist.

Preparatory to the erection of two new houses by the Leedle Floral Co., the story-and-a-half shed has been extended 20x45 and a new office, 20x20, has been connected. The shed walls for five feet above the foundation and the office walls to the full height are built of 6-inch and 8-inch Natco hollow building tile, which will be stuccoed. The south wall for a height of three feet above the foundation is built of the same material, with 12-inch pilasters reinforced with pipe and concrete, eight feet apart. This makes a wall far superior to solid concrete,

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-first annual convention at Cleveland, June
24 to 26, 1913.

WM. KUEKER, president of the Farmer Seed & Nursery Co., of Faribault, Minn., has been confined at the St. Lucas hospital of that city for the last two weeks, where he underwent an operation for gall stones. The patient is recovering nicely and expects to resume his duties at the office in the course of a few weeks.

ONION BOOM OVER?

Representatives of the Southern Texas Truck Growers' Association are making strenuous efforts to sidetrack threatened disaster in the marketing of their products and, especially, their crops of Bermuda onions. In consequence of congested conditions in the larger distributing centers, both appeals and orders have been issued to growers to discontinue shipments until the supplies in the big city markets can be reduced. The prices at which these Texas onions have been selling have so far barely reimbursed growers for their actual cash outlay in production. Profits on some shipments have been steadily offset by losses in others, and a few days ago the general situation threatened a loss on every crate that might go forward.

At the New York office of the association it is reported that approximately 2,000 cars of onions had been shipped from the current crop, and it is estimated that there are about 2,300 more cars to dispose of. The total commercial crop may not amount to as much as 4,300 cars, for in addition to halting shipments as a regulative market measure, there is a tendency on the part of growers to ship only the very best selections in their crops. W. V. Tadlock, eastern manager, says that one trouble with the industry is that it is overdone. Following its inauguration in Texas there were, for the first two or three seasons, reports of abnormal profits, and these reports were true, but for only a few growers of small quantities. With these for a basis of operation, real estate men and land boomers got busy and in a comparatively short time there was an onion land craze, all of which helped to bring about such conditions as now have to be dealt with. The demand for seed of the Bermuda onion is likely to be much smaller in the approaching season.

BELLINGHAM BULB TESTS.

That Bellingham bulbs are the best in the world is the substance of a report which will be published this summer by the Department of Agriculture as the result of five years of comparative tests which have been conducted, according to the Bellingham correspondent of the New York Times. The report will make a book of 150 pages.

Peter Bissett, an attaché of the department at Washington, who paid a five days' visit to Bellingham, is quoted in an interview with the Times man, as follows:

"The success of the Bellingham bulb is assured. Three years ago we were satisfied with the showing made by some varieties. Last year we were satisfied by the showing of several additional species, and this year's experience cleared up all doubts on all varieties.

"One florist of the state of New York, after growing groups of Bellingham bulbs alongside Holland bulbs, has made the statement that the raising of the Whateom county product in preference to the imported will result in a saving of hundreds of tons of coal per year. How?

"Let us first consider how these tests have been made.

"Several hundred bulbs, representing nearly every variety grown in the Bellingham garden, were shipped to Washington, D. C. These bulbs, in lots of fifty of each variety, were distributed to three government greenhouses and three private greenhouses in New York and Massachusetts. In each instance the man in charge of the greenhouse was directed to plant the Bellingham bulbs beside an equal number of Holland bulbs of the same varieties.

Of course, soil and climate and every other condition were identical.

"When the first bit of green showed above the surface the bed was photographed, the exact day and hour noted, and affidavit made that the photograph was a picture of a certain bed. Day by day these beds were photographed, the nature and character of the foliage were noted and the hour was recorded when each flower spike made its appearance.

"As compared with the best Holland bulbs, the Bellingham bulbs bloomed seven to ten days earlier and showed a superiority in bloom, texture and color of ten to twenty-five per cent.

"Now you can see where the hundreds of tons of coal saved come in. A typical greenhouse man in New York will force hundreds of thousands of bulbs in a season for the cut flower trade. Multiply the advantage of seven to ten days' earlier bloom and you can see that the saving to the florist will be enormous. In the final analysis, quality being equal, the Bellingham bulb will prove a great money-maker for the owner.

"The future of the bulb industry in Whatcom county is assured. There are many districts in the county where, in my judgment, the bulb may be grown to perfection.

"The book of bulb results which the government will publish will be profusely illustrated and will tell of the history of bulb culture in this district, beginning with the first experiments attempted by George Gibbs, of Clearbrook, the father of bulb culture hereabouts.

"These books will be in great demand, particularly when it is known that this volume will be the first authoritative work on bulb growing. The Hollanders have never reduced to writing the secrets of their processes, and what few books have been printed on the subject have come from parts of the world where bulb culture has not been successful."

The Market.

Business last week was hardly up to the standard, owing to an almost incessant rainfall. The planting of outdoor stock has just begun and all florists are kept busy in that way. Funeral work has been good, but the general business showed a decided decrease as compared with that of the previous week. Stock is of excellent quality. Roses, especially Kaisersins, are fine and the supply takes good care of the demand. Carnations are holding up

The Real Joy in Life is a Difficulty Overcome

The events of 1913 so far have given a severe test to everyone to overcome difficulties. Scarcely one spot in the whole United States has escaped the effects of a calamity of one nature or another, although it does not mean we are defeated; redoubled energy, perseverance and courage will bring us to a higher point of victory. I feel quite "manly" myself since overcoming some mighty big obstacles all alone, and I am determined to go in deeper and broader and wade around for some more hard knocks, likewise the profits.

For the benefit of belated buyers and orders, also myself, I offer a few items. Calla lily, California grown, $8.50, $10.00 and $12.00 per 100. Freesia Refracta Alba, best quality, $6.50, $8.50 and $10.00 per 100. Lilium Candidum, French and Home Grown, $5.50 and $6.50 per 100. Paper White Narcissus, 13 cm. and up, 1,250 bulbs to full sized case:

10 case lot.....$7.75 per thousand.
5 case lot..... 8.25 per thousand.
1 case lot..... 8.50 per thousand.

No argument on quality, it can't be improved on.

Miniature Hyacinths, best named sorts, $2.50 per 100, $20.00 per 1,000.

Tulips, single and double, from $5.00 to $25.00 per 1,000.

Spiraea Gladstone, large clumps, Chicago delivery, $8.50 per 100; New York and Philadelphia delivery, $8.00 per 100; Cincinnati delivery, $10.50 per 100.

Giganteum lilies, now in storage, $8.00 per 100; $20.50 per 300 case. Do you ever stop and figure how much money you could save if you tried? Have you added the freight, duty and brokerage charges you pay, to your gained invoice value, and realized you have gained nothing in your quality or price and you pay 60% and often 100% for such charges, before you have the privilege of even looking at your goods! It is well worth thinking about, but better to act on. Florists work too hard for their money to overlook the money leaks. It takes an Importer to import, and a pretty keen one at that, and it usually pays the Florist to buy through an importer. I have learned where the big leaks come in, after having for nine years charge of shipments through from points in Europe to Cincinnati. The knowledge was not easily gained but it is certainly well worth having.

It is getting a little late for some of the above items, and putting off or forgetting usually brings disappointment.

Various Notes.

Some exceptionally fine snapdragons are seen at Holm & Olson's and they prove to be ready sellers. They are grown at the firm's own greenhouses. The firm is exceptionally busy, taking care of the outside as well as the inside business. O. J. Olson is devoting his time to superintending the outdoor work and the greenhouses, while E. P. Holm gives his attention to the store. The landscape department of this company has handled some large jobs and is well satisfied with the season's work. The sundries department is also in the midst of a good season. An unusual window display is seen at the firm's store. The entire window is sodded and the grass is intermingled with dandelions. The window is divided into halves, and on one side the dandelions are killed while on the other they are blooming prettily. Knox-weed is used in killing the dandelions and the dem-

Munich & Wahler, the west side florists, are growing a fine lot of Kaiserin and the stock they are bringing into the market is some of the best ever seen here. They have no trouble in disposing of their stock.

The Warrendale Floral Co. is cutting some fine sweet peas and the company's whole place is in first-class shape.

The O. R. Eckhardt Co. reports business as extra good. The country trade is especially heavy.

The greenhouses of the Oakland Cemetery Association are a pretty sight, with all the vast quantity of bedding stock in full bloom and in the best of condition. They start this week to do their cemetery bedding. Mr. Willis says the stock this year is the best he has had for several years, and the showing in the cemetery this season will be unusually pretty, as he has several unique designs in bedding which he intends to carry out.

O. J. Olson, accompanied by Mr. Clausen, of Albert Lea, returned last week from a week spent in trout fishing. They returned with a big catch and nearly all of the Holm & Olson store force were treated to a fine meal of trout.

William Jaap and John J. Le Borous, of Duluth, Minn., spent a few days in the city, purchasing stock and looking over the various places. C. R. F.

LAWN SILICATE

FOR KILLING WEEDS IN LAWNS

Positively effective and absolutely guaranteed or money returned.

LAWN SILICATE is unquestionably superior to any preparation ever applied as a top dressing to lawns to destroy Plantain, Buckhorn, Dandelion and other low growing, flat leaved weeds that a lawn mower will not kill. It is odorless and is easy to apply. Does not stain or injure hands or clothing. It is positively the most economical, quickest and most effective method of getting rid of weeds ever devised. A 5-lb. package covers 100 to 500 square feet. It does not kill the grass, but the weeds are practically all killed in 24 to 48 hours, and afterwards literally burned up and blown away. This is not a "fairy tale." We invite investigation. It is sold on "money back guarantee."

RETAIL PRICES, 5-lb. package, 25c; 10-lb. package, 50c; 100-lb. bags, $5.00; barrel lots in bulk, 4¹/₂c per lb. Descriptive circular on request.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Stock has cleaned up much better since last writing and trade has improved considerably. While the signs offering cheap carnations still adorn the doorway florists' stands, they are not so frequently seen. Spanish irises have been particularly good this season. The outdoor roses are not so plentiful as a week ago, even the ubiquitous Cochetts coming in smaller numbers. Indoor roses are not so plentiful as they were, but no one is complaining of the scarcity.

Various Notes.

Albert Knopf and wife returned from their silver wedding trip a few days ago and Mr. Knopf says he never had a more enjoyable time. Automobiling among the orange blossoms so delighted him with this means of locomotion that he has ordered a new Ford with all latest improvements.

I was unable to visit Howard & Smith's nursery until the hippeastrums were a little past their best, but enough were in bloom to show the quality of the strain, which is superb. Several new plantings have been made this year, greatly increasing the number grown. The young stock of all classes of plants for catalogue trade is in fine order.

At the new trial grounds of the Germain Seed & Plant Co., on the Whittier road, things are beginning to take shape and large numbers of plants are being shipped to the store. A large series of seed trials is under way, which will be interesting later. Advance orders appear to foreshadow a big season in bulbs and import stock generally.

Fred Sperry, lately of Chicago, has purchased an interest in the Los Angeles Flower Market, he and Charles E. Morton now being the sole stockholders in the corporation. Mr. Sperry is a great acquisition to the flower business here, his experience going back a number of years. For the eight years previous to his arrival in Los Angeles he was in partnership with A. L. Vaughan, the firm being known as Vaughan & Sperry. Since coming here he has been engaged in the real estate and insurance business, but evidently cannot break away from old associations.

H. N. Gage, of the H. N. Gage Co., has been sick for several days, but is again at his post in the store.

The windows at the Morris Goldenson store have been finely decorated with baskets of flowers prettily arranged, the sweet pea baskets being particularly fine.

The Freeman-Lewis Co. reports fine business, notwithstanding the general flatness, several good wedding orders helping out materially. An immense onyx vase, said to be decidedly valuable, has been ornamenting the window for some time, with various flowers. Filled with Festive maxima peonies it was particularly attractive.

A. M. Bird, of the South End Seed Store, has moved farther south, to 3784

Moneta avenue, where he has a much improved location.

H. Plath, of San Francisco, has been in town a few days on his way home from San Diego, where he reports having an enjoyable time. He has been making calls on the trade here, renewing old friendships and making new ones, as he does easily. He was accompanied by his two daughters.

Several good dinner decorations have kept the staff at J. W. Wolters' busy.

Fine gardenias continue to be shown at Wright's Flower Shop.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather could not be more favorable to all kinds of flowers. We have had no hot days for the last month, and whatever heat there was has been tempered most beautifully by a few pleasant showers. Spanish iris is the most showy of the seasonable flowers now. The ruling prices, however, are low and it is doubtful whether many of the growers will handle them extensively next season. Sweet peas, though not so plentiful as in former years, are in sufficient quantity to fill all requirements. The warm, dry weather earlier in the season has had the effect of shortening the crop and it is only in places where there is plenty of artificial moisture that they are really good. The smaller sorts of gladioli are daily becoming more plentiful and another week will see them at their best, but the larger varieties will not be in full bloom until next month.

It is evident that there will be a good Memorial day trade in the shipping line this year, as the unusual dryness of the season has had the effect of lessening the quantity of flowers in the country. Mothers' day was quite a success. Many of the stores had appropriate window displays, with seasonable flowers, and it is evident that the idea takes splendidly with the public. The demand was heaviest for white carnations, though pink and red sorts also sold well. The day has come to stay and another season should make a big showing.

The Market.

Mothers' day opened the eyes of the florists as to the possibilities of this anniversary. The demand for flowers was unprecedented and, unfortunately, there was not nearly enough stock to meet it. Carnations were at a premium for days before and on Saturday evening not one could be procured. Most of the growers are off crop, which partly accounted for the shortage, but the unprecedented demand was the main cause. Efforts were made to secure flowers from California, but in most cases they arrived in such a condition as to be unsalable. The May-flowering tulips were the only flowers of which there was any abundance and they, for lack of anything else, met with a good sale. To add to the general shortage on Saturday and Sunday, there were several large funerals and all the stores were busy with design work. The late Easter lilies came in advantageously at this pinch and it is seldom so many designs were put up without a carnation showing. Roses are good, but not in great supply, and cut flowers of all kinds are scarce and in heavy demand. The sales of bedding plants continue brisk and good geraniums are none too plentiful.

Various Notes.

The King County Fair Association is offering prizes of $75, $50 and $25 to florists for a display of flowers at the fair at the Meadows in September.

Andrew Matthiesen has been on the sick list for the last two weeks, suffering from a painful affliction in his throat. At last accounts he was able to resume his work.

Risdon & Son have profited by the good prices for cucumbers. They commenced cutting early and got the top of the market. Other growers are now busy shipping and the price for first grade continues good.

Thomas Wylie has been appointed a delegate to the convention of the Order of Scottish Clans, which takes place in Philadelphia at the same time as the Florists' convention in Minneapolis. A suggestion has been made to change the date of the latter in order to allow his visit including both conventions. Will the S. A. F. kindly take notice?

Several of the local florists are planning going east to the convention in August. No doubt they will have the time of their lives. T. W.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

With a demand equal to the supply, there is a daily clean-up of the market. There is a considerable demand from out-of-town florists, showing a shortage elsewhere, or an increased demand, as the case may be. The stock on the market is of a better grade than is usually offered, therefore commanding a prime price. With the increase of sunshine, Beauties have produced an excellent cut daily. Maids, Richmonds, Killarneys and Gates also have shown an improvement.

Carnations are exceedingly good property and firm prices are maintained. In the miscellaneous line there is a variety, including snapdragon, iris, tulips and mignonette. Violets are entirely out of the market. Orchids, valley and sweet peas enjoy the usual demand. Greens, such as asparagus and maidenhair ferns, are more plentiful. The first peonies were displayed in the windows last week, but the crop in general is late, it being quite doubtful if they will be out in time for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

About fifty members of the Florists' Club accepted the invitation of the Oregon Agricultural College, at Corvallis, to attend the alumni home coming day, May 15. They were entertained royally and spent the day in inspecting the various departments. A sumptuous banquet was served the visitors in the evening by President Kerr.

The regular meeting of the Florists' Club, May 12, was largely attended. There was considerable business before the house for discussion. Publicity and a wider scope of representation in this column were urged. This is a step in the right direction, and with the assistance of the club and growers at large this object can easily be achieved. The scribe always is glad to get the facts.

ALL YEAR ROUND Grown by Hoffmeister Floral Co.
Lickrun, Cincinnati, Ohio

Association of Nurserymen and the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association will be held in this city June 17 to 21 and will be attended, according to responses received, by nurserymen from all over the country. Oregon and Washington will hold a get-together session June 16, to arrange for welcoming and entertaining the visitors. This is an opportunity well worth taking advantage of, to visit this part of the country at this particular time, when everything is in its glory. On behalf of the nurserymen and florists, a cordial invitation is extended to all. A delightful trip up the Columbia river, also a trolley trip to Orenco, as guests of the Oregon Nursery Co., are included in the program. Attention is also called to the rose festival, which will be held here June 9 to 14; this event is well worth seeing. Wherever possible it would be well to come early and be here for each occasion.

Chas. Waltie, a gardener at River-view cemetery, was severely stabbed by a holdup man and relieved of his money. After having his wounds dressed, he was able to leave the hospital.

Max Smith has a big batch of myosotis in pots. He says they move well and at a good price. Running special window decorations this energetic firm believes is the best advertising.

E. R. Chappell.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1912-1913: Pres., Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa.; Vice-Pres., J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-eighth annual meeting, Portland, Ore., June 18 to 20, 1913.

JAMES MCHUTCHISON, as chairman of the membership committee of the American Association of Nurserymen, reports that the campaign for new members had resulted in the addition of 118 members to May 19.

THE death of William C. Strong, who for many years was in the nursery trade at Brighton, Mass., is reported in this week's obituary column. He was 90 years old and retired from business more than a decade ago.

IMPORTATION OF PINES.

The United States Department of Agriculture has issued the following announcement, under date of May 16:

"The secretary of agriculture deems it necessary, in order to effectually prevent the introduction into the United States of the white pine blister rust, to forbid the importation of all five-leafed pines from the following countries, viz.: Great Britain, France, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Russia, Germany, Austria, Switzerland and Italy.

"In compliance with section 7 of the Plant Quarantine Act of August 20, 1912, a public hearing will be held at the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., at 11 o'clock a. m., May 20, 1913, in order that all persons interested in the importation of five-leafed pines from the above-named countries may be heard concerning the establishment of quarantine forbidding their importation."

THE PORTLAND PROGRAM.

Many Interesting Features.

The committee of the American Association of Nurserymen having in hand the program for the annual convention at Portland, Ore., June 18, 19 and 20, has completed its work, as far as it is possible to do in advance, and the features were announced this week. The program for the business session of the Pacific Coast Nurserymen's Association, which will convene in Portland at the same time, also was given out. The Pacific coast body will dispose of its business Tuesday, June 17, and after that will convene daily in joint session with the national body. The business session of the latter has been set for Friday morning. The joint sessions will be presided over by both presidents—T. B. Meehan, of Dresher, Pa., of the American Associa-

"MRS. GEORGE SHAWYER"

The growers who are claiming that Mrs. Sawyer cannot be grown without mildew, are welcome to call at this establishment and see for themselves whether or not this is the case. We have not seen mildew on Sawyer since Thanksgiving and any grower who has it is simply growing it too hot. A night temperature of 56 to 58 will suit Sawyer to perfection. We can still quote Sawyer and Milady first-class own root, 3-inch stock at $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000. Also:

Pink and White Killarney, Richmond, Taft, My Maryland and American Beauty, 3-inch own root stock at $10.00 per 100.

CHAS. H. TOTTY, Madison, N. J.

The widely heralded trip up the Columbia river will be taken on Saturday on the steamer Bailey Gatzert. This promises to be the crowning event of the convention and, because of the fame of that section as a Mecca for travelers seeking beautiful scenery, the nurserymen naturally are looking forward to an exceptionally profitable trip. A banquet will be served aboard the steamer and there will be other features of entertainment.

A distinctive feature of all sessions of the A. A. N. will be the musical program that will be rendered before each is called to order.

Secretary Hall's Bulletin.

For the information of the delegates to the convention, Secretary Hall issues the following bulletin:

The secretary expects to be in his office at the Hotel Multnomah, immediately after the arrival of the Rochester special, at 10:35 p. m. June 17.

Each member must register at once on arrival and receive his badge. Do not leave badge book at home.

Those desiring to join the American Association should see the secretary or his assistant. Membership fee is $5, including badge book of over 150 pages and souvenir badge.

Address letters for the secretary, between June 9 and 14, only, care Hotel Multnomah.

Before leaving home leave plain instructions as to how you may be communicated with.

The souvenir badge is being prepared by the Pacific Coast Association and will be given to members after they have registered. Members not at the convention will receive their badges by mail later.

GIPSY AND BROWN-TAIL MOTHS.

The Secretary of Agriculture deems it necessary, in order to prevent the distribution of the gipsy moth and the brown-tail moth into sections of the United States outside of New England, to extend the present quarantine lines in New England beyond those indicated in Notice of Quarantine No. 4, to cover the extension, during the year, of the known range of these two insects.

Album OF Designs

[SECOND EDITION]

It sold so much better than was expected that the First Edition, intended to last a year, was sold out in eight months.

This Album was published in response to many requests from Florists who felt the need for an up-to-date book to be used in taking orders for Funeral Designs, Wedding Decorations and Bouquets, Table Decorations and all cut flower work where it is not practicable to show the customer the finished article as it will be when ready for use. With this Album you can show the finished work, in beautifully printed pictures.

The Album has been THOROUGHLY REVISED for the Second Edition and contains a large number of designs not shown in the wonderfully successful First Edition.

NINETY-SIX PAGES, nearly 300 designs and decorations, beautifully printed on heavy glazed paper, handsomely bound in a cover that will stand wear.

75c PER COPY POSTPAID
$6.00 PER DOZEN BY EXPRESS

The price has not been raised for the Second Edition, although everybody says the First Edition was worth more money, and this is a better book in every way.

WASHINGTON.

The Market.

The local florists are having considerable trouble with the peony crop, due to disease and to the heavy frost of May 12. Except for one other year, there has never been experienced so disastrous a frost at so late a date. The mild winter and spring materially advanced all outdoor flowering plants and shrubs and these were truly "nipped in the bud." As a result of the March and May frosts the supply of peonies, as an example, is short, the stock is of poor quality and prices are higher than they would otherwise be.

Thrips is ruining the American Beauty crop; one of the largest growers stated that it would be worth $25 per day to his firm for the next few weeks if this little pest could be cleared out of the houses. Roses and carnations, on account of the warm weather early in May, bloomed off, with the result that there is a good demand for good stock at fair prices. This is considered to be for roses from $4 to $15 per hundred and from $2 to $4 for carnations. Some fine gladioli are to be seen. Of the novelties, there is a small quantity of salpiglossis in its many colors, which is being snapped up soon after being placed on display.

Various Notes.

Walter Von Hengle has severed his connection with Z. D. Blackistone, while Henry Lauscher has returned to his old position there. Mr. Lauscher has given up his place in Lynchburg, Va.

Irving Gresham, of the Dahl Co., Atlanta, Ga., was one of the week's visitors, coming here on his return from a visit to New York and Philadelphia. C. L. L.

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting at the Association of Commerce building on St. Charles street, May 15, with President Herman Doescher in the chair, Secretary C. R. Panter at his desk and about twenty members present. The greater part of the session was taken up with routine work. The annual outing of the society will take place during July and the following committee was appointed to select a suitable place near the city, to give each and every member and invited guests a chance to take part in it: C. R. Panter, Paul Abele, Dan Newsham. They were instructed to make a report at the next meeting, in June.

The orchid exhibit of J. A. Newsham was considered the largest and finest ever seen here. It consisted of twenty-five varieties, among them several new and rare specimens. The highest praise was bestowed upon Mr. Newsham for this rare treat, which helped in a great measure to make the meeting an interesting one.

Various Notes.

Judging from the reports of some of our leading retailers, Mothers' day was observed more generally this year than at any time previously. The florists advertised it and at most of the schools the children were requested to wear a white carnation or rose on that day.

U. J. Virgin was awarded the contract to beautify the large Elks' place in front of the home of the B. P. O. E. in this city. The work has been started and in a comparatively short time a miniature park will grace the business district of the Crescent City.

Frank Brocker, head gardener at the City park, had this recreation place ready for its opening day of the summer season, May 18, in elegant shape. Large groups of foliage and flowering plants, also huge specimens of various nephrolepis underneath the many century oaks, add much to the natural beauty of the park, which is considered the most picturesque in the south.

Frank J. Reyes & Co. continue to do a good business, both in the cut flower and plant line. The new show house in the rear of the store has helped to double the plant sales.

Louis Buchner, formerly of Buchner & Kraak, is located in New Iberia, La. This city, as well as the surrounding towns, is without many florists and he should make good at the new place.

DAYTON, O.

Various Notes.

Mrs. Walter G. Matthews and children are visiting their aunt, Mrs. E. B. Weston, in Chicago.

J. F. Young has opened his store again at 37 East Fifth street. The store was badly demolished by the recent flood, making it necessary to have an entire new front put in the building.

W. J. Engle, who has a large vineyard, lost all of his grapes by the heavy frost of May 11.

William Boehner, son of John Boehner, one of Dayton's leading florists, and Mary L. Staddon, of Clayton, O., were married last week.

E. E. Schaefer, of the Advance Floral Co., has on display some extra fine cattleyas. Mr. Schaefer is doing a splendid business, especially in the plant line.

As the different business men reopened their stores after the flood, some decidedly original signs appeared over their doors. One of these signs was that of W. G. Matthews, which read, "Matthews, open for business. Flowers for other occasions besides funerals."

A heavy and killing frost did an immense amount of damage May 11 in all parts of the Miami valley. The advance growth of truck gardens was killed, grapes were blackened and even the leaves were destroyed as by fire, being shriveled and in many cases entirely consumed. All sorts of early rose growths were destroyed, and cherries in many exposed places were nipped to such an extent that they fell like rain from the trees. Many of the large growers of tomatoes in this vicinity had set out all their plants and these were entirely blackened by the frost. The weather, however, being a little cool, is holding the peonies back, so that they will just strike it right for Decoration day.

Trade continues to be encouraging and everyone seems satisfied.

Among the visitors last week was I. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia. R. A. L.

Geum Coccineum

Mrs. J. Bradshaw

This is one of the finest plants of recent introduction. It will put quite into the background all the Geums at present found in gardens. This fine variety produces very large flowers, 2 inches or more across, semi-double, and with plenty of substance in them, of the most brilliant scarlet. They are produced on long wiry stems, and continuously from June to October. For cutting and border decoration it is very hard to beat, and no doubt it will figure conspicuously on the show table in future.

GERANIUMS

Some growers depend on the culls left after the bedding season is over for their propagating stock. The wise grower uses the best plants he can get for that purpose. Young plants propagated for that purpose are the best. We have a few thousands of just that kind, of the following varieties:—Marvel, the best deep red; S. A. Nutt, deep red; Decorator, the best orange scarlet; A. Ricard, orange scarlet; Bte. de Poitevine, salmon.

Plant these out now for your fall propagating.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The last week has been a busy one. Stock was cleaned up so closely on Mothers' day that it took several days for the market to right itself. Stock is coming in heavily and the demand is strong. The opening of the Leader-News building, with its floor after floor of offices, has taken a great deal of the better grades of flowers. Several large receptions and funerals helped to clean up.

Various Notes.

The J. M. Gasser Co. had the decorations for the Stevenson-Burke affair May 15. A large tent was used, in which were tables to serve 400 guests. Boxwood, bay trees, evergreens and wild cherry trees were used to make the garden effect. It was by far the largest affair of its kind seen here for some time, and Mr. Schoen, of the Euclid avenue store of the Gasser Co., received many words of praise on the artistic arrangement of the settings. The house was handsomely decorated with large vases of Beauties, gladioli and dogwood.

Wm. Stadie, gardener for W. P. Murray, was unfortunate in losing quite a lot of hydrangeas and other decorative plants during the heavy frost of last week.

The committee appointed by the Florists' Club to distribute plants to losers in the flood has finished its work. They report over three dozen boxes of plants distributed among eight florists.

John Blechschidt, Leonard Utzinger and William Warnke are the committee appointed by President Graham to provide entertainment at the next two meetings of the Florists' Club, June 9 and July 14. You had better attend the meeting June 9, or you might miss something.

The Ohio Horticultural Society will hold its second flower show in Gray's armory, June 12 to 14, 1913. As it will hold the show in conjunction with the American Peony Society's annual exhibition, the managers expect to crowd the armory to the doors. There are prizes for amateurs and professionals, both for outdoor and indoor stock. If you have not received a premium list, drop a card to John Stockwell, secretary, Room 218, City Hall, Cleveland. This show is bound to be a good advertiser for the trade. Boost it all you can. Tell your customers to see it. The American Peony Society always puts up a wonderful display of blooms.

Ben Feldner, of the Roseville Pottery, was a recent caller. F. A. F.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Oscar Schultz has been in charge of the planting of shrubs, trees and a hedge about the grounds of St. Augustine's church.

Karl Kammann, of Kammann & Crowley, New York, has completed his visit to this city, where he purchased plants for the new roof garden that the firm is laying out on Forty-second street, New York.

The June exhibition of the Newport Garden Association and the Newport Horticultural Society will be held at Harbour Court, June 25 and 26. The entries are being made in a manner that is encouraging to those in charge.

William Jurgens was a visitor in New York last week on business.

W. H. M.

Portland, Me.—Frank L. Minott sustained a fracture of his right arm May 5, while attempting to crank his car. The injury was dressed at a hospital, after which the florist was taken home, but he was out next day directing his business.

New Orleans, La.—P. A. Chopin, in business at Washington and State avenues, has made up his mind that check flashers will not put anything over on him. After an exciting chase, which involved a street car ride, public accusation after overtaking the man, a walk and a talk in which the man with the money threw the florist off his guard, and then a dash for liberty in which the former outran the latter, the alleged forger was arrested by a city fireman. He is William Barton and claimed to be a relative of one of Mr. Chopin's customers.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

MADISON, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held May 14. A large attendance greeted Arthur Herrington, who was scheduled to give an illustrated lecture on "Tree Planting," and his hearers were not disappointed, for it was one of the best lectures to which they had ever listened and was illustrated throughout with views of trees, showing the process of digging out, protecting the roots, conveying the trees to their new location, and the manner of digging the holes and setting. All the trees shown were large and so were the more interesting. His address was greeted with applause and a rising vote of thanks.

J. Lindaburg brought a specimen plant of Cattleya gigas, with over thirty blooms in perfect condition, from the establishment of Robt. D. Foote. So well was it liked that the judges awarded it a silver medal.

At the next fall show, which will be held October 28 and 29, vegetables will be a feature. The "Madison class," with a first prize of $75, a second of $50 and a third of $25, will, it is hoped, bring many exhibits from outside. It will be an open class and our boys are patriotic enough to prefer a grand vegetable exhibition to any other consideration. So we hope the other societies, as well as individuals, will take it up and help make it a record exhibition. The usual other vegetable classes will be on as well. E. R.

Kalamazoo, Mich.—L. B. Hill, formerly associated with the Hill Floral Co., of Geneseo, Ill., is now with G. Van Bochove & Bro., in the capacity of storeman and designer.

Creve Coeur, Mo.—Henry J. Keltmann will build a large greenhouse this summer, having awarded the contract to the John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago, and he is considering the erection of another house next year.

Choice Plants for Immediate Shipment

A wonderful clock at Cur Saal, in Interlachen, Switzerland, one of the most famous and biggest tourist hotels of the world. The biggest wonder of nature the world has ever seen.

See that clock? It is made of flowers!

It has hands and shows the time!

See that little house in the rear, also made of flowers? There is hidden a mechanism that strikes the quarter, half and the hour. What do you think this clock is made of? It is made of plants of brilliancy—mostly of dwarf begonias, the Vernon type, short variety, pink and red. The head gardener, the creator of this clock, of this famous, world-wide known hotel at Interlachen, Switzerland, has been offered a fortune by American and other millionaires of the world, to make them a clock similar to this, but he declined the offers, saying that he was hired by the hotel company for the next ten years. I was fortunate enough, during my visit there, to obtain from the head gardener, the creator of this clock, a supply of seed and stock plants of those beautiful varieties of begonias to raise a sufficient crop of about 50,000 young plants in 2½, 3 and 4-inch pots for you to use in a similar clock, carpet bed or other outside work. A bed of these begonias, pink, the Erfordii, or the bright red improved Vernon, is a joy forever. Constant bloomers, stay always short and bushy, the hot rays of the sun have no bad effect on them. They can be grown in a sunny or shady place. We can sell you large 4-inch pot plants, either of the improved Erfordii, the beautiful pink, or the dark bright red improved Vernon, at 10c, $10.00 per 100; 3-inch, $7.00 per 100; 2½-inch, $5.00 per 100. 25 at 100 rate.

ARAUCARIA EXCELSA OUR SPECIALTY, April, 1912, importation, 5¼, 5½, 6-inch pots, 5, 6, 7 tiers, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50.

JUST ARRIVED from Ghent, Belgium, per S. S. Marquette, a new consignment of Araucaria Excelsa, suitable for 5, 5½, and 6-in. pots, to be reshipped in their original packing, 3, 4, 5 and 6 tiers, 12, 14, 16 and 18 in. high, at 40c, 50c, 60c and 75c; Compacta Robusta or Excelsa Glauca, $1.00, $1.25 and $1.50.

IPOMOEA NOCTIFLORA (Moonvine)

"Isn't that a sight?" "A sight; yes, more than a sight. The greatest show I ever witnessed," explained one to another gazing from the other side, pointing at an old, fashionable residence. There, exposed in the moonlight, was a heap of waxy, large, white, fragrant flowers. "What kind of a vine is that?" they asked one of another. "It is that so well-reputed white-flowered moonvine," answered a gentleman, hearing the conversation of the two. "Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, is the man who raises them and ships them all over the entire country. It is a rapid grower and a constant bloomer; grows 50 feet high in one season. Nothing better for quick shade; grows everywhere, on the garden walls, the roof gardens, the barns and all around the houses and arbors, covering everything in a remarkably short time. Thrives well in any soil. The botanical name is IPOMOEA NOCTIFLORA." We raise them by the 100,000, and it is one of our great specialties. Thirty-five years on the market. It bears an abundance of sweet, pure white, waxy flowers as big as a saucer. Nothing is more amusing than watching them when opening. 2½-inch pots, per 100, $5.00; 4-inch, $12.00 per 100. Now is the time to plant. Danger of frost is now over.

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes old and new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of these booklets.

...NEWS NOTES...

Penn Yan, N. Y.—Peter Curran has moved his business from 109 Main street to 116 Elm street, the change being necessitated by increased business and the need of larger quarters.

Omaha, Neb.—The city council has voted to accept the Joslyn greenhouse and costly collection of plants, the gift of George A. Joslyn, and has made provision to furnish the $5,000 that will be necessary to remove and reconstruct the greenhouse at the city park. Mrs. Joslyn offered to give an additional $1,000 to make the transfer, in view of the fact that the city park commissioners had difficulty in securing the needed funds.

Medina, N. Y.—White Bros. report good business in their retail store, which they opened in February. The Mothers' day sale of carnations was almost equal to that of Easter. They are now busy with Decoration day preparations, with 20,000 geraniums and all kinds of bedding plans. They have 90,000 young carnation plants, 60,000 already having seen set in the field. Their crop of carnations will hold good throughout the month.

Carthage, Mo.—One of the four greenhouses of Stephen Hyde, operating the Fairview Greenhouses, each 30x300 feet, was demolished May 5 by a miniature cyclone. The damage amounted to between $3,000 and $4,000. The four houses were connected, without partition walls, and when the cyclone struck, it ripped out one house from between the others and, in addition to wrecking it and destroying the lettuce beds, also damaged the adjoining houses.

Worcester, Mass.—H. F. A. Lange took principal honors for cut flowers at the exhibition of the Worcester County Horticultural Society in Horticultural hall, May 8. He won first prize for a table decoration and four other first prizes, besides a special prize for a new variety of geranium, which he has named after his daughter, Miss Helen Lange. Other prizes were won by Miss Lucy Coulson, A. W. Hixon, Mrs. P. G. Forbes and Walter D. Ross. The society will give another exhibition June 5.

Greenhouse Heating.

THE coal trade is showing a disposition to control prices by controlling output—it is not now the fashion to put more coal on the rail than the market will take at a profitable price.

THE principal feature of the Heating Department this week is not in the department at all, but on pages 22 and 23, where there was room for cuts. See the Black Diamond's story of greenhouse fuel needs.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE FUEL MARKET.

The fuel market is exceptionally strong for the season. Anthracite is not pressing for an outlet and, according to a much-quoted authority in the trade, "the firmness of the bituminous market is such as to occasion astonishment on the part of a great majority of those interested therein. According to precedent, prices should be on the down grade at this stage of the season, with sellers making a great push to gather in contracts and showing more or less indiscretion in sending coal to tide-water in advance of its sale. As it is, prices are practically stationary, and have been for many weeks. Instead of seeking contracts, no small number of shippers have about all of that class of business they care to take on at the present time, in view of the expected difficulty of operating mines to anything like their full theoretical capacity next fall and winter, while as for overshipping the market, there is not the least indication of that."

run where I have marked them; the coils hang a few feet lower. The heat nearly all rises; only a little goes down, as the two upper beds act like barriers. What is the easiest way to get this house heated uniformly.

E. A. R.

The diagram shows a flow pipe upon each plate and a coil of pipes on each wall, about halfway from the ground to the plates. There are two double-deck beds, with three walks. The letter does not give any information regarding the height of the pipes above the boiler, but, if the height is sufficient to warrant such a change, the trouble can be lessened by lowering the pipes. If this is not possible, the flow pipes could be lowered and wooden, shelf-like heat deflectors could be put in. These could be hinged to the walls and thrown up when the walks need to be used.

HEAVY DEMAND FOR CYPRESS.

In 1898 the amount of standing cypress in the United States was estimated to be 27,000,000,000 feet. In view of the almost universal recognition of this wood as the best available for greenhouse construction, the trade will be interested in knowing that since that time the cut has exceeded 5,000,

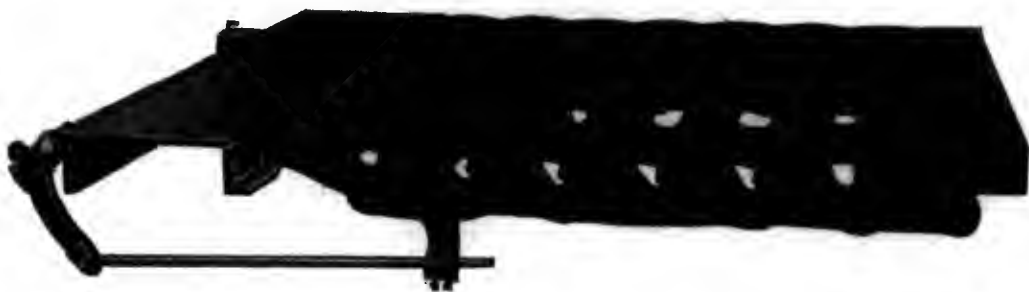

Continuous Firing for Four Years Twenty-four Hours a Day Fails to Burn Out Cyclone Grates

We have installed many sets of Cyclone Grates where these figures have held true.

Any grates that show no evidence of burning after four years' continuous firing twenty-four hours a day must have something exceptionally worth while about them.

Cyclone Grates resist burning because the Cyclone Plan insists upon a mixture of iron being used which years of experience and experiment have found best suited for the purpose.

000,000 feet, and the new growth has counterbalanced only a small part of this.

A hundred years ago Michaux said: "It is highly probable that in less than two centuries the cypress will disappear from the southern states." He was led to that prediction by observing the slow growth and the scanty reproduction of the species. At that time the cut for lumber was comparatively small, but cypress swamps were frequently cleared for rice fields.

Cypress is not now being planted, and perhaps never will be, for the purpose of growing commercial timber. Natural reproduction must be depended upon, and this does not keep pace with the cutting. Few cypress trees are large enough for lumber at an age of less than two centuries, and many do not reach sufficient size until much older.

The present demand requires 750,000,000 feet yearly, with a marked tendency to increase during the last ten years. Depletion of supply in the immediate future is not likely, but every year sees a smaller quantity to draw upon.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The market is easily more than adequately supplied in every line. Locally, because of the strike of the street car men and other conditions, business is dull. Shipping business, on the contrary, is good and the demand includes everything. Judging from present indications, there will be a good supply of every kind of flower for Memorial day. Local peonies are coming in strongly, while other flowers are in good crop, with quality excellent. Double narcissi are arriving in quantity. New Kentucky ferns have been added to the list of available greens.

Various Notes.

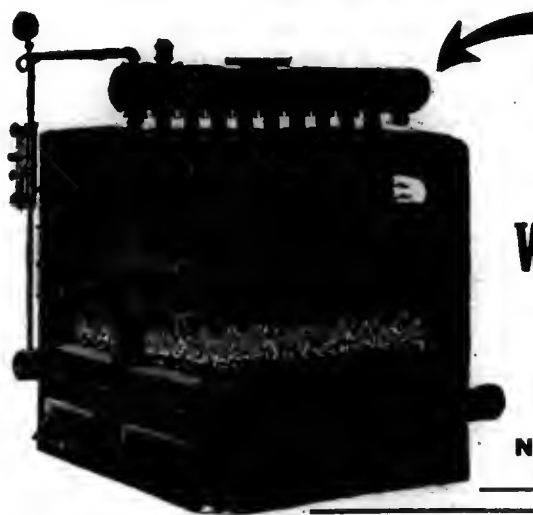

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange was the first to offer new Kentucky ferns this season. Heavy sales of geraniums are reported.

C. E. Critchell has already received many large orders for peonies for Decoration day. He says he made arrangements for a larger quantity than he has ever offered before on that day. He was the first to receive double narcissi this year.

L. H. Kyrk is getting large cuts of cornflower from Klotter's and pyrethrum from Tom Burnett, both of Price Hill. Both of these flowers are finding a good market.

E. G. Gillett is gratified with his business during these slow days.

the city water supply had been shut off December 6, 1908, owing to a break in the mains at Madison road and Oakley avenue, and that this had resulted in freezing of plants in their greenhouses since there was no water for their heating plant. The firm sued for $5,694 damages, but the Common Pleas jury allowed only $1,065. This was affirmed May 13.

HAMILTON, O.

Conditions Since the Flood.

Hamilton florists who suffered in the recent flood are rapidly getting things back to their original good order, although, as far as supplies of stock are concerned, it will take months to replace the loss.

The firm of John Lodder & Sons, now run by the four Lodder brothers, lost most heavily. The water was between five and six feet deep in their place, but it was the terrible current that did most of the damage. Three of their twenty-four houses were swept away entirely and two others were badly twisted and damaged. There was more or less destruction throughout the range; the ends of houses were carried away, glass was broken and benches were either swept away or covered with mud. The palm house was carried away with all its contents, to the value of $1,000 or more. The palms had been out among the Hamilton churches for Easter decoration, and the whole day following this holiday, and just preceding the flood, had been spent in gathering them in. Only one lot, about $200 worth, was left at a church that escaped the flood, and these were saved. All the bedding stock, roses, sweet peas, chrysanthemums in 2-inch pots, etc., were lost. Large shipments of carnation and mum stock have been ordered. The three carnation houses suffered the least damage and good carnations are being cut. These and some geraniums and hydrangeas are about all the stock that came through the flood.

Other florists were generous in offering assistance in the way of stock, but the Lodder boys have refused all donations, pluckily saying they will recover by their own unaided efforts. A force of about twenty men is still busy cleaning the houses and clearing away the wreckage. The firm has made no close estimate of its loss, but it will run up into the thousands of dollars.

Theodore Bock suffered less severely than did the Lodders. One of his houses escaped altogether; the stock in the other houses was covered to a depth of about five or six inches above the pots. He had better protection against the great current, so that his houses were not damaged.

Hamiltonians are not content to have their yards and gardens remain unplanted or unadorned, and are keeping florists and seedsmen busy filling orders.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

There was a good trade last week along all lines, both cut flowers and bedding stock being in good demand. Funeral work continues brisk, while evening decorations also help to keep things moving. Several dance receptions last week, with the closing of the season of the stock companies, helped materially in the grand total. Local florists report the biggest sale of flowers for Mothers' day that they ever had for a similar observance, the sales amounting in several instances to four and five times as much as those of a year ago. White carnations predominated, but when these were exhausted others were made use of. An evidence of the growing popularity of Mothers' day was to be seen in the number of special services held at the local churches.

Various Notes.

The Smith Floral Co., at 522 Westminster street, reports a big demand for funeral work during the last fortnight.

Joseph E. Koppelman opened his wholesale store at 47 Eddy street May 15 and was agreeably astonished at the volume of trade during the first three days.

Samuel Kinder, of Bristol, is busy caring for the trees in that town.

Dr. Ezra Brainerd, president emeritus of Middlebury College, Vermont, will address the Rhode Island Horticultural Society on "The Breeding and Growing of New American Violets," at its next meeting.

E. E. Howard, of Auburn, is devoting his entire time this spring to the care of his nursery, which he started last spring.

Mr. Pepper, of the Melrose Gardens, has a large number of geranium, salvia and pansy plants ready for setting out.

The large new greenhouse that Albert Holscher is erecting on Hartford avenue is nearing completion.

The Foster greenhouses, on Beach street, Westerly, furnished the Opie Co., of Westerly, with 1,700 hardy 2-year-old rose bushes, which were retailed at low prices.

Mrs. Charles Smith, of this city, and Mrs. K. Max, of San Francisco, left New York, May 14, on the steamship France for Paris. They will continue to their native place near Jerusalem, where their aged father still resides. Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Max are sisters of Joseph E. Koppelman. W. H. M.

GLEN COVE, L. I.

The monthly meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held May 14 at Pembroke hall, President E. J. Brown presiding. Plans for coming shows were discussed and several offers of cash prizes were received. John Lewis Childs offered a silver cup for the best exhibit of gladioli for the school children's contest. The offer was accepted. M. C. Ebel, of the National Association of Gardeners, offered a silver and glass vase for the most meritorious exhibit by a member of his association. George Hutton, of Glen Cove, and William Noonan, of Locust Valley, were proposed for membership in the society, and Henry Cliffe resigned from active membership. Mr. Cliffe was superintendent of Meudon, the W. D. Guthrie estate, and is now superintendent of parks at Bridgeport, Conn.

A letter from Herbert L. Pratt, president of the Nassau Country Club, was read, stating that the club house was at the disposal of the society for the annual rose show, which is to be held June 17.

The monthly exhibit was especially interesting, with some beautiful Darwin tulips in variety. The judges, John F. Johnson and J. Everett, made awards as follows: First, to Alexander Mackenzie for twelve Darwin tulips; to Henry Gaut for gladioli; to J. McCarthy for lettuce; honorable mention to Valentine Cleres for Picotee tulips; to William Grey for Darwin tulips; to Valentine Cleres for General Carlo daisy; cultural certificate to F. O. Johnson for tulips. Next month's competition will be for twelve peonies, twelve hybrid or tea roses, and best basket of fruit.

Battle Creek, Mich.—S. W. Coggan has taken over the stock of the Post Tavern Floral Parlor, conducted by Leo Aldrich, who closed the shop recently.

Buffalo, N. Y.—William Stroh, of Stroh's Flower Shop, will serve as judge of the flower exhibit at the festival to be given in Perry, N. Y., August 19 and 20, by the ladies of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Barberton, O.—It is understood that O. C. Barber, proprietor of Anadean Farm, has postponed his building plans only for one year. It was his purpose to erect an addition to each of his two ranges this season, but local conditions were not to his liking and no contracts were let, even though figures had been obtained. The work will, it is thought, be taken up next winter. The plans call for a further investment of about $75,000 up to the point where the new houses will be ready for the stock.

"THIS big 72-foot house is, I think, practically perfect. Plenty of light and few columns, a pleasure to work in. The rack-and-pinion, chain-operated vent-gear is every way satisfactory. Three hundred and sixty feet of sash operated from one spot. It works so easily, there's no inclination to 'let her go—guess that's enough air.'"

"Wide houses are the ones for me."

"They not only keep an even temperature, due to the large volume of air, but there is no 'down draft' of cold air to chill the plants. The crops of carnations I've cut this year have strongly convinced me that the wide house is the house—and this L. & B. 'Iron Framer' is the most practical wide house I've yet seen."

FOR PLANT TUBS. FOR WATER TANKS.

For these every-day appliances (you greenhouse men all use them)—get none but THE BEST. CYPRESS is the certified wood for these uses, the same as for greenhouse construction. The experience of others costs you nothing—why not profit by it?

Read these testimonials:

The W. E. Caldwell Co., Inc., Tub and Tank Builders, Louisville, Ky., after using CYPRESS for more than 25 years, say: "Our preference for this wood for tank purposes is based on something more than fancy or sentiment. We have had personal experience with the other woods used for tanks—that is, white pine, poplar, yellow pine, cedar, Oregon fir, etc. We have built tanks of all these woods and our own experience, as well as that of our customers, conclusively establishes the fact that CYPRESS is far superior to any and all of them."

Dempster Mfg. Co., Water and Steam Supplies, Des Moines, Iowa, write: "I have been manufacturing tanks for the past 25 years and as yet have found no lumber to take the place of CYPRESS for making the better grade of tanks."
(Signed) "C. C. NEWPORT, Supt."

The Hauser, Bremer & Fath Co., Cooperage, Cask, Tub and Tank Works, Cincinnati, O., say: "As to durability, we beg to state, we have CYPRESS tanks still in use which were made 30 years ago."

But what's the use to multiply cases? You greenhouse men know that it's CYPRESS from ridge-pole to foundation for greenhouse construction and greenhouse accessories.

NOW FOR A BOOKLET.

Which booklet do you want from the CYPRESS Pocket Library? All are FREE. Vol. 3 is all about greenhouses; Vol. 22 is a Tank book; Vol. 20 is the new Farm book; Vol. 4 is the new Barn book. Write for one or a dozen.

Where Do You Buy Your Glass?

If you have been purchasing your glass from us you are acquainted with the quality and we don't need to tell you about it. If you have been buying glass "most any place," then you ought to get in touch with us.

Every carload of glass that we buy is carefully inspected by our expert as soon as it reaches our warehouse. This insures you against poorly manufactured and off-grade stock. It must be A No. 1 or we don't accept it. The factories know we are particular and always send us their best glass.

Every box we send out has the original factory marks showing quality and thickness.

We do not handle or sell the so-called "Greenhouse Glass." You will find it best to buy straight grades.

Our glass is all ordered from selected factories known to produce an excellent grade.

We are large buyers of greenhouse sizes and get the lowest prices.

You can save money if you buy your glass here and you will be safe.

"Buy your greenhouse glass from a greenhouse factory."

ANNOUNCEMENT. The weather during this month has been very bad, and especially so the week before Decoration Day. It was cold and rainy, with no sunshine, so necessary to bring out the Carnations which we would have had if the weather had been favorable, and which a few days of sunshine will bring out. What we will be short for Decoration Day we will have following. Weather is the only factor in producing, but not in selling. We hope that we will be able to do better than we anticipate in filling orders for Decoration Day. We believe that everybody realizes what can't be done by human hands must be endured.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

THE LATEST FLOWER FASHION.

Paris Helps the Florists.

The latest novelty in Paris is the trimming of hats with natural flowers. It may not be the most practical innovation that has come from the world's fashion center, but, on the theory that every little helps, it is of more than momentary interest to florists.

The new flower fashion has attracted wide attention from the press, being treated in most instances with a spirit of levity, but there are possibilities in it for considerable extra business if the flower buyers can be induced to take up the fad. Natural flowers are as appropriate for wear on the hat as on the bodice and, where the wearer is attending a social function at which the hats are not removed, the opportunities for display of taste will well repay the efforts of the best artists.

For and Against.

The argument that natural flowers are too fragile for use on millinery is not good—flowers will last as long on a hat as on a gown. No woman wears a corsage bouquet for all occasions, and the wise retail florist sees to it that his corsages are not delivered or made up too far in advance of the hour at which they are to be brought into use. It will be the same with hats trimmed with natural flowers; the florist will see to it that the work is done as close as circumstances will permit to the time it is to be brought into use. Also, one naturally will select flowers of good keeping qualities rather than those that fade quickly on exposure to light, heat or air.

The florist does not need to be concerned at objections to the cost of trimming a hat every time it is to be worn. In the first place, it will not be necessary to charge for trimming a hat any more than is charged for a corsage bouquet. People who are willing to pay the price of corsages will not hesitate at the cost of trimming hats with natural flowers. Then, too, there is the fact that a goodly number of people in this world value a thing only in proportion to its cost. As soon as bicycles became so cheap that everybody could afford one they went completely out of fashion.

One of the splendid features about trimming hats with natural flowers is that it will be possible to create some highly artistic effects. Almost any costume can be matched with flowers or its beauties accentuated through a contrast of colors: Daisies for a summer costume of pure white; Blanche Ferry peas or Killarney roses for pink attire; white roses or carnations for a dress of black.

Schling's Flower Hats.

Already the Paris flower fashion has crossed the Atlantic and the New York retail florists are having a call for hat trimming with natural flowers. The fad as yet has no vogue, but there are possibilities of increasing business in this line and it behooves the retail florist to encourage rather than discourage those who are willing to lead the style. A study of the accompanying illustrations, the one on this page and the one on page 9, will put the retailer in possession of ideas on the subject. These daisy-trimmed hats were the work of Max Schling, whose store in New York adjoins the Plaza hotel and has the patronage of upper Fifth avenue.

NO FATHERS' DAY.

Do you, who have done so much to popularize Mothers' day, know anything about Fathers' day? Several persons here have spoken about it, saying they had read of it in the newspapers. One of our customers said Fathers' day is such a day will be detrimental to Mothers' day, and advises against it.

MERELY A CHOICE OF WORDS.

The average flower seller has absolutely no set formula for use in handling orders, and the number who have ever given the subject a moment's thought is probably so small as to be negligible, yet a lesson is to be learned from the practice of the big concerns that conduct their business, like the telephone exchanges, by the use of set phrases. Here is a case in point:

In one of the large flower stores it was found that, in taking an order, in reply to the question, "When do you want this delivered?" the customer almost invariably answered, "As soon as convenient," or words to that effect. This was embarrassing, for two reasons: First, it kept the delivery force flying hither and thither, effectually preventing anything like systematic routing; second, it often resulted in flowers being delivered hours before they were to be used, causing complaints that they were not fresh or did not keep. The store does a large business in corsage bouquets, turning out dozens of bunches a day in the social season. A large proportion of these orders come by telephone and requests for too early de-observed in some of the southern states. It would be great if there were such a day about the middle of June. Mothers' day is growing tremendously. C. E. G.

There have been several attempts to inaugurate a Fathers' day, but thus far none has proved successful. The Review believes that any attempt to push livery were a frequent cause of annoyance. Finally a good customer was lost as the result of his own noonday request to deliver "right away," when in fact the bouquet was not wanted until evening. This led to a study of the language used in taking orders, with the result that the clerks are no longer permitted to ask when delivery is wanted; instead they are required to ask, "When is the bouquet to be used?" With that information the store assumes responsibility for delivery at the proper time. All flowers for evening wear go out on a delivery that leaves the store at 4:30, which insures arrival in time for dinner, with the flowers in the best of condition, instead of being some hours past their best, at the time they are to be used. So simple a thing as a choice of words has practically done away with complaint, besides making deliveries a much more simple proposition.

FLOWERS AND FRUITS.

In Europe it is quite the ordinary thing to combine the retailing of flowers and fancy fruits, but in America florists are not fruiterers, although in a few cases fruiterers handle flowers. Quite the most ambitious attempt to with three big windows, two on Forty-second street, with the doors in the middle, and one 50-foot window on the west side of the store, beside the main entrance to the wonderful new station. In addition, the lease includes two floors of equal size on the two lower levels of the station.

The store is finished in polished Botticino marble, in harmony with the interior decorations of the enormous building. The ceiling is of stucco and the floor of tile. In the center of the store stands the unique refrigerator. It is 10x25x9, of marble and plate glass, with doors that slide instead of being hinged. One side of the store is used for fruits, the other for flowers, with the display refrigerator for both. It is said that when the store was ready for opening it represented for the proprietor an investment of $40,000.

Mr. Nicholas, who has other large interests in New York, has placed the management of this new store in the hands of his son, M. J. Nicholas, who recently was a student at Cornell University. The trade will watch with interest this attempt to combine a flower business of the better class with the retailing of fancy fruits and conduct the two in an expensive location.

DON'T MISPLACE THE CARDS.

Have you seen the story, which has frequently gone the rounds in various changes of form, about the fashionable young man who stopped at a florists' store one hot summer day to order a box of flowers sent to his lady love? At the same time he also purchased a design for the funeral of a friend. On the card for the box he wrote:

"Hoping this may help you to bear the heat."

The other card bore the one word, "Sympathy."

Soon the girl telephoned: "Thank you so much for the flowers, but why did you write 'Sympathy' on the card?"

As to the effect produced by the arrival of the funeral design, the story is silent, but the silence is expressive.

PRIMULA POISONING.

We have noted the discussion of primula poisoning in the columns of The Review and our experience may be of value to some. We have found that ordinary rye whisky, used straight, to bathe the affected parts, gives the quickest relief. We have found it better than Dioxogen. We do not recommend this remedy taken internally.

TO REPAIR CRACKS.

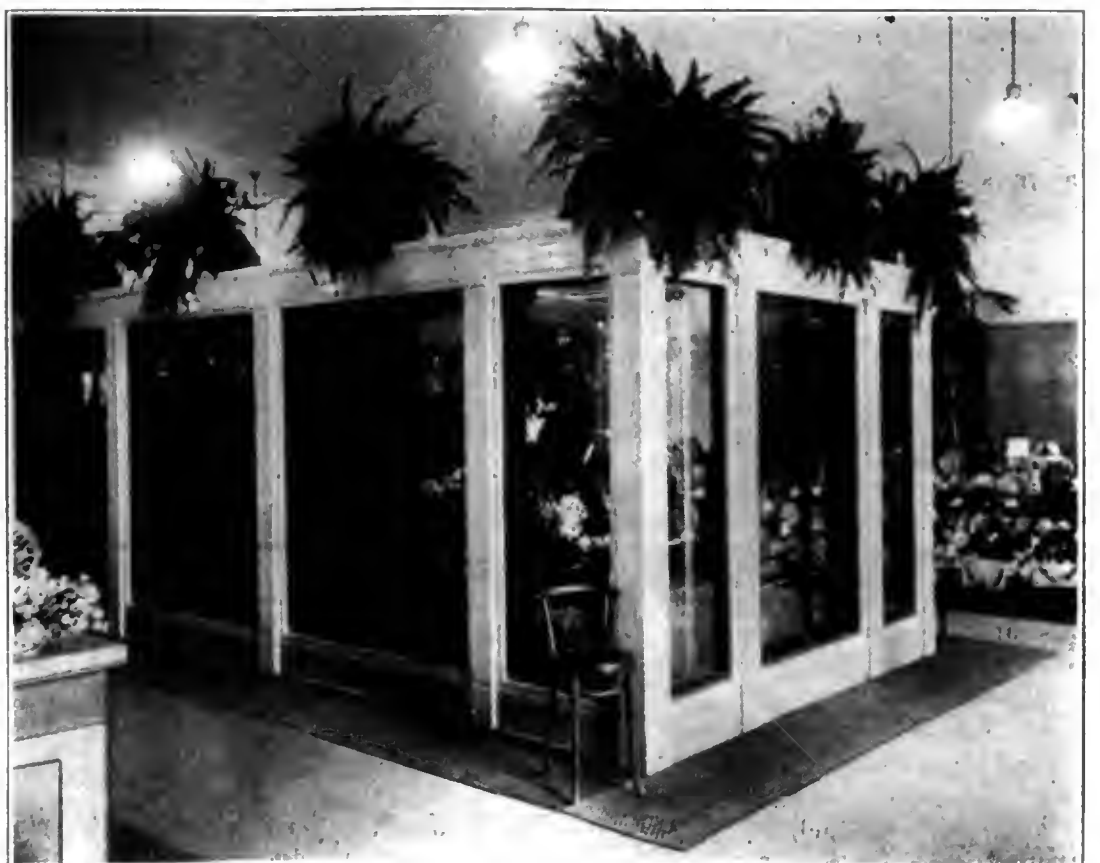

For the benefit of florists who will have to do any repairing of cracks, large or small, I offer the following suggestion: Get some fine sawdust and mix it with just enough paint to make a decidedly thick paste, and you will thus have a mixture that will adhere to wood, glass or iron and stop a crack com-combine the two lines that has thus far been made on this side of the Atlantic is the new store of John S. Nicholas, recently opened in the Grand Central station, New York. So costly is the store that it has attracted wide attention and during the National Flower Show florists from all parts of the country noted the work of installing the fixtures, then in progress. Since the opening, also, it has been visited by many interested in the various phases of the undertaking.

The store adjoins the main entrance to the wonderful Grand Central station, where thousands upon thousands pass its windows daily and where all the world's gadders sooner or later will come to know it. The station itself is located across the street from three large hotels, one of them a social center, and in the heart of up-town New York. The accompanying illustrations show the store inadequately; it is one of the largest used for the purpose in New York and possibly commands a higher rental than any other flower store in the United States, although of course fruits with flowers must divide the costs, just as they help produce the income. The store is 50x50, giving a floor area of 2,500 square feet on the street level.

AS OTHERS SEE US.

Notes of a British Traveler.

Perhaps what foreign visitors write of us may not be particularly helpful, for it almost always is laudatory instead of critical, but it usually is interesting, especially when the notes are by such a keen observer as W. Wells, who came over from England for the National Flower Show. Mr. Wells not only sees, but he asks; he gets down to figures. He has paid previous visits to eastern trade centers, but his April trip to Chicago was his first journey west. On his way he wrote copious notes and impressions for home consumption. Here are a few of them:

A Visit to Poehlmannville.

"There are three brothers in this gigantic business, and it was the youngest that started out when 17 years of age, and got rough work around the district where their nurseries now stand. Later he went into a nursery as a worker until he had amassed a fortune of rather less than $100. The two brothers had a little more cash, so the whole of the amount was pooled, and the nursery was started. This was twenty-two years ago. Now the glass area covers thirty-eight acres and there are about five acres of sheds and roads forming the entire site. They have enormous boilers, with machines of every description for greenhouse repair, and the boring, drilling, punching, sawing, electrical and hauling plants of the establishment are big works apart from the nursery. Anything that can be done to save labor is carried out by machinery. For instance, the boilers feed themselves, the railway runs on the spot, and the 50-ton coal trucks are pulled up a raised track by means of a coil, the coal drops out of the bottom of the truck, a digger raises the coal, half a ton at a time, and puts it into a hopper which supplies all the fires. Then an affair like a winnowing machine scatters the coal over the fire and an automatic regulator controls the whole. All that is done by hand is to set the steam gauge to the required pressure, and to clinker and keep the flues clean.

"The system of watering, manure watering, etc., is a marvel. The large boilers do most of this, too. A truck of manure is pulled up, water turned into it, the lot is boiled, then filtered and pumped into the benches. The quantity of manure they use is enormous, and all the soil is mixed in the open. The ground is ridged up, the ridges filled with manure, then plowed with a special plow crossways, bone meal is added, and from this the soil is plowed again and again. In the winter this gets frozen and splendid results are obtained.

"With all this machine work, the wages bill of the firm is well over $5,000 per week. Who says flowers are not a boon and a blessing?

"This concern needs a man of nerve and power, and Mr. Poehlmann the younger has this, and more. He is gentle but firm, and all his employees appear to respect him. Nearly all the men seem to be Britishers. The elder brother, Adolph, is the rose grower, the second is manager of the cut flower store in the city, while the youngest is the boss, and buys, constructs, and does everything possible to save labor, which is expensive and on the scarce side.

"Roses, carnations and chrysanthemums are grown by the million. Sixteen acres are needed to plant out the carnations, as nearly 300,000 are required for filling their own houses. Roses here are perfection and in every stage of growth from grafted stock to 4-year-olds.

"The store in Chicago, where the flowers are sent to, is a big concern also. The flowers are sent in from the nurseries twice daily per motor van, and two deliveries daily are made by an express company. Besides the chief items mentioned, there are a few houses devoted to orchids, sweet peas, ferns, smilax, lilies, and apparently anything that will pay a florist to grow. The concern has grown so quickly that one can hardly realize how large it will be when building is stopped."

Notes at Richmond.

"The E. G. Hill family have a big nursery, the chief attraction of which is a house with 70,000 carnations. This house, while one building, is really a four-ridge-and-furrow. Mostly standard varieties are grown here for cut flowers, and in another range plants are grown for stock and not allowed to flower. Nearly 700,000 cuttings have been rooted and dispatched this season. The chief novelty was the beautiful scarlet, Carnation Commodore, which should be noted by the home growers. Roses, again, are a big thing. They grow about 30,000 for flowering, and propagate and distribute about 700,000 to the various parts of the world. Chrysanthemums, too, are extensively grown; about 40,000 are wanted for planting in the benches for autumn flowering, while about half a million are propagated for sale. Mr. Hill grows a few other things, among which are 100,000 gladioli and four acres of peonies. The wages bill of this firm is about $800 weekly."

At Dorners'.

"Messrs. Dorner have some promising seedlings. The best is undoubtedly one named Champion. The growth and habit is equal to Enchantress, but the flower is scarlet. The raisers term it a scarlet White Wonder. The chief object in making this trip was to see the new carnations, and as I thought I should like to see more of this Champion Messrs. Dorner have kindly consented to W. W. & Co. being their sole agents on this side for their seedlings. This will be appreciated by the home growers, who buy a number of new sorts each year in the hope of getting something good, but find that all varieties suitable for the States are not moneymakers in England. Another variety bound for Merstham is a deep apricot seedling with a shade of ochre overhanging. Like all yellow shaded varieties, there is no scent, which perhaps is a drawback, but is not unknown in other leading sorts grown."

Washingtonville, O.—Mrs. Lydia Cox has disposed of her greenhouse here and retired from business.

ROSES

REPEATED ATTACKS OF MILDEW.

I should like to ask your rose expert's opinion concerning a house 20x50, heated by hot water and planted with about 500 roses. The stock includes Killarney, Bride, Bridesmaid, Richmond, Sunburst and Mrs. A. Ward—a much too promiscuous lot to do well. Last December I found that these were infested with red spider, which I got under control only by constant work. Ever since the firing season commenced, the roses have been subject to repeated attacks of mildew. The night temperature has been steady at from 56 to 60 degrees, with careful watering and ventilation throughout the season.

The house runs east and west and has a brick wall on the north side. The roses are on raised benches and are planted in good clay loam, with about one-fourth cow manure. I did not plant these roses, but for the repeated attacks of mildew I am inclined to blame the drainage, as I find the bottom of the benches lined with a thick clay sod. This, in my opinion, causes too much humidity, and all the pipe-sulphuring in the world has no effect on the mildew. The only rose which seems to escape the attacks is Mrs. Ward. The stock is 2 and 3 years old. What is the best course to adopt? Would it be best to throw the whole lot on the dump and restock next July? I only want roses from October till May and would let the plants rest in June and July. When I first took charge of the house, I found the stock in the condition which I have described.

As the plants are in bad shape now and there are too many varieties to permit the cutting of a fair number of any one sort, it would no doubt be more profitable in the long run to throw out the lot, clean out the benches, see that there is good drainage in the bottom—about a half-inch to a three-quarter-inch space between the boards if the benches are wooden—and replant with young stock as soon as possible, so as to give the plants plenty of time to make good growth by the time you want to start cutting. Plant not more than one variety of each color, say Killarney for pink, White Killarney for white, Richmond or Milady for red and Ward or Sunburst for yellow. Give these varieties a temperature not lower than 60 degrees at night. If Wards are to be planted, put them at the warmer end of the house.

If the plants are kept at the temperature mentioned, with plenty of ventilation at all times and enough feed to keep them in good growing condition, they should be good, large plants by October and there will be little danger of mildew as long as the pipes are occasionally painted with sulphur. Good clay loam, with one-fourth cow manure and a good sprinkling of bone meal, is as good a soil as you can get for roses.

IS THERE ENOUGH HEAD ROOM?

I have a greenhouse which is four feet high to the eaves, eleven feet high to the ridge and twenty-four feet wide, standing east and west. Could I grow good roses in such a house or would the exposed glass in the roof be too near the plants? I should like to grow Killarneys and Richmonds, or would some other varieties be better to grow in such a house? Any advice that can be given will be greatly appreciated by such a beginner as I. I am located in Indiana.

H. M.

A house such as described would grow fairly good roses, provided it is kept at the right temperature. If the roses are planted in solid beds they will have sufficient head room, but on raised benches there would hardly be enough head room to allow either Richmond or Killarney to be grown as they are generally grown now in up-to-date places, except, perhaps, in the center benches. The Wards, however, would do better, being low growers. The nearness of the glass to the plants would not do any harm, so long as the flowers do not touch the glass in winter, in which case they would freeze.

The best temperature at night for Killarney is 60 degrees. Richmond will give satisfactory results in a temperature 2 degrees lower, and Ward in a temperature 2 to 4 degrees higher. If there is a market for Wards in your locality and the right temperature can be kept up, it would probably be the most profitable rose to grow in the house.

W. J. Keimel.

GOOD YELLOW ROSES.

I want to plant 500 yellow roses. Which of the many new yellow varieties would be the most profitable for a small place?

J. A. & S.

For quantity I would recommend Mrs. Aaron Ward; for quality, Sunburst.

PREPARATIONS PROGRESSING.

The Minneapolis florists are a forehanded lot, who do not believe in the modern maxim, "Never do today what can be put off until tomorrow." They are so far along with their convention preparations that it seems as though hardly anything can remain to be done. Though the convention was uninvited, Minneapolis florists most certainly have taken great pride in its coming. They have enlisted the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association and the convention is being exploited both at home and abroad in a fashion never before attempted. The Civic and Commerce Association has a publicity bureau which is grinding out reams of copy. If any editor is short of material, just let him let the fact be known and the void will be filled by Minneapolis. If one is not interested in the school enrollment, or the manufactures per capita, he can learn of the train service on the nine trunk lines between Chicago and the metropolis of the northwest, or he can learn in picture or prose of the beauties of the Minneapolis park system, or of the five large new hotels, one of which is said to have cost more to build, per square foot, than any other hotel in the country.

But while the Civic and Commerce Association is trying to impress the trade with the advantages of Minneapolis, it is not failing to tell the people of Minneapolis of the coming of a different type of convention from the ordinary. Minneapolis newspapers are being used to tell the people there of the advantages to the city in having a visit from the national organization of florists. The chairman of the association's committee on conventions has told the people that the S. A. F. meeting will be of more value to Minneapolis than a score of other gatherings.

In preparation for the convention a committee of the association is urging Minneapolis business men to display even more generously than in other years the window boxes and hanging baskets in the downtown section which in other years have won distinction throughout the country as the hanging gardens of Minneapolis. It is stated that the planting of vacant lots and home gardens has this year exceeded the record of all previous seasons because of the approaching convention.

Theodore Wirth, vice-president of the S. A. F., is busy planting the outdoor exhibits adjoining the armory where the convention sessions are to be held and it is expected that this feature will be one of the most attractive of the convention.

THE MINNEAPOLIS CONVENTION.

Preliminary Program.

Secretary John Young announces the following as the preliminary program of the twenty-ninth annual meeting and exhibition, to be held in the National Guards' Armory, Minneapolis, Minn., August 19 to 22, 1913. The program for the sports is not yet complete. The list of events, etc., will be included in the program when it is mailed to the members at a later date.

It will be necessary to have the 1913 button for admission to the hall and meetings. This button has been sent to all members who are in good standing. It will save time and confusion at the convention and greatly facilitate the work in the secretary's office, if the members who are in arrears will remit their 1913 assessment promptly to the secretary, upon receipt of which the 1913 button will be sent them.

The floor plans, showing available spaces in the trade exhibition, are now in the hands of the printer and will be mailed within a week. Inquiries are arriving at the secretary's office from all sections of the country, showing the widespread interest that is being taken in this convention, which undoubtedly will be one of the most successful in the history of the society. Exhibitors desiring space in the outdoor planting exhibition should take the matter up at once and communicate with John Young, who is superintendent of the trade exhibition, or write directly to Theo. Wirth, Court House, Minneapolis, Minn., the vice-president of the society, who is making strenuous efforts to make this outdoor planting exhibition one of the great features of the convention.

"WHO'S WHO—AND WHY"

CHARLES H. PLUMB.

ONE of the most successful examples in the trade of the grower who knows the business from the ground up, and where success is largely due to scientific and practical training in early life, is furnished by the varied and active record of Charles H. Plumb, of Detroit, Mich. He was born at Egham, Surrey, England, May 18, 1866, and spent his boyhood at Cobham. He began his horticultural career in 1879, when he was 13 years old, working in private establishments. After several years spent in the private gardens of Silvermere, Cobham and St. George's Hall, Weybridge, he entered the Royal Botanic Gardens, at Kew, in April, 1886. There he took the full botanical course and in September, 1889, he was appointed by the British government as curator of the botanic stations of St. Kitts-Nevis, West Indies. Leaving the West Indies for the United States, in 1893, he entered the employ of the parks and boulevard commission of Detroit. He left the city's employ in 1896 to embark in business for himself as a florist at his present location, 660 Newland avenue. He now has 60,000 feet of glass, devoted almost entirely to pot plants.

RETARDING PEONIES.

The peony is undoubtedly the most gorgeously beautiful of all our hardy flowers, and the ease with which it may be cultivated, and the fact that it is under any reasonable conditions sure to produce a fine crop of blooms every year after it is established, make it deservedly a great favorite.

Its only drawback is its habit of opening all its blooms nearly at the same time, giving a great surplus of flowers for a few days and none afterwards. It is not generally known that the blooming of peony buds can be easily delayed from several days to several weeks, depending on the variety and the method of treatment.

To delay the opening of the blooms for a few days, they are cut when the petals are just loosening, but when none of them have turned back. All the leaves are removed, except a few of the upper ones, sufficient to give the flower a proper setting of green. They are then wrapped somewhat snugly—one dozen or less in a bunch—in two thicknesses of damp (not wet) newspapers, leaving the lower four or five inches of the stems uncovered. The bundles of blooms so wrapped are placed in jars of water so that the lower one-third of the stems is submerged, and placed in a cold, dark location. A cool cellar is an ideal place. In this condition they will keep up to a week without opening, but will open quickly when unwrapped and brought into the light and warmth.

If it is desired to retard them a longer time, they are cut earlier, while showing full color but before any of the petals have loosened at all, and treated in the same way. The tighter the bud is when cut, the longer it will keep.

Some few varieties can be retarded only a few days in this way without being injured, while others can be held back for a long time. The professional peony grower, after preparing the blooms as described, will place them in cold storage warehouses, where the temperature is kept low and perfectly even, and will hold them there for six weeks in the case of some varieties. There are probably a million or more peonies stored in this manner every season by florists in Chicago.

Where the advantages of artificially cooled storage with an absolutely even temperature can not be had it is probably not advisable to attempt retarding the blooms over two weeks in this way, while some varieties can be held only a few days.

The Horticultural Society of Chicago will hold a grand peony exhibit at the Art Institute about June 12, depending on the earliness or lateness of the blooming of peonies. Professional florists and expert growers from all over the country will compete in the open classes, while most liberal premiums and medals are offered in special classes for the amateur growers. It is hoped that all who love the peony and who grow even a few plants will send one vase or more of flowers to the show.

These instructions are given out by the society so that those varieties blooming too early for the show may be held back. Premium lists and full information may be had by addressing

R. J. Haight, secretary, 536 South Clark street, Chicago.

PEONIES FOR CUT FLOWERS.

At this season of the year there are frequent inquiries for lists of the best varieties of peonies. In one of its bulletins, issued from the Cornell trial grounds, the American Peony Society recommends the following list for cut flowers:

White.—Festiva Maxima, Couronne d'Or, Duchesse de Nemours, Baroness Schroeder, Albatre, Alba Sulphurea, Madame Crousse, Madame Calot, Madame de Verneville, Boule de Neige, Avalanche and Duc de Wellington.

Pale pink.—Achille, Albert Crousse, Dorchester, Floral Treasure, La Perle, Madame Lemoine, Marguerite Gerard, Marie d'Hour, Miss Salway, Mademoiselle Leonie Calot, Madame Emile Galle and Venus.

Pink and white.—Gloire de Charles Gombault, La Tulipe and Jeanne d'Arc.

Deep red.—Delachei, Princee de Talin-dyke, Constant Devred, Nigricans, Madame Boequet, Pierre Dessert and Rubra Superba.

YELLOW MUMS FOR RETAIL.

Please tell me what you consider the best yellow chrysanthemum for retail trade. What fertilizer would you suggest for mums? A. B. R.

Though some of the other yellow varieties of chrysanthemums might be better for special purposes, such varieties as Major Bonaffon and Golden Glow seem well adapted for the general retail trade.

While the principal reliance should be placed upon stable manure as the fertilizer to be used in the compost, still it is true that for top-dressing and for liquid applications the stable manure has a general tendency to develop a weak, watery tissue. Hence, to a considerable extent, and especially for top-dressing and for use as a liquid manure, some of the chemical manures can be substituted with good results, but care must be taken to use them judiciously, as otherwise serious injury may result.

As a top-dressing, a mixture of 100 pounds of fine ground bone, thirty pounds of sulphate of potash and twenty-five pounds of nitrate of soda may be used, at the rate of one pound to fifty square feet. In case the supply of manure is short, the amount can be reduced one-half if the mixture just mentioned is used for preparing the bench soil, at the rate of one pound to thirty square feet, when the soil is not less than four-inches deep and when the fertilizer is thoroughly incorporated with the soil.

For use as a liquid manure, chemicals soluble in water should be used and 100 pounds of acid phosphate may be substituted for the ground bone, and the mixture used at the rate of one pound in fifty gallons of water. T.

EARLY BUDDING OF MUMS.

Will you kindly tell me what caused my chrysanthemums to bud so soon? At this date, May 17, some of them are actually showing color. The varieties are J. K. Shaw, Appleton, Black Hawk, Brutus, etc. We took cuttings in January and February. They have not been potted. The majority of them are showing buds. I have picked out those that are not showing buds and have benched them. What caused the early budding and what can I do under the circumstances? W. A. L.

It is by no means uncommon to have mums run into bud during the month of May. In fact, we have several batches nicely in flower at this time. The only thing to do is to keep the plants liberally supplied with water and, even though the original plants get hard and refuse to make growth, a good sucker will eventually come from the base of the plant and go ahead and produce satisfactory results. MODERN PLANT IN TEXAS.

Eight years ago, Bird Forrest, then a prosperous contractor and builder of Waxahachie, Tex., put up a small greenhouse, 14x48 feet, for the purpose of making a little money on the side, as he expresses it. Today he is one of the successful growers of the south, having a modern plant under more than 25,000 feet of glass. He now devotes all of his attention to the business, which was managed by his wife at its inception, while he directed building operations.

Since he decided to abandon contracting for growing, he has constantly improved and added to his plant, which has concrete walls and benches, and iron frame, cypress and red cedar roof material. The office, 16x45, and the potting shed, 16x85 feet, are built of cement blocks. The office and sales-room have a metal ceiling and cement floor. The side wall on the greenhouse side is of glass, affording plenty of light and showing his ferns and blooming plants to advantage. The greenhouses are wide and high, as the accompanying illustrations show.

Last year Mr. Forrest had 12,000 carnations benched and 5,600 mums, as well as numerous other plants. He now has 30,000 carnation plants in the field for his own use and for the trade. He handles a wholesale as well as retail business. In summer he grows ferns in 8-inch and 10-inch pans in the space vacated by bedding plants. He attributes much of his success to the aid given him by his wife, who has been a factor in the business from the start.

ALLAMANDAS.

Those useful summer flowering plants, the allamandas, will now probably be showing flower and should be fed liberally with liquid manure while in bloom. In pots the variety William-sii is fine and is in much favor at Newport and other fashionable summer resorts. Nicely flowered plants make charming centerpieces on large tables, and the soft yellow color of the flowers pleases practically everyone. For the next three months these allamandas will do quite well in any ordinary greenhouse. It is not necessary to shade them heavily, as in that case the plants would be soft and their flowers lacking in substance.

This is a good season to increase the stock by propagation. Shoots rubbed off with a heel root most easily, but any medium ripe wood cut below a leaf will make roots if a little bottom heat is given and the propagating house is a warm one.

FORMULA FOR WEED KILLER.

Some time ago I saw in The Review a formula for weed killer, but can not now put my hand on it. Will you please repeat it and state what quantities are to be used?

M. V.

The formula referred to was that in use at Mount Greenwood cemetery, Morgan Park, Ill. This is it:

"Formula: Deadly Poison—Twenty pounds arsenic, fifteen gallons soft water; boil well. Add thirty-five gallons soft water, then add forty pounds caustic soda; boil again.

"This forms a stock solution which is diluted for use by adding four parts of water to one of the solution.

"It must not be allowed to get on the hands or on the clothes of the person using it, and should, like all poisons, be stored under lock and key and not be allowed to be handled by any persons without their being cautioned as to its poisonous nature."

W. N. Rudd, on being asked as to the results of continued experience with the formula, says: "The weed killer should be applied when the ground is damp, not wet. In a dry time we find it advisable to use the road sprinkler over the streets which we intend to treat and then make the application as soon as the water from the sprinkling cart has settled into the ground. All that is necessary is to simply wet the surface of the ground with the weed killer.

"We had some complaints from people who used this formula about the expense, and found that they were purchasing the material from retail druggists at from four to ten times the price at which it could be bought through the wholesale house. Depending on market fluctuations, we have bought the arsenic at from 3½ to 5 cents per pound in 100-pound lots. We generally buy the soda in casks weighing about 300 pounds, the market varying from 3 to 4 cents per pound. It should be purchasable in 100-pound lots at not over ½ cent advance on these prices.

"We have used this formula for many years and for effectiveness, combined with low cost, have never had anything to equal it. There are many other weed killers which can be made up for a little less money, but they either require larger or more frequent applications, so that the ultimate cost is considerably greater. We seldom have to make more than one application during the season."

USE OF BORDEAUX MIXTURE.

Please give me some information on the use of Bordeaux mixture. Which is the most efficient for destroying blight on tomatoes and potatoes, the liquid or the dry mixture? I have never found the dry satisfactory, although I would naturally think the dry would more readily come in contact with every part of stem and foliage than the liquid.

I have never had to ask more than a few questions of The Review, but I often think of its great value to the trade as a disseminator of information.

W. C. S.

I have always found the liquid Bordeaux far the most effective, as well as decidedly the most economical to use. As between dry Bordeaux purchased in cans or boxes and what you would make yourself from stone lime and sulphate of copper, I much prefer the latter. There are, however, many thousands of small growers who do not want to go to the trouble of making Bordeaux themselves, and for such the dry, powdered article is good to use, as it is so easily prepared.

YELLOW TIPS ON ENCHANTRESS.

Under the title of "Two Similar Inquiries," in The Review of May 15, page 24, you replied to my question about the yellow tips on my White Enchantress, and I am obliged to you for the consideration that you kindly gave to my difficulty. I note carefully what you say and I beg leave to disagree with some of it. You say you are "inclined to the opinion that the trouble is aggravated by heavy watering without sufficient nourishment being given along with it." Now, in my case that is exactly what has not been done. In fact, I have thought that perhaps the trouble was caused by the beds being too dry in the cloudy, short days of winter. The plants grew slowly for a few weeks before the yellow tips appeared, but are growing rapidly now and the yellow tips are gradually disappearing. The young plants show no signs of the yellow tips and are fine stock. If it is a bacterial disease, what would cause it? Surely the cause is not a local one, since the disease extends all over the country. Do you suppose it is an indication of a general breaking down of the constitution of the Enchantress family? If so, why does it not appear on other varieties that are losing their vitality? I know it is easy to ask questions, but the only proper way to do things is to try, at least, to do them in an intelligent manner, finding out the cause of a trouble, if possible, and then trying to remedy it.

E. G. C.

I am not inclined to argue the question, because, as I said in my reply to your first inquiry, I have not as yet figured out, even to my own satisfaction, the cause of and the remedy for the trouble in question. Your present letter shows that you have given the matter considerable thought, and you may know more about it than I do.

As I said before, the theory advanced in my previous reply is merely a theory which I have not as yet tested out, but my observations this season only strengthen my belief that the theory is correct. Our plants have had more food during the spring than usual and we have had less of the yellow tips than for several seasons past. Your experience does not disprove my theory in the least. The yellow tips appear while the plants are making a rapid growth in the early spring. At that time great quantities of water are given, and usually without a proportionate supply of plant food. This lack of food is, I think, largely responsible for the trouble. Afterward the trouble gradually disappears.

The young stock does not usually show the same trouble. I think that also proves my theory, since the young plants are planted in new soil, which has plenty of nourishment in it.

It is not a fact, as you seem to think, that only the Enchantress family show this trouble. I could name several varieties which behaved similarly during the last few seasons of their existence. But of course not all varieties will go in the same way.

The foregoing remarks are mere arguments to sustain my theory. Further investigation may prove the whole theory wrong, but at this time it strikes me as the most plausible of all the theories advanced.

A. F. J. B.

PLANTS DO NOT THRIVE.

I am sending you under separate cover some samples of diseased plants. Can you tell me what the trouble is and how to remedy it? I have not been able to grow geraniums or vincas successfully for the last three seasons. Every begonia I have is as bad as the sample I am sending you. These I bought in February and they did well for about three weeks; then they stopped growing and lost all their foliage.

I had not noticed the trouble among my ferns until this winter. The sample I am sending you was planted last November in fresh soil, consisting of well rotted sod with a light dressing of old cow manure. The lot has not advanced as well as usual and many of them are dead or dying. The houses are in the open country and are well ventilated. I have suspected that the trouble may be caused by the water, which is taken from a surface well; yet I have used this water for the last eight seasons and only lately have experienced serious trouble.

J. T. C.

I would advise sending samples of your soil to your state experimental station for analysis. It would also pay to have the water analyzed, to ascertain whether there is anything in it that would be likely to harm plant life. It is quite possible, however, that neither the water nor the soil is to blame. Are you quite sure that there is no sewer gas or illuminating gas leaking from some source into the houses? The condition of the plants would almost seem to point to some such cause. If gas is the trouble, it would be most likely to be injurious in winter, when the houses are not so well ventilated as in summer. Geraniums and vincas are each subject to leaf affections, but your trouble would not appear to be any one of these.

C. W.

BULB QUERIES.

I should like to inquire what would be the best way of treating lily and freesia bulbs that I did not plant this spring. Would they be all right for next spring? I also have some daffodils from which I cut the blooms. What can I do with them?

J. K.

Lilies and freesias not planted are of no value whatever another season and should be thrown away. Daffodils from which you have cut flowers under glass can be planted outdoors, but, while they will flower to some extent next year, they will be far inferior in quality to new bulbs.

C. W.

SWEET PEAS DYING OFF.

I have 600 feet of outdoor sweet peas and they have just commenced to bloom, the location being in Alabama. The stems are about ten inches long and bear two and three large flowers. The vines look rich and green, but I have noticed about a dozen vines that have turned yellow and on which the stems have rotted just below the soil. The seed was sown as you advised, in February, and the vines stand about four inches apart, or a little more. Do you think the stem-rot will spread all over the patch, and is there anything that can be done to stop it? The varieties grown are Frank Dolby, Nora Unwin and Countess Spencer. The weather has been quite dry this spring and I have watered the peas three or four times. The last time I watered I used liquid manure. I notice some of the vines are covered with aphids or plant lice. Will kerosene emulsion kill them and not injure the vines? I shall certainly appreciate any advice you may give, especially for the stem-rot.

H. A. C.

It is not easy to tell what may have caused the dying of the sweet pea vines. A fertile cause is earthing up the plants while young, as often recommended in seed catalogues and magazines. If your seeds were covered two and one-half to three inches deep they would need no further covering. Too thick sowing develops stem-rot, but this can not be your cause for the trouble. I am therefore inclined to the opinion that acidity of the soil is likely to be responsible for the plants dying off. You can correct this another year by liming the land the previous fall, but it would be no use doing this now.

I would advise pulling out all affected plants and likely you may not have much additional trouble. Keep the spaces between the rows well mulched with old manure, meadow hay, grass or littery straw. Water the plants freely and when they have started to flower, liquid manure once a week will be beneficial. Give the ground a soaking with clear water before applying the liquid stimulant, for it never should go on while the soil is dry. A good hosing overhead in the evening will help the plants, especially after hot days.

Whale oil soap can be used to clean out the aphids, also kerosene emulsion. Ivory soap, one pound to five gallons of water, may also be used. C. W.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Stock is plentiful and business is good, judging from all reports. Carnations are plentiful and are exceptionally good for this time of the year. Roses are in heavy demand, but there seems to be enough of them for all purposes. American Beauties are a little off crop in this locality and are not up to the standard in quality. Some of the wholesalers, however, say they will have plenty of good ones in a few days. Peonies and iris are being called for more this year than ever before, and some good stock of both is being sent in. The growers had a full crop of cut stock for Mothers' day and everyone had sold out before noon of that day. Bedding stock is selling faster this year than ever before. From present appearances there will be few geraniums left for Memorial day, and few of any other plants in the bedding line. Hydrangeas have been selling well and are practically all disposed of. Porch boxes and hanging baskets are still in heavy demand.

Various Notes.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is exceedingly busy at the greenhouses, planting out chrysanthemums, of which the firm will plant a great many more this year than formerly. The greenhouses look exceptionally fine.

Chas. A. Schultz, formerly with Biedermann & Son, has started business for himself at 1657 Topping avenue, and the trade wishes him success.

R. S. Brown & Son have purchased a new Mack 1½-ton truck. They had a top put on it, which gives it an elegant appearance. They are still extremely busy with their spring orders.

Henry Kusik & Co. report business unusually heavy, especially in wire work. They are far behind in filling the orders for hanging baskets. The peonies that they are receiving are in fine shape and they dispose of all they can get hold of.

Arthur Newell reports that the demand on Mothers' day cleaned up all the cut flowers he had on hand and the business far exceeded his expectations.

Samuel Murray was unusually busy last week decorating for luncheons. He is showing a fine lot of Canterbury bells in his window and they are going fast.

The Geo. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co. expects to cut 30,000 peony blooms this season at Pleasant Hill. Beauties are off crop with them at present, but they are cutting a heavy lot of carnations and roses. They had a heavy run on out-of-town funeral work last week. W. J. B.

APPRECIATION

THE funeral of the late Gilbert Leonard Grant, who died at his home in California May 18, was held at Soquel cemetery Thursday, May 22.

The announcement of Mr. Grant's untimely demise has brought many expressions of sorrow, several of which are especially appreciated because they come from those formerly associated with him in business and in a position to know a side of his character not open to those whose relations were less intimate:

From an editorial in the Santa Cruz Daily Surf:

"In the death of G. L. Grant this county loses one of its best and most efficient citizens. Mr. Grant was one of those rare men who in private life took more interest in the public welfare than does the average salaried official. Such men from the standpoint of political economy are the very salt of the earth. His death so soon after a 'successful surgical operation' comes as a decided shock to his friends and the community. Mr. Grant and his family came to Santa Cruz county about ten years ago, consigned to California to save his life from a nervous breakdown incident to overwork and the rigors of Chicago climate. Here he not only found rest and recreation, but recuperation, remaining but a comparatively short time in the invalid class. He purchased from the Hihn company a tract of cut-over timber land on the crest of the mountain northwest from Soquel, and commenced home-making. The place was aptly christened Overlook, and from time to time it has been the pleasure of the Surf to chronicle the evolution of this property from barrenness to beauty.

"Meanwhile Mr. Grant took a lively interest in local and national politics, in conservation, forestry and fire protection, and our last conversation with him in the Surf office only a few days ago related to plans for protection from forest fires, and for the extension of irrigating facilities in this county.

"In the death of Mr. Grant, not only his family, but the city and county of Santa Cruz, have sustained a severe loss."

I can not tell you how great was the shock when I opened The Review and saw there Mr. Grant's portrait surrounded by the mourning border. He was so full of untiring life, and so vital in mental activity that it is hard for his friends to realize their loss. I was associated with him in business for several years, first as his New York correspondent, and afterwards with him in the office. I felt not only admiration for his immense capacity for hard work, and his untiring ability to master business details, that must be shared by all who knew him, but also a profound esteem for the man himself. His inflexible standards of right and wrong, and his scorn of those who would put expediency above moral standards, contrast most forcibly with many exponents of business ethics. His shrewd judgment of men and things, his varied career and analytical mind made him delightful in conversation, and his kindly touch of humor, wholly American, and often called forth in response to some deeper feeling, was displayed most helpfully in smoothing the hard places for those around him. I shall always remember him as one of the biggest personalities I have ever known. It is a great loss to us all, but above all to the home circle where he both gave and inspired such loyalty and affection. Emily Taplin Royle.

Rural New-Yorker.

The writer read this morning of the untimely death of Mr. Grant and was shocked to learn that he had passed away so suddenly. It was only a week or so ago that he telephoned us from Overlook and we had been anticipating seeing him either here at the office or at the ranch, which he was planning to visit. Please accept our sincere sympathy. M. B. Massol.

Braslan Seed Growers Co.

I regret to learn of the death of Mr. Grant, which has just been noted. Although I met him only two or three times, and many years ago, yet my weekly perusal of The Review served to keep me in full touch with him and his passing brings a sense of personal loss. I had hoped that sometime when in California, where I am every year or two, I might again have the pleasure of meeting him. Although his decease was untimely in the matter of years, he had lived more than the average man who fails to receive until much later in life the summons that sooner or later comes to all. Our sympathy in this great bereavement goes out to family and associates.

John C. Chase.

Derry, N. H.

Mr. Grant's death is a great shock. Though we had not met in some years, those meetings are as vivid as events of today. I have always held the highest regard for him.

John Welsh Young.

Philadelphia.

I wish to express my sorrow in learning of the death of Mr. Grant. I consider him as one of the brightest and best men connected with the trade. During the early days of The Review I had the pleasure of spending some most delightful hours with him, hours that always will remain a pleasant memory. Nixon H. Gano.

Martinsville, Ind.

I extend sympathy to all connected with The Review in the loss of Mr. Grant. During the World's Fair, 1893, I called upon him in his office, and most pleasant memories remain of the short time spent with him.

John F. Rupp.

Shiremanstown, Pa.

Mr. Grant had many warm personal friends in the east and his passing, in its loss to American floriculture, is considered little less than a national calamity.

J. Austin Shaw.

New York.

The sad news that came with The Review, Friday, May 23, announcing the death of Gilbert L. Grant, was a great shock to his many friends in St. Louis. The trade knew him as a man it was a pleasure to be associated with. He was honest, square and clean. His friends miss him; enemies he had none. May those who laid him in mother earth say as wrote Mark Twain:

Warm spring sun,
Shine kindly here;
Warm southern wind,
Blow softly here.

Green sod above,
Lie light, lie light;
Good night, dear heart,
Good night, good night.

OBITUARY.

William C. Trimble.

William C. Trimble, the senior member of the Trimble family at Princeton, Ill., and vice-president of the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co., died May 24 of heart failure, while playing croquet on the City Club grounds. He had reached the ripe old age of 82 years 7 months and 2 days. He was born in Ohio and removed to Princeton in 1849, where he made his home for sixty-four years. He leaves a wife and ten children, five sons and five daughters, all of whom are married except two of the sons. Mrs. Trimble had eight of the children beside her at the funeral, which was held May 26, there being a large attendance and many flowers. Among those in the trade who were present were Robert Simmen, La Salle, Ill.; B. Katzwinkle, Mendota, Ill.; George Heath, Morris, Ill., and Carl Erickson and Mrs. N. P. Colberg, Princeton, Ill.

Samuel D. Willard.

Samuel D. Willard, of Geneva, N. Y., a widely known former nurseryman and fruit grower, died May 23, aged 78 years. He had served eight years as postmaster of Geneva and was a member of the State Fair Commission for many years.

James F. Dwyer.

James F. Dwyer died May 19, after a short illness, at his home, 199 West Ninth street, Brooklyn, N. Y. He was born in Aurora, Ill., but had lived in Brooklyn for many years, being associated with his brothers in the florists' business. He was a member of St. Mary Star of the Sea church, Court and Nelson streets. He is survived by his father and three brothers. The latter are Thomas, Dennis and Michael.

Jean R. Trumphy.

Jean Rudolph Trumphy, known in two continents as a horticulturist, died May 21 in a hospital at Flushing, L. I., N. Y., aged 83 years. His death was hastened by an accident in the bathroom of his home five weeks ago, when he fell and broke his right hip. He was born in Glains, Switzerland, March 16, 1830, and came to America at the age of 26 to join the forces of Samuel Parsons, then the leading American nurseryman. He assisted in the introduction of hydrangeas in America, as well as several evergreens and the Japanese maples. His knowledge of horticulture was gained in nearly every country in Europe. He was once employed in the gardens of the king of Bavaria.

Henry Winfield.

Henry T. W. Winfield died May 24 at his residence in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was the father of Harry Winfield, of Nutley, N. J., and had been a prominent florist in the eastern district for more than twenty years. He is survived by his wife, Clara; one son, Harry, and a daughter, Mrs. James K. Jenkinson, and six grandchildren. He was a prominent member of the Seymour Club and was graduated from Oxford University. Funeral services were held May 26, interment being in Mount Olivet cemetery, Brooklyn.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Prices have shown a decided hardening in the last few days, due to the near approach of Memorial day, and flowers are not any too plentiful. Roses never make much of an advance at this floral festival, and the prices on them show little change, but they are cleaning up well. Among the specially popular sorts still are Taft, Ward, Hillingdon and the reds, Richmonds being in especial demand. Russells are in active demand and Beauties are moving better. Carnations show an aggressive front; $4 to $6 are current prices and many are booked at $8 per hundred for Memorial day, some even higher. Scarletts, Benora, Pink Delight and Gloriosa are leaders.

Short-stemmed sweet peas have been druggy, but good, long-stemmed flowers have made $1.50 per hundred with ease. Some late tulips still come in and a small supply of these will be available for Memorial day. Outdoor valley is quite abundant. Some excellent lilies are seen and a good crop of both candidums and longiflorums will be available. Colored stocks are being heavily bought; so are such flowers as feverfew, candytuft and snapdragons. The last double violets arrived May 22. Gardenias are rather scarce, with a light demand. Cattleyas are plentiful, but move quite well. The demand for ferns and asparagus is good, and growers of bedding plants, hydrangeas, etc., are doing a rushing business.

Club Field Day.

The field day of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, at Wm. H. Elliott's establishment, Madbury, N. H., May 21, was the most successful the club has yet held, 125 making the trip. The special train pulled out of the North Union station promptly at 9 o'clock. Cigars, cards and other entertainment, furnished by Mr. Elliott, beguiled the members, or some part of them, during the pleasant 65-mile railroad trip. An inspection of the greenhouses was at once made on arrival at Madbury. The large rose house, 60 x 1,340, was first inspected. A good deal of young stock had been planted and everything was in first-class shape. Another house, 42½ x 812, seemed comparatively small after being in the 60-foot one. The varieties grown included White Killarney, Double White Killarney, Dark Pink Killarney, Killarney Queen, Richmond, Mrs. Aaron Ward, Lady Hillingdon, Sunburst and Christie Miller.

The last named is first-class, both for summer and winter. Mrs. Ward is largely grown and proves much superior to Sunburst and Hillingdon in every way. About 75,000 roses are grown. The coming season some carnations will be planted; about 30,000 are growing in the field. Visitors were interested in the way the rose soil is prepared; it is spread out in the field about a foot thick in the fall, and in the spring a good coating of cow manure is spread on and well harrowed in. Bone is added when the compost is ready to go in. The soil at Madbury evidently suits roses, judging from the growth they make, and those who looked askant at Mr. Elliott when he first decided to locate at Madbury are now convinced that he knew what he was about and made a wise move.

Following the inspection of the greenhouses, the model barns and farm buildings were looked over. About 100 head of cattle are kept, including some high-grade Holsteins. Pigs and poultry are also kept in considerable numbers. Among the special crops grown on the farm are fodder corn, mangel-wurzels and sugar beets. The farm and woodlands cover 450 acres altogether. A battery of four boilers, with 700 aggregate horse-power, heats the greenhouses, etc., and consumes about 1,800 tons of coal annually.

Dinner was served in the farm barn, and everyone enjoyed the splendid repast served by Mrs. Elliott and a willing corps of assistants. After the inner man had been satisfied, President W. J. Kennedy opened the postprandial exercises. He first called on Prof. E. A. White, of Amherst, who spoke on the scientific aspects of gardening. William E. Doyle, as the oldest retail florist in Boston, came next on the list and made a capital address. William Penn was introduced as the modern florist. He spoke strongly on the publicity end of the business and was warmly applauded.

M. H. Norton was called upon to respond for the "Old Guard," which he did ably. William Sim said a good word for the Sweet Pea Society and Peter Fisher for the American Carnation Society. William Nicholson was introduced as a retired grower of beautiful carnations, and spoke well. Herman H. Bartseh, the noted plant grower and club vice-president, followed with an incisive address. Then came Fred J. Elder, of the Lord & Burnham Co., as representative of greenhouse construction. William Downs spoke in his usual cogent way for the private gardeners. Henry M. Robinson responded for the wholesale florists, Robert Cameron for the press and Joseph White for the retail florists' clerks. Mr. White worked considerable comedy into his address and brought down the house. Mrs. Elliott made a short address and Mr. Elliott pronounced the benediction in his usual able way.

Following the oratorical feast, the ladies in the party were taken in autos, in charge of Mrs. Elliott, to see points of interest, while Mr. Elliott piloted male members to many romantic parts on the wooded portion of his estate. The return journey to Boston was made at 5 o'clock and the North station was reached promptly at 6:30. The weather was perfect during the entire day and the outing will long be remembered as one of the most delightful that the members who attended have ever enjoyed.

Various Notes.

William H. Elliott is starting to cut a nice crop of Kaiserin roses at his Brighton establishment. His Prince de Bulgarie roses are fine, and he also has a splendid lot of Beauties.

John T. Gale, of Tewksbury, is making quite a hit with a grand lot of Apple Blossom Spencer sweet peas.

Edward Wood, of Lexington, is one of the largest local growers of anemones. He also specializes in carnations and Asparagus plumosus.

F. J. Dolansky, of Lynn, is cutting over 20,000 longiflorum lilies for Memorial day. He is cutting hundreds of cattleyas daily. In addition to Mössie and gigas, he has some Mendellii and speciosissima.

A. A. Pembroke, of North Beverly, has found no trouble in booking orders for all his high-grade carnations for Memorial day at fancy prices. He has also fine batches of candytuft and ten weeks' stocks.

R. P. Peterson, of Saxonville, and Nelson & Johnson, of Framingham, were heavy shippers of fine ten weeks' stocks last week to the Boston Flower Exchange.

I am glad to report John Barr as considerably improved in health, at the Corey Hill hospital, Brookline.

P. J. Riley, of Lowell, who has what was formerly the Shepard Greenhouses, is sending in remarkably fine Shakespeare and America gladioli to George Cartwright, at the Boston Flower Exchange.

The recent destructive fire at the pot manufactory of A. H. Hews & Co. has not caused any delay in the filling of orders for pots.

Thomas Roland has one of his new houses, 52 x 600, at Revere, planted with roses—a little over 30,000 plants. Several forms of Killarney, Richmond, Ward and Hillingdon are grown; also smaller batches of Russell, Mrs. Sawyer and Sunburst. From another house of similar size a splendid crop of tomatoes is now being picked, Comet being mostly grown. A. A. Livermore is manager at the Revere establishment. Mr. Roland has a cut of 20,000 longiflorum lilies for Memorial day at his Nahant range.

Ladies' night will be the attraction at the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club. There will be a fine entertainment and dance. President Kennedy plans to inaugurate a ladies' auxiliary of the club the same evening.

E. Allan Peirce has returned from an extended trip through Maine and New Hampshire in the interests of the Flower Growers' Sales Co. and he booked many excellent Memorial day orders. This company is preparing for a big Memorial day trade and is well equipped to care for all orders.

Norris F. Comley is the largest shipper of sweet peas now to the Boston Coöperative Market. His bachelor's buttons also are fine.

Many expressions of regret were heard from local growers when they learned of the death of G. L. Grant. He was familiar to many who attended the S. A. F. conventions.

Among the finest Spenceer sweet peas I have seen this season are those grown by Geo. O. Bucknam, of Stoneham. He is also in the front ranks of carnation growers. W. N. Craig.

TO BEAUTIFY SLOPES.

I would appreciate a little advice on how to beautify slopes of hills, some with rough surfaces; also shaded hills. M. C.

Use as far as possible native trees and shrubs in any plantings you may do. They are more likely to succeed than foreign varieties and are just as beautiful. Plant in colonies or groups, to be effective, and do not make these too symmetrical. The more natural plantings are, the more pleasing and satisfying. In evergreen trees Pinus Strobus, or white pine; P. Mughus, or dwarf mountain pine, and P. Austriaca, or Austrian pine, will all do well in comparatively poor soil. The various junipers are fine for covering the ground, especially Juniperus Sabina, Savin juniper. Then J. Virginica, the red cedar; J. communis Hibernica, the Irish juniper, and J. Suecica, the Swedish juniper, are fine for promiscuous dotting or growing in scattered colonies. Use such of your native deciduous trees and shrubs as you like and which seem to thrive under similar conditions in your vicinity. Crataegus, or hawthorns, are beautiful in flower and fruit and would do well with you. Rosa setigera, R. Wichuraiana, R. rugosa and other species could be used effectively, especially where they could hang over rocks or trail over boulders. Colonies of native perennials, once started, would soon naturalize themselves and produce beautiful effects. Do not plant too thickly and do not adopt any formality. Do not mix evergreens and deciduous stock and do not plant blue spruce and other out-of-place material. Prepare good holes, plant firmly and you will get returns which will be gratifying. C. W.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
 We both have them.

It is said that the increasing use of raffia for the manufacture of artificial flowers threatens to affect the price of the article for horticultural purposes.

It is the annual experience that Boston ferns in salable condition are well cleaned up in the spring. When frost approaches there probably will be another oversupply.

AMERICAN growers who have visited Perry's Hardy Plant Farm, at Enfield, Middlesex, England, and they are many, will learn with regret that the proprietor, Amos Perry, is seriously ill.

THE daffodil is occupying a place close to the center of the stage in England these days. The prices asked for stock of some of the novelties reminds one of the tulip craze in Holland.

DON'T accept a check for a purchase and give cash change. Such a proposition from a stranger should be regarded by a florist just as a railroad engineer would regard a red-light in the darkness. Danger! Watch out!

THIS has been a peculiar season for outdoor work. Except for occasional brief hot waves, the weather has held steadily cool over a large part of the country and Memorial day finds the season decidedly backward in many places.

BEDDING stock is cleaning up in splendid shape. Although the supply was much larger this year than ever before, it looks as though everything will be sold except, perhaps, stock that was not ready in time. Each year there usually is some surplus of stock that would have met with good sale had it been ready earlier.

THE SUBSCRIPTION SWINDLER.

The Review wishes it could reach the few florists who are not subscribers with a warning not to pay money to strangers in the belief that they are subscribing to this paper.

Notices similar to this have been printed so often that nearly all in the trade are safe from the swindler who thinks his operations so petty as to be safe—his success is among the few who haven't seen the paper in the last year.

Nearly always the subscription swindler offers a gift of some sort, a book or a knife to lure the unwary. Any such offer in conjunction with The Review is evidence of fraud. The Review is worth its subscription price to anyone whom the advertisers would care to reach, and no premiums ever are offered with it.

When last heard from the false subscription agent was working in Pennsylvania. At Sharpsburg he gave a receipt signed G. McClellan, Agent, American Subscription Agency, New York City. It was on a blank such as can be bought in any stationery store for a nickel a pad.

Review representatives are all well known members of the trade in their respective localities. Those who do not know them should mail their subscriptions direct to the office in Chicago instead of intrusting the dollar to a stranger.

This is a long screed, but the swindle should be checked, to save annoyance to the trade.

If there are any who have been swindled without making complaint, The Review will be glad to hear from them.

FROM 'WAY DOWN EAST.

Chicago has become almost the center of population of the United States—it is the ideal location for a publishing business. The great bulk of the people, including florists, can be reached in a shorter time from Chicago than from any other city in the United States. It shows in the volume of advertising carried in The Review. No matter where the advertiser is located, the results are the same, as is shown by the following letter from an advertiser almost as far east as one can be from Chicago:

We have sold every plant we can spare. The Review certainly will do the business; the only thing is we never have enough stock to fill all orders.—F. A. Willard, Hope Greenhouse, Providence, R. I., May 13, 1913.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The business of the early part of last week was nothing to boast of, stock being plentiful, demand light and average prices low, but as the week progressed conditions improved. The weather was unfavorable for the production of stock and as receipts went down demand increased. The result was that the end of the week found the market extremely active, stronger than it has been since Mothers' day.

The present week opened with Memorial day prices in effect. An extremely large volume of business was on the books for the three days, May 27 to 29, with the heaviest shipments going out May 28. Wholesalers unite in saying that there never has been so large a volume of business booked in advance. The greater part of the orders were for carnations, but other flowers also shared in the increased demand. It is remarkable that with the price of carnations doubling up for Memorial day and the prices of other flowers advanced little, if at all, still the demand is principally for the carnations. At the opening of this week a good carnation cost as much as a medium length rose, or as much as a good peony. The indications are that there will be enough roses, especially of the longer grades, and an abundance of peonies, but that it will be impossible to fill anywhere near all the orders for carnations. The weather has been decidedly unfavorable for the carnation growers. The majority of them did not have their houses in full crop at Mothers' day and have been unable to bring them in during the fortnight which has elapsed. It is the general report that the houses are a sea of buds but that several days of bright sun will be necessary to bring on anything like the full cut. The crops made scarcely any progress last week, the weather being unseasonably cold, with several days of rain, and scarcely any sun. It undoubtedly reduced the Memorial day supply by tens of thousands of

FANCY STOCK

FOR YOUR JUNE WEDDING WORK

If there is any time your customers will not forgive you the use of anything but the best grade of flowers, it is for the June Weddings. Give a bride the best and you win the new family for regular patrons, but let the wedding flowers be open to the slightest criticism and you not only lose the bride but her parents. To be on the safe side, use Amling's flowers.

ORCHIDS

The Cattleyas we offer are western-grown, shipped fresh—nothing finer in the country and sure to reflect credit on the florist using them.

SWEET PEAS

There are no sweet peas to compare with our Butterflies. And our supply is by far the largest in the middle west. All colors. Use these for your Bridesmaid's bouquet and make a hit.

FANCY VALLEY

For years and years it has been recognized by those who know Chicago market conditions that Amling can be depended on at all times to supply the very best grade of Valley. We always have it.

ROSES

We have fine crops of Roses in all varieties and can furnish any length in quantity, but are specially strong on the medium and long grades. The quality of our Roses is excellent. If you have not tried them, you will find the size of bud is larger than ordinarily is found on stems of equal length. Our special long Roses are the ones you want when your customer demands the best money will buy.

CARNATIONS

The first few warm, bright spring days will relieve any shortage of Carnations in this market, but then the buyer who wants to avoid disappointment will be all the more certain to order of Amling—our stock has the reputation of holding up long after it is unsafe to ship the ordinary grade of Carnations. Our stock is good—and it also is in large supply right now.

PEONIES

You know, and we know, that there is a lot of difference in peonies. Good peonies are about as profitable as anything a retail florist can handle in the season of June Weddings and Commencements, while poor peonies often are a dead loss, not to mention the disappointment. We do not handle miscellaneous consignments of peonies. Our supply comes from a few sources that have proved dependable and which have been steadily enlarged. You can bank on the quality of the peonies you get from Amling.

EASTER LILIES

OUR FERNS ARE GOOD

There are plenty of Ferns in the country, but those in storage are spoiling fast, and no one wants the soft new stock while good stored stock is to be had. Our Ferns are good—never kept better. How many will you have?

blooms. May 26 was the most discouraging of the week so far as weather goes, but the sun came out May 27 and never was more gladly welcomed, though almost too late to help the Memorial day supplies.

The peony is the flower that is holding prices down this week. There is an abundant supply of this now popular Memorial day flower and the buyer can supply his needs almost at his own price, providing he is not critical of quality. The strictly first-class peonies are commanding the usual Memorial day rates, but the lower grades are being sold rather cheaper than usual, because of the large supply. There is a point in price at which the buyers turn from carnations to peonies. The average wholesaler is of the opinion that the scarcity of carnations early in the week was in a measure due to the growers holding back and there are predictions of a slump May 29.

Beauties are rather more plentiful than they were and the quality of the roses coming in is excellent; in fact, the roses are just a little too good for the Memorial day demand, which is for the cheaper grades. Cape jasmine from the south is coming in heavily and the quality generally is good because of the suitable weather conditions. This stock promises to realize better prices than for several years. Spanish iris has practically disappeared, but its place has been taken by small-flowered gladioli, principally Blushing Bride. Snapdragons are less abundant than they have been. Easter lilies are fairly plentiful. Such flowers as daisies, orchids and valley are little called for at Memorial day, not being showy enough for the purpose.

The usual flurry in ferns is omitted this year. There is an abundance, though the quality varies considerably. Smilax and asparagus strings are in extremely light supply but not in special demand.

Various Notes.

I. B. Thurman has started in the retail flower business at 436 East Forty-third street, having had his formal opening May 24. He has not previously been connected with the trade.

Zech & Mann are now nicely settled in their new quarters at 30 East Randolph street and, with three or four times the amount of space that the old location afforded, the facilities for handling their business in both city and shipping trade are thereby increased. The change was effected without trouble and Mr. Zech says the shipping department hardly experienced a moment's delay but was able to work with greater ease on account of the additional elbowroom. The new ice-box will be ready in a day or two.

Max Cohen has been forced to close his store on Sixty-third street, run under the name of the Jackson Floral Co. He lost the lease.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says that this week opened with more peonies in sight than this market ever has been called on to assimilate for Memorial day. He predicts an enormous business, with the good stock selling at such reasonable prices that the considerable quantities of low grade peonies will have little value.

It has developed that the cold of May 11 did considerable damage to some of the local peony crops. A peculiar feature is that the injury to the buds was not apparent for several days, also that the early varieties escaped while the late sorts were nipped.

W. A. Rieman, Vincennes, Ind., has been shipping peonies in great quantity to the A. L. Randall Co. for the last ten days. The season now is closing in southern Indiana.

Spring is here at last, or all signs fail, N. J. Wietor having run his car into the shop May 26 to exchange the limousine for the touring body.

L. H. Winterson says the cold weather is prolonging the local season at Winterson's Seed Store.

A. T. Pyfer predicts that no one will complain of the scarcity of carnations in June.

One large grower says Tuesday's sun added $1,000 to his week's sales on carnations alone.

O. Johnson, of the Batavia Greenhouse Co., says planting Beauties will be finished this week. The number of plants has been increased twenty-five per cent this year.

So far as heard from, Peter Reinberg was the first grower to cut Beauties from the new plants this year. He started last week.

C. W. McKellar says he thinks May was an unusually good month for all in the trade in Chicago.

The bank at Oak Park of which E. C. Amling is president will be a year old Saturday. The wholesaler's record for conservatism has stood him in good stead in his banking business and the institution shows earnings equal to all expenses of starting the bank and

NOTHING SO IMPORTANT

The month of June is one of great importance to every florist—the events connected with it are sure to put you and your business in touch with those you must look to for patronage in the future. It is of the utmost importance that your stock be of the best grade—good of color and every quality—the kind that gives lasting satisfaction.

OUR KILLARNEYS ARE THE BEST

They won first place at the Chicago Spring Show. Our Orchids, Sweet Peas, Peonies and Valley are of the same high quality. It's your gain if you send us your order for stock for the June wedding and school graduation business. It will be a mistake not to have the best.

equipping its new building, with a small profit. Among bankers it is considered a splendid record.

J. H. McNeilly, the Sixty-third street florist-confectioner, points out a new source of summer demand. He says the modern flat buildings call for a big hanging basket of Boston fern for each sun parlor. Sun-parlor flats are being built by the hundred in Woodlawn and he has sold dozens of hanging baskets since spring arrived.

Those to whom the Poehlmann establishment is a familiar affair will note with interest the impression created on the mind of W. Wells, the widely known English chrysanthemum and carnation specialist, who visited Morton Grove a few weeks ago. His notes appear in another column of this issue.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held June 5 at the Union restaurant, when President Guy French will give a list of the contributions made for the flood sufferers. The list exceeded the needs of those who asked or were willing to accept help.

Heim Bros., at Blue Island, received a new store outfit this week when Buchbinder Bros. delivered a handsome, large white display refrigerator, together with the necessary store fixtures to match. When opened, the new store will be one of the most up-to-the-minute shops outside of the loop district, according to Sidney Buchbinder, who gave the job his personal attention.

Yellow roses are expected to reach the high water mark in popularity during the month of June, for wedding and commencement purposes, and C. L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, says he believes they will lead all other colors, for a while at least.

So heavy has the demand been this year for the new hand sprayer manufactured by the Illinois Metals Co. that a new factory location has been put in commission, giving General Manager J. P. Burke a chance to work an extra large force and place the output in shape to meet the demands of the florists, nurserymen and fruit growers. The new factory is a model one and is located at 2441 West Twenty-second street.

Having disposed of Memorial day, Phil Schupp, of J. A. Burglars again visited the store of the Auburndale Goldfish Co. on the night of May 23. As was the case earlier in the year, little of value was taken and no damage was done, owing to the fact that K. N. Cooper, the manager, profited by the last experience and now leaves the safe open.

J. A. Evans, Richmond, Ind., was a visitor last week.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Peonies dominate the market. The supply is heavy and the quality is fair to good. They are being used wherever it is possible to use them, for they make a better showing for the money than anything else. High prices are not asked, under existing conditions. There are too many flowers and not enough business, although really choice peonies are more readily sold at the top prices of $6 to $8 than are the ordinary grades at $3 to $4, only there are few of the fine ones. Carnations have suffered since the arrival of the peonies. The carnations that are poorly grown do not keep well and are no end of trouble to all concerned. Fine carnations have brought fairly good prices, but they do not sell themselves by any means.

Roses have been plentiful. The fancy grades have the preference on the heavily stocked market at the low prices that are asked. There has been a little spurt in the demand for Beauties, also felt by the better grade of Richmond. Sweet peas have been in fair supply at prices that had fallen a little in sympathy with the rest of the market. Gladioli are fine; Brenchleyensis, May and Augusta are all in demand. Baby gladioli are less plentiful. Iris is nearly over. Cattleya gigas is still at a premium. Quite a lot of valley goes out of town on the orders for

The Crisis in Cut Flowers.

There was a time not so long ago when it was the accepted thing to make much of every grower, big or little, when he came to town. He received hearty greetings everywhere; his hands were warmly shaken; the health of his wife and children, if he had any, was asked about with solicitude; he was made generally to feel that he was an important person indeed. This was natural, for what was a fellow going to do when he had orders for flowers and did not know where in the world to get them? Every source of supply was carefully guarded and there were times when price was no object at all if the flowers could only be had in time. Those days have passed. At first the change came slowly, the growers gradually drifting into the wholesale houses instead of dealing direct. Prices advanced at first. With the increase in supply, an increase so rapid as to almost daze the onlooker, came lower prices except in times of scarcity or in cases of high quality. The trend of prices has been steadily downward, taking it all the season through. The point has now been reached where the question of running a greenhouse establishment at a profit is a serious one. The grower possessed of high cultural skill, a modern plant and favorable conditions can make a larger profit, perhaps, than in the old day. Where one, two or all three of these conditions are lacking he will have to devote the closest attention to every business detail to prevent a loss. The future now, as in the past, lies with the wholesalers. I mean the future from a business standpoint. To their enterprise is due the fact that we have three or four times as much glass around Philadelphia as we require for the local market. To their ability is due the development of the shipping of cut flowers out of town, making it possible to operate all this glass profitably. To them we must look to further broaden the field to ensure future prosperity.

Artificial Flowers.

Paul Berkowitz discussed with energy the advisability of boycotting artificial flowers: "Artificial flowers have been used long before our time, when immortelle designs and milkweed were in vogue. The people who used these flowers rarely used natural flowers, and vice versa. It is ridiculous to say that the sale of one hurts the sale of the other. Each has its use. Today the medal design, the crepe flower, the prepared foliage have come to the front. They can be used where natural flowers would be useless, and their sale brings a profit to the florist. Do you know that the leading florist in a manufacturing city of this country has a monthly order for thirty of these designs? They are made of magnolia leaves with a few Richmond roses. Do you think that florist, who caters to the smart set, would sell those thirty artificial wreaths for use in the cemeteries if they drove away business, or if natural flowers were better for the purpose?"

Various Notes.

Clarence W. Moore says that early advices indicate short crops of biennial vegetable seeds, such as cabbage and carrot. Mr. Moore believes that such shortage, if not extreme, will benefit rather than harm the market gardener,

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The wholesale cut flower market in New York last week was quite as usual at the season—supply abundant and prices steady, anticipatory of Memorial day. There surely was no limit to quantity in any department, especially of roses and orchids. American Beauties, the best even to the smaller buyers, did not go above 20 cents each and in large lots $15 and even $10 per hundred at times prevailed. Quality is deteriorating slightly and the general demand is lessening. The supply of all other varieties of roses is large, especially of the Killarneys, Bride, Maid and Maryland. Many boxes of these were closed out May 24 at heavy concessions from listed rates, and a goodly number of boxes remained in the ice chests unopened. A fair supply of Taft, Ward, Hillingdon, Chatenay and Sunburst arrive daily and none of these shows any recession in popularity. The good effects of the National Flower Show seem lasting in the interest displayed by the public in the novelties there exhibited.

The carnations arriving are largely first-class, but the quantity is enormous and prices fell last week. Few sold at over $2 per hundred last week. Considerable improvement is looked for this week, before the inevitable slump begins. The weather of late has been favorable and has kept the quality at the top. The wholesale mart is already flooded with peonies. The present week will see high tide in arrivals, the south evidently having concluded New York can handle millions of them profitably. Most of the southern stock has been cut prematurely and needs much coaxing before it is salable. Valley is firmer, some long-stemmed perfect stock touching 4 cents during the week, although 3 cents for the best is the average quotation. Gardenias are on their last legs for the season. Lilac has departed. There seems to be no limit to the orchids and prices are low for magnificent stock. No better flowers have reached the New York market this season. Lilies have remained steady, with an upward tendency as the week opens, and higher figures are expected as Memorial day approaches. Gladioli, large and small, are plentiful. Of sweet peas there seems to be an unlimited supply. Narcissi are of splendid quality. Daisies, pyrethrum, centaureas, stocks and mignonette are abundant enough to meet any possible demand. Smilax is scarce and most of it mediocre in quality.

In comparison with other years there seems to be no cause for pessimism. Some of the wholesalers called last week as good as any since Easter.

The present week finds business excellent with all in the wholesale district. Prices are good and Memorial day promises well. The shipments of peonies have increased.

The Southwestern Market.

The wholesale cut flower market during the week ending May 24 was in a much crowded condition and it afforded everything that was seasonable and at prices low enough to enable buyers to purchase quite heavily. The retailers say that the month of May has been good, as there were a great many weddings and receptions as well as much funeral work. Still, the large supply made it an almost daily necessity to cut the prices in order to dispose of the left-over stock to make room for the next day's receipts.

There have been large quantities of peonies in all colors, with prices as low as $2 per hundred. Gladioli of the Augusta, America and King varieties are becoming more plentiful each week, but the price holds up on these to $10 per hundred for first quality, which are extra fine. Cape jasmine buds from Texas are as yet not so plentiful as in former years at this time. Roses are extremely plentiful and hardly go over $6 per hundred. The bulk

The Kelley Floral Co., at Eighteenth and Olive streets, has rented the store next door, to be used for a plant annex. Mr. Kelley says the plant season has been good.

R. J. Windler and the Schoenle Floral Co., close neighbors on South Grand avenue, have been having some attractive cut flower and outdoor plant window displays of late. Both say the month of May has been good.

The St. Louis County Flower and Plant Growers' Association will hold its monthly meeting next Wednesday, June 4, at the Eleven Mile House at 8 p. m. President Vennemann and Secretary Deutschmann say they expect a large attendance and that several new members will be voted in.

A great supply of cut gladiolus spikes is expected this season from the Kirkwood growers. The cut from indoors has been large of late and when the cut comes from outdoors the market will have an oversupply. Among the heaviest growers of outdoor glads are C. E. De Wever and W. J. Pilcher.

dance of rain for a week and the favorable weather has been utilized by gardeners in setting plants.

This has been a busy week for all our florists. Several of our colleges have been holding their commencements and the demand for flowers was never better for such events. There will be a series of commencements for two weeks yet, as this is a college town.

The supply of roses is good, although American Beauties are not of the best quality. They show that it is summer here. My Maryland is especially fine, while the others are pretty well up to the average. Carnations on the whole are not so plentiful or so good in quality as they were earlier, although some growers are reaping the crop that they did not get early in the season. There were some really good pink dahlias on the market this week, and they were selling, too, even if they are out of season. Peonies are not nearly so plentiful as last season and there will be few if any shipped to the northern markets. They are kept well cleaned up, at from $1 to $1.50 per dozen, retail.

Bedding plants were never in such demand. There are few really decent geraniums left, and salvias and lantanas can not be found. Some of our

Various Notes.

The Joy Floral Co. has been doing more advertising in the daily press this season than ever before. It is paying and will be continued. The company expects to push the new sport from Killarney this fall and winter.

J. F. Corbett has been delayed in opening his new flower store on account of the difficulty of securing a desirable location.

The Mt. Olivet Cemetery greenhouses are having a busy season. They had a fine lot of bedding plants, but they are rapidly disappearing. They use mostly salvias, geraniums and coleus.

Geny Bros. are erecting their new house. They say they have had a busy two weeks. Their stock has been kept cleaned up closely most of the time.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Charles N. Page, Des Moines, Ia.;
Secretary-Treasurer, C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-first annual convention at Cleveland, June
24 to 26, 1913.

IN view of the many very real shortages in the 1912 seed crops, it is remarkable how satisfactorily the 1913 seed selling has been handled.

J. M. THORBURN & Co., New York, have been obliged to change their street numbers because of the erection of the Woolworth building, to 53 Barclay street and 54 Park place.

Not a few buyers of peas are confident that prices will not be higher after harvest than they are now. The large acreage in the northwest is expected to be an important factor.

F. M. BORDERS, who has been proprietor of the Wichita Central Seed Co., at 243 North Main street, Wichita, Kan., since last December, has built up a good business. He handles a general line of seeds and supplies.

THE British seed trade is making strong representations to the government to secure an official station for seed testing, pointing out that it is not creditable that they must send to Zurich, in Switzerland, to get an authoritative opinion as to the purity of a sample of seed.

BALTIMORE newspapers last week printed the inventory of the personal property of the late J. A. Bolgiano, totaling $678,255, in addition to which the real estate is valued at over $50,000. The will divided the estate among the children. The seed business now is owned and conducted by the son, Charles J. Bolgiano.

Now that the seed season of 1913 is drawing to a close it appears that the volume of business does not compare with the exceptional season of 1912, but that it is generally in advance of the excellent season of 1911. For the decreased volume the seed shortages and the low market price of several important items produced from seeds are considered the principal causes.

THERE is a good crop of turnip in the vicinity of Nashville.

THERE has been a wonderful call for tomato plants this season, and since the May 10 freeze in the east the demand for stock with which to replant has not been easy to meet.

WITHOUT a doubt California this year will have the lightest sweet pea crop that has ever been known since the acreage became important. Those who have complained that prices were too low see a prospect of their getting up, for one season at least, but there is not likely to be much profit in it.

BECAUSE the seedsmen of the northern part of the state wished to affiliate, the Los Angeles organization known as the Southern California Seed Trade Association has dropped the first word from its title, thereby embracing everything within the state boundaries. Los Angeles. Secretary Reichard says that although only 2 years old, the association has progressed so well that "practically all the growers and dealers have found it to their advantage to become members."

MAULE IS SATISFIED.

"The season of 1912 was by all odds the best in the seed trade all over the country that we have witnessed for many years, and in our opinion it will be at least ten years before we have another such wonderful season. Comparing 1913 with 1912 shows a considerable loss, but, on the other hand, comparing it with 1911, which was a very good year indeed, it shows an increase in the volume of business of between $40,000 and $50,000 and makes a showing for this year much better than we anticipated early in the season, particularly in view of the fact that lots of good cabbage in growers' hands sold at $2 and $2.50 per ton, and plenty of onions at 10 cents per bushel. We see no reason to look for another wonderful year in 1914. If it is as satisfactory as the one just coming to a close, we will be entirely satisfied."

CONDITIONS IN IOWA.

"We have had a splendid business for the season just closing," says J. F. Linn, secretary of the A. A. Berry Seed Co., Clarinda, Ia., "but the volume of business was not quite so large as last year, which was a splendid year for the seed business. The demand for seed corn and seed potatoes has been limited this season; consequently trade was dull in this line. Grass is doing exceptionally well, but we are having a little too much rain for small grain and corn planting. Planting has been delayed on account of rain and it is getting late and we are afraid there will be much soft corn this fall on account of the late planting in many sections."

THE PARCEL POST.

The Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, writes: "We enclose herewith an extract from a letter sent us by one of our customers. We are receiving many such letters each day and we think that perhaps it would be well to publish this in your paper previous to the time of the seedsmen's convention. It is likely that some discussion of this parcel post matter will come up at the convention, as many of the members feel that the present arrangements of the parcel post system in regard to the seed trade are not satisfactory."

The enclosure is as follows: "Incisweet potatoes by parcel post. Had he applied to the grocery across the street from me they could have been delivered by the rural carrier right to his door for 29 cents. But they were 'seeds, roots, bulbs or tubers for planting' and would require 71 or 72 cents to go by parcel post. The express company carried them to ——— for 25 cents. Should one of my customers require eleven pounds of alfalfa to feed to his canary it could go to any point reached by our carrier for 15 cents, or any point within fifty miles for 35 cents. But if this customer intends to plant the seed instead of feeding his bird, it would cost him 88 cents to send either to anyone on a route from this office or to the remotest corner of the United States. It is certainly a great system, but who can call it just, fair or right?"

THE CLEVELAND PROGRAM.

James J. Hill, apostle of prosperity, formerly president of the Great Northern railroad, will address the American Seed Trade Association at Cleveland, June 24, during its thirty-first annual convention. The program, just issued by Secretary Kendel, shows the purpose of continuing last year's pretense of executive sessions, of which the stenographer was permitted to sell to newspapers a report they were not privileged to prepare for themselves.

The convention is to last three days, opening at 10 a. m., June 24, in the Hotel Statler. The program of papers, addresses and discussions announced is as follows:

"Are Standards of Purity Practicable in State Seed Laws?" by George S. Green, of Illinois Seed Co., Chicago.

"Seed Grown Under Irrigation," discussion led by J. C. Robinson, Waterloo, Neb.

"What the American Seed Trade Has Accomplished," by Albert McCullough, of J. M. McCullough's Sons Co., Cincinnati, O.

"Cost and Overhead Expense," by L. B. McCausland, of Ross Bros, Wichita, Kan.

"Intensified Farming," by James J. Hill, formerly president Great Northern railway, St. Paul, Minn.

For Wednesday evening, June 25, a lecture is announced, "Educative and Civic Influence of School Garden Work," by Miss Louise Klein Miller, curator Cleveland school gardens, to be illustrated with the stereopticon. The following are the social features: Tuesday evening, president's reception; Wednesday evening, annual banquet; Thursday afternoon, trolley ride out Euclid avenue to the nurseries of the Storrs & Harrison Co., Painesville, O.

The 1913 officers of the American Seed Trade Association are:

First Vice-president — Harry L. Holmes, Harrisburg, Pa.

Second Vice-president — Arthur B. Clark, Milford, Conn.

Secretary-treasurer — C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

region, though it was later replaced by white pine in some parts of the West Indies trade. A century ago the export of cypress shingles to the West Indies exceeded 100,000,000 a year. They were 22 or 44 inches long, and from 3 to 6 inches wide. In 1808 the price in the West Indies for the large size was from $8 to $10 a thousand, and at the shipping ports about half that.

PACIFIC COAST DEPARTMENT

San Diego, Cal.—A. Darnaud has obtained a permit to build an iron-frame greenhouse at 702 Market street, at a cost of $2,000.

Pendleton, Ore.—S. H. Forshaw is identified with the new floral society which is planning to hold a rose show this year. Only amateurs will be permitted to compete for the prizes.

Wenatchee, Wash.—Walter G. Dungey and A. E. Clark have formed a business partnership to grow bedding plants, cut flowers and vegetables. They have 21x120 feet under glass now and will add to their plant during the summer.

Spokane, Wash.—At the meeting of the Spokane Horticultural Society, May 13, H. E. Reimer spoke on the subject, "Summer Bedding Plants and Garden Work." Final plans were made for a flower show to be held during the Pow Wow in June.

Beno, Nev.—T. A. Ross has applied to the courts for an injunction against Fred J. Fischer, on the plea that Mr. Fischer has broken an agreement in re-engaging in the florists' trade. Mr. Fischer alleges that he is entirely within his rights in resuming business.

Sherwood, Ore.—A. I. Anderson, formerly in business here as a landscape gardener, has sold his land and other property, including the stock of roses, grafted lilacs, etc., to J. G. Bacher, of the Swiss Floral Co., Portland, Ore. Mr. Bacher has named his new establishment the Swiss Floral Nursery. Mr. Anderson has removed to Portland.

San Francisco, Cal.—The matter of eliminating street flower venders has been brought to the attention of the retail committee of the San Francisco Downtown Association by the California Retail Flower Association and action is expected within a few days. The florists hope to get valuable assistance in their efforts to end this form of competition.

Pasadena, Cal.—Among those injured in the collapse of the Auditorium during the Empire day celebration at Long Beach, Cal., May 24, were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Thomas, of 308 North Stevenson avenue, Pasadena, well known on the coast as expert chrysanthemum growers. Miss Sadie Thomas did not go to the beach with her parents, thus escaping injury and possible death. Mrs. Thomas is suffering from a broken collar-bone, while Mr. Thomas is badly bruised.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

The Market.

Not much improvement can be chronicled in business as yet, though a few early weddings have helped to enliven things a little. Spanish irises are over, but gladioli are filling their place, the pretty little Peach Blossom being an especial favorite. Mrs. Francis King and the old Brechleyensis make a bright and telling show. Carnations from under glass keep up in quality and quantity, the cool weather suiting them well. The outdoor stock is fair. Outdoor roses are a little scarcer and the quality is only fair, except in the case of the Brunners, which are good. Indoor roses are poor, except in a few instances. Centaureas are in good demand, but there is plenty to fill all orders. The weather has been so cool that shipping, even to distant points, has been perfectly satisfactory; the only trouble is that there has not been enough of it.

Asparagus plumosus and maidenhair ferns have been a little on the scarce side. Sprengeri is plentiful. Boston and Whitmani ferns are decidedly scarce, both in small sizes for shipping and in salable plants. The old sword ferns are becoming more in evidence, Nephrolepis tuberosa and N. exaltata being seen in quantity. Quite a number of small coleuses have been offered, as well as pretty little heliotrope plants, verbenas and other small items. Small ferns for dishes are in short supply.

Various Notes.

Ed. Rust, of the Palm Nurseries, South Pasadena, slipped when alighting from his automobile a short time ago and has been confined to the house for a while, but is out again now. At the nurseries some fine newly imported catleyas are being potted, and these, with the plants already grown, will make an excellent collection.

H. Plath, of San Francisco, left for home May 20 with a full order book, after a pleasant time here.

Robert Schenck is no longer with Morris Goldenson, on Third street, Oscar Paseman, lately of the Darling staff, having taken his place.

Coolidge's Rare Plant Gardens, at Pasadena, are always interesting, owing to the number of unusual things to be

The weather is all that can be desired. Cool days and cooler nights are favorable both to the grower and the retailer. Everything now centers on Memorial day. From all sides, according to reports, the shipping will be heavy, and those who make a specialty of this branch of the trade will have their hands full for a week. As to the amount of stock in sight, it does not seem to be so plentiful as at the same time last year. Sweet peas are not so plentiful and the same can be said of many other items that are especially used in shipping. Peonies have passed their best. Coreopsis, gaillardias, stocks, cornflowers, statice, candytuft and several varieties of everlasting flowers are much in evidence. Outside roses, owing to the favorable turn of the weather, are good and are largely used for shipping. Trade in town is not as good as might be wished, though there is considerable doing in the funeral line.

Various Notes.

It is with regret that the trade in the vicinity of San Francisco hear of the death of G. L. Grant, at Soquel, Cal. Mr. Grant made various trips to San Francisco and was well acquainted with many members of the craft here.

The Thorsted Floral Co. will open a new retail establishment on Broadway, near Fourteenth Street, about June 1.

The directors of the Panama-Pacific international exhibition have appointed G. A. Dennison as chief of the department of horticulture in place of George C. Roeding, who resigned.

Chief Deputy Merrill has been suspended by A. J. Cook, chief of the department of plant inspection for the state of California.

The showing of calceolarias in the conservatory at Golden Gate park is at its best now and attracts much attention. A new glass compartment, filled with a collection of cattleyas, also makes a good showing. G.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Business is all that could be expected. In fact, the store forces are always busy and they report a daily clean-up. Carnations have shortened up considerably, partly on account of the cloudy weather. The entire supply is used locally. Roses are also in great demand. Kaiserins are coming in nicely, but are rather soft for the shipping trade. Maids, Brides, Richmonds and Beauties are better adapted for that purpose. There is a scarcity of lilies, but there seems to be plenty of miscellaneous flowers, such as stocks, sweet peas, gladioli, mignonette and snapdragons. Orchids move slowly, yet the standard of prices is maintained. Apparently there will be a shortage of flowers for Memorial day, as the season is a little backward and all flowers are late. Peonies are coming along slowly; many of them are only showing color.

Various Notes.

E. J. Steele, of Steele's Mastodon Pansy Gardens, has purchased several acres at Forty-fourth and Powell streets. Mr. Steele is busy preparing the land as the future location of the gardens. The phenomenal growth of the business has made this change necessary.

F. L. Ziegler, of Spokane, Wash., spent several days in the city, looking up stock and supplies.

All the proprietors of flower stores have agreed to close the stores in the future at 8 p. m. daily and at 1 o'clock on Sunday. After those hours there is little business to justify keeping open, and when the customers are aware of the new rule they will make arrangements to place their orders earlier. There is no apparent reason why the flower business should not be regulated in this particular like all other lines of business. E. R. Chappell.

THE Tennessee State Board of Entomology has published a bulletin entitled "The San Jose Scale in Tennessee, with Methods for its Control," which was prepared by G. M. Bentley, the state entomologist and plant pathologist, and also secretary of the board. The subject is treated completely by the author and the bulletin covers twenty-four pages, carrying a number of interesting illustrations.

THE growers of apples in the Hood River valley are said to have almost unanimously signed up their crops for the coming year. The management of the Apple Growers' Association, an amalgamation of Hood River apple shipping concerns, declares that the success of the central agency is assured. Meetings have been held in all parts of the valley and more than 250 growers have contracted to ship their apples with the central selling concern.

A MEMBER of the city council of Cleveland, O., has announced that he will take up with City Forester Boddy a proposition to use a part of the city farms in Warrensville as a city nursery. It is said that the city appropriates annually about $5,000 for the purchase of trees, shrubs and flowers, and Tree Warden Cornhoff asserts that all of this stock could be grown economically on the proposed city nursery, except a few of the roses.

TENNESSEE NURSERIES.

Nurseries in Tennessee, holding certificates as a result of the 1912 inspection, number 351. Fifteen other nurseries were inspected, but they were condemned, strawberry root-louse causing the greater number of certificate withdrawals. Tennessee, it is claimed, stands foremost among all southern states in nursery production, the annual business aggregating $3,500,000.

FANCY LEAVED CALADIUMS

A Rare Chance for this Season of the Year

For nearly a month past we have been obliged to turn down all orders for Fancy Leaved Caladiums, our stock being exhausted, although we began the season with 30,000 bulbs, but our grower, when making his plantings, found that he had reserved 5000 more bulbs than he could find room for and we are now offering these in a splendid assortment of varieties, many of them are new or rare sorts, at $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100; $140.00 per 1000.

These bulbs are in prime condition and if potted up now will make splendid plants for summer decorations. You can find nothing superior, or that will stand better in your store window during the summer than these beautifully colored Caladiums.

Speak quick if you want them, as they are not likely to last long.

stock for sale during the season of 1912-13. Cold weather, causing the berries to ripen too late for a good market, and the high water conditions prevailing in western Tennessee during the spring of 1912 are assigned as the cause.

KELSEY NURSERIES BUILDING.

The Kelsey Nurseries, of St. Joseph, Mo., has purchased from the street railway company there three acres of land at the corner of Lake and Alabama avenues, on which it will erect a frost-proof storage building, 140 x 180 feet. The company, which is capitalized at $50,000, operates about 150 acres south of St. Joseph. The deal was made by C. G. Ferguson, manager of the nurseries, and E. S. Welch, proprietor of the Mt. Arbor Nurseries, at Shenandoah, Ia., who is a stockholder in the Kelsey Nurseries. G. L. Welch, of the Plumfield Nurseries, at Fremont, Neb., is the third stockholder, and it is stated that he will move to St. Joseph and become actively identified with the enlarged scope of the Kelsey Nurseries, which every year handles about 500,000 apple, 200,000 peach, 100,000 cherry and 100,000 pear trees, in addition to its other operations.

PRUNING BERRY PLANTS.

Kindly advise me how to prune raspberry, blackberry and gooseberry plants.
A. S.

Raspberries should be pruned back just before growth starts. I like to leave the canes about three feet high and superfluous ones should be removed entirely. From blackberries the weak and dead wood should be removed and they must be pruned lightly as compared with raspberries. On gooseberries, for the first two or three years, the new growths should be cut back half their length. Afterward they will merely need a little judicious thinning out.

THE SENSATIONAL ROSE OF THE SEASON

A SWEETLY SCENTED DRUSCHKI.

New H. T. Rose, "MRS. ANDREW CARNEGIE"

GOLD MEDAL unanimously awarded by twelve expert judges at the Great National Rose Society's Show, London, 9th July, 1912.

Also GOLD MEDAL and FIRST-CLASS CERTIFICATE at the Carnegie Trust Rose Show, Dunfermline, 19th July, 1912.

FIRST-CLASS CERTIFICATE at Glasgow and West of Scotland Flower Show, August, 1912.

We have no hesitation in saying we consider it the finest introduction for many years, and is undoubtedly the finest white Rose in cultivation. The flowers are very large, beautifully formed and of an aristocratic appearance, every flower coming perfectly shaped with high center and much superior in every way to Druschki. It reminds us of an extraordinarily fine White Cochet, but much larger. It occasionally comes beautifully lemon tinted, and will be much appreciated on account of its delicate fragrance, every flower lasting a long time. The habit of growth is robust, and much freer and dwarfer than Druschki. It is a magnificent exhibition Rose, and also a first-class variety for forcing, and eminently adapted for American culture, producing stems 3 to 4 feet long. One of our leading amateur rosarians, who was very enthusiastic over this rose, describes it as having lit up the whole show of the National Rose Society.

The Market.

Trade conditions continue normal, with the supply of all kinds of cut flowers and plants for bedding equal to the demand. All the dealers are busy preparing for Memorial day and hundreds of made-up pieces are being prepared, as the demand for these goods has largely increased during the last two or three years.

Various Notes.

"Breeding and Growing of American Violets" was the subject of the address given by Dr. Ezra Brainard, president emeritus of Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vt., at the monthly meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, May 21. He illustrated his lecture with stereopticon views and charts showing the evolutions of the last fifteen years. Arthur Sellew, of this city, and Frederick T. Jencks, of Barrington, were elected members of the exhibition committee to fill vacancies.

Timothy O'Connor will remove about June 1 from 272 Westminster street to the corner of Fulton and Union streets, where he will have one of the finest retail stores in the city. Mr. O'Connor was in New York last week on business.

In the Municipal Court last week the executor's account in the estate of the late Edward D. Clark was allowed, showing a balance of $4,169.43.

Timothy L. O'Connor and family have rented a house at Narragansett Pier for the summer and will open it about the middle of June.

N. Norris, of Boston, has arrived at Seaconnet Point for the season. Mr. Norris is gardener at the Watch House.

E. A. Chipman is showing a large display of foxgloves and hardy roses in pots at his greenhouses in Woonsocket. Matthew Maenair has presented to Congress, through Congressman Gerry, a petition favoring 1-cent letter postage.

Walter S. Sword has been appointed as moderator at Valley Falls for the special election to be held June 3.

E. E. Howard has two new greenhouses under construction. He has been busy on nursery stock. W. H. M.

ROSES

"MRS. GEORGE SHAWYER"

The growers who are claiming that Mrs. Sawyer cannot be grown without mildew, are welcome to call at this establishment and see for themselves whether or not this is the case. We have not seen mildew on Sawyer since Thanksgiving and any grower who has it is simply growing it too hot. A night temperature of 56 to 58 will suit Sawyer to perfection. We can still quote Sawyer and Milady first-class own root, 3-inch stock at $30.00 per 100; $250.00 per 1000. Also:

Pink and White Killarney, Richmond, Taft, My Maryland and American Beauty, 3-inch own root stock at $10.00 per 100.

The Market.

Business has been rather quiet since Mothers' day, but Memorial day will clean everything up. There is plenty of stock.

Various Notes.

At Julius Niednagel & Sons' they are cutting a big crop of carnations and roses. Mr. Niednagel is getting the lawn about the new residence in splendid shape. When finished it will be one of the finest in the city.

C. L. Niednagel is beginning to dry off his roses for an early start for autumn. He was a visitor in St. Louis May 18.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. has finished a large new house, which will be planted to roses.

J. C. Elsperrmann has been quite busy right along. He had an unusually large stock of bedding plants this season, but is well cleaned up.

Miss Nellie Goodge has been doing a large number of bedding jobs. She plants out heavily in Oak Hill cemetery. Her stock of plants for this work was excellent.

Royston & Fenton sold a large number of their old rose plants at three for 25 cents. Customers who bought bench plants three years ago say that though few lived through the winter they had their money's worth of bloom the first year. They will replant one house with smilax. E. L. F.

Marietta, O.—Perry W. Tivener, whose property at Gallipolis, O., was destroyed by the recent floods, has removed to this city and his present address is 157 Lancaster street.

Washington, N. J.—Alonzo J. Bryan reports this season's business as far exceeding all previous records. He has about 25,000 feet more glass this year than last and had every house stocked to its utmost capacity when the season started. Shipments to date have been as heavy as could be handled, a noticeable feature being the large percentage of orders from the west, and the prospect is that the clean-up will be early and complete.

CLEVELAND.

The Sixth City.

A heavy cut of carnations, a medium quantity of roses and a good supply of gladioli, stocks, lilies, etc., is the promise for Memorial day. Peonies, owing to the heavy frosts and cool weather that we have experienced for the last three weeks, will be shy, quite shy. Festiva maxima and other large mid-season varieties will not be in until June 5 to 10 in the lake region. Daily shipments are coming from the southern part of the state; quality good. Valley, daisies, adiantum and plumosus are in fair supply. Baby gladioli have been plentiful and find ready sale.

Various Notes.

C. Betscher, of Canal Dover, O., reports a heavy loss on peonies owing to severe frosts. Over 100,000 buds is his estimate of his loss. We hope some of his fine new sorts got through, so that he can be in good shape for the peony show to be held here June 12 to 14, by the American Peony Society and the Ohio Horticultural Society.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bartels, of North Olmsted, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Katherin, to James Winton, which will take place June 2, at the Clifton Club, Lakewood. Mr. Winton is one of the younger generation of Wintons, of automobile fame. Miss Bartels is a niece of Mrs. J. M. Gasser.

Work goes merrily on at the new plant of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., at Newton Falls. Guy Bate says they

The Grand New Dwarf Fern

"Teddy Junior"

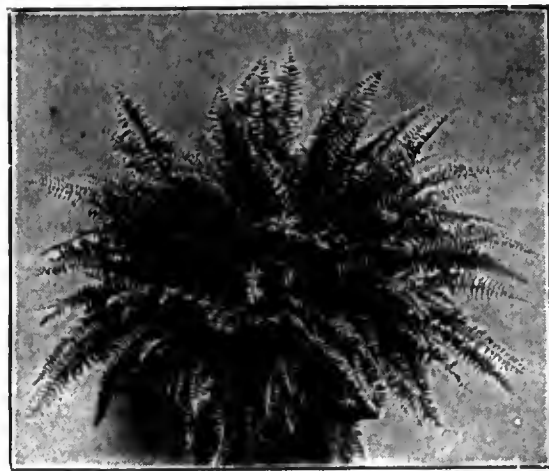

THIS VARIETY is a sport from the now famous "Roosevelt Fern," and while its habit of growth is to produce a shorter frond, it retains all the valuable characteristics of the parent plant. The fronds are broad and beautifully tapered from base to tip; they droop just enough to make a shapely, graceful plant, permitting it to finish with a fine, full center and perfect, symmetrical spread.

The pinnæ are distinctly undulated, giving the fronds an attractive, wavy appearance, which adds materially to their charming decorative effect, and thin, scraggly foliage is never seen in this variety. "Teddy" will produce about four times more fronds than any other Fern ever introduced, finishing with fifty to sixty fronds in a four-inch pot, while twelve to fifteen is the average number other varieties will produce in the same sized pot. It is such a compact, vigorous grower that it will thrive under most adverse conditions, making an exceptionally rapid growth and producing a plant of rare beauty and perfection in the average dwelling-house without special care or attention. Owing to its habit of producing the great quantity of massive foliage in small pots, this Fern makes the finest pedestal plant ever produced, and will prove indispensable for decorating dining-room or library tables and numerous other places in the home, where limited space will not permit using large pots or varieties with longer fronds. As a table decoration, fern growers can appreciate the commercial value of a dwarf variety that will produce forty to fifty fronds twelve to fifteen inches long in a four-inch pot. Such plants could readily be disposed of, and every grower can produce them from "Teddy Junior" with as little care and expense as they can grow other varieties.

Fronds of "Teddy Junior," the wonderful New Fern

Photograph of New Fern, "Teddy Junior" Without question
the greatest money-maker in Ferns ever grown

Special Note When Nephrolepis Roosevelt was first introduced, some firms represented to many growers that Harrisii was the same, and even substituted Harrisii for Roosevelt on their orders. Experience has taught growers that Roosevelt is far superior to any Harrisii, and at this time we are receiving orders with the request that only the true Roosevelt variety be shipped—Harrisii won't do.

12-inch tub	6 to 8 feet.....		8.00

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia be sure to look us up.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your own convenience, both going and coming. When you will see our palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place) and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business last week was fairly good and the market remained well cleaned of stock of every description. The outlook is good for Memorial day and, while this day has never amounted to a great deal in Detroit, the florists are nevertheless making every effort to make it a good day. There is every indication that stock will be extremely scarce. This is especially true of carnations. Roses will be in fairly good supply, as will be lilies, snaps and peas. A good supply of peonies is now on hand and large shipments of these will go a long way toward relieving the situation for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

S. S. Skidelsky was in the city for several days, visiting the trade, and reported the sale of Philadelphia as being fine. Fred Breitmeyer now has three houses planted to this carnation and the appearance is fine.

E. A. Fethers is building a beautiful home on Chicago boulevard, which will be completed about July 1.

Hereafter the meetings of the Detroit Florists' Club will be held in the beautifully appointed rooms on the second floor of the Bamb Floral Co. Meetings will be held the first and third Mondays of each month as heretofore. The cold weather this spring has delayed planting bedding stock to a great extent. While in former years much of this work was done by this time, little has been planted up to present writing.

New American Beauty GERANIUM

We take great pleasure in introducing to our many customers for 1913 our new American Beauty Geranium. For the first time, after working on it for nearly three years, we are offering it for sale.

Our Claim for American Beauty Geranium is that it surpasses all other Geraniums in its real American Beauty Color. The individual blooms measure 2½ inches across. It is semi-double, medium dwarf, of stately shape. It has come to stay as a money maker. Prices to the trade: 2½-in. pots, 50c each, $5.00 per doz.; 3-in. pots, $1.00 each, $10.00 per doz., cash. Write for circulars in natural colors and prices on large lots.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Monday of this week was quite different from the corresponding day of last week. The supply had shortened considerably, while enough call for stock sprang up to clean up the receipts pretty well. The shortened supply is due to the size of the cuts diminishing and to holding back by some growers, for Memorial day. During last week the oversupply of stock continued until near the close. Then the supply slackened, while the demand picked up, and as a result there were some pretty fair clearances secured May 24.

The supply for Memorial day will be large, but it is hard to forecast, with the local troubles, such as the flood, strike, etc., just what the demand will amount to locally. It is certain, however, judging from the orders on file, that shipping business will be good. To the list of flowers in the market have been added large quantities of cape jasmines. These with the offerings of roses, carnations, lilies and other flowers should give the market an adequate supply for the holiday demand.

Various Notes.

J. T. Conger had the large Thompson-Van Ness wedding decoration at Glendale May 20. It was Mr. Conger's third decoration for the family.

C. E. Critchell reports a specially good call for hardy cut ferns.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange expects to have no trouble in disposing of a large extra supply of Easter lilies for Memorial day.

P. J. Olinger and Robert Jennings went to New Castle, Ind., May 26. Louis Davis, of Mr. Olinger's staff, was there May 23.

A. C. Heckman, Jr., spent May 23 and 24 in Indianapolis.

It is reported that Mr. Klunder, formerly of the Hill-Heller store in this city, has accepted a position at Atlanta, Ga.

Gus. Adrian reports a good season in spring bedding. He has cleaned up the greater part of his large stock.

Visitors: Peter Herb, Mt. Healthy, O.; Mr. Donaldson, of the Willowdeen Nurseries, Sparta, Ky. C. H. H.

GERANIUMS

THE report comes from all sections that Geraniums are more in demand this season than ever and that all good stock will be cleaned up. We have an excellent lot of young stock ready to ship out, if you wish to grow your own stock for another season, but why bother with it, as we make it our business to provide your stock for you, to be shipped any time in the fall or winter you have the room, after Chrysanthemums or other crops have been removed? Our stock houses of Standard sorts alone, as now planted, contain 300,000 plants, as pretty as you ever saw. Then we have Novelty stock, Ivy-leaved sorts, Scented and Variegated varieties to the extent that we are confident we can take care of any order you may place with us. Think it over. Can you afford to bother with the stock yourself for $18.50 per 1000 for 2-inch plants?

SCARLET BEDDER

We have bought of Elmer D. Smith & Co. stock of this superior Scarlet Geranium and offer good, strong plants from 3-inch pots, for immediate shipment, at $1.50 per doz., $10.00 per 100.

COLUMBUS, O.

The Market.

Trade is at its heaviest at the present writing, but it has been active for the last two or three weeks. Plant trade of course at this time is taking the lead, but there is plenty of other work. Funeral work is heavy and quite a few decorations are on hand, while quite a number of good-sized jobs are being booked for next month. Plant trade is using up an enormous quantity of stock and some of the houses already are about sold out of certain lines. Geraniums have had their usual run and it looks as though they will be about all cleaned up in the next two weeks. The call for porch and window boxes has been far ahead of previous years; it seems they are becoming more popular every season.

There has been quite a demand on Beauties and fancy roses and some extra good stock is to be seen, especially of Killarney and White Killarney. Some fine Richmond are coming in also. Carnations are commencing to dwindle, but are still good for this date. Sweet peas and snapdragons are selling well and quite a few are moved daily.

Various Notes.

G. H. Woodrow is still improving, but is not able to be around much as yet.

Mrs. Wm. Graff and Ben Flynn surprised their friends by getting married and going to Buckeye lake on their wedding trip.

Mrs. Louis Elsass, of Chillicothe, has improved from her operation and is on the road to recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. McKellar were called to Chillicothe last week by the sudden death of Mrs. McKellar's mother. J. M.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y.—Walter Ludwig, at 16 Greenrigh avenue, is making preparations to sell his business.

PITTSBURGH.

The Market.

Pittsburgh was under a cloud almost all of last week, with rain May 22 to 24 and the weather much too cold for putting out bedding plants. It has held the plantmen back so that they will certainly be rushed to the limit from now on. The wholesale houses had their troubles, too, last week. Roses are in full crop for the first time this year. There have been more carnations than the market could use. Lilies have been a glut and there was an accumulation of everything all week, but a general clean-up was made Saturday, although I am not going to mention the prices at which quantities were sold—the less said about that the better. However, as this was the first real glut this year, probably it seems worse than it really was.

The retail people are all busy, and, as they only buy what they need, they do not mind these trying times for the wholesalers, which in a way work to their advantage.

The outlook for Memorial day is good and no doubt this week will be satisfactory to all.

The Florists' Club.

President Neil McCallum, of the Florists' Club, seems determined to have a good meeting Tuesday, June 3, at the Dutch room of the Fort Pitt hotel, as the following program would indicate:

"Bedding Plants Used by the Public Gardener in Pittsburgh," by John W. Jones, Schenley park.

"Bedding Plants Used by the Private Gardener in Pittsburgh," by James Wisemann.

"Bedding Plants Most Salable in Pittsburgh," by Paul Randolph.

"Hardy Plants Used by the Landscape Gardener," by C. H. Sample.

"Hardy Plants Used by Private Gardeners," by Robert Lilley.

"A Few of the Most Popular Hardy Garden Plants at Kew Gardens," by a young Kewite.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams had a special window to advertise Flower day for the Children's hospital. Blooming plants of the American Pillar rose were used, with a collection of imported dolls. The window was beautiful and was a grand advertisement for a worthy cause.

F. H. Westhoff had the misfortune to have a fire May 22, which destroyed his boiler shed and barn. There was quite a loss on machinery and tools, which were in the barn.

E. McCallum and John Harris were visitors at Cleveland the early part of last week.

A letter from Peter J. Nicholas, in Greece, informs us he will start for Cleveland in a short time. Clarke.

Danvers, Mass.—C. W. Woodman announces that the business of E. & C. Woodman will not be continued after this season.

CHOICE PLANTS Surplus, better and cheaper than ever

After Decoration Day

All florists and growers have empty benches. What shall we do with them? Have them empty? Sure not; no prosperous florist would think of such a thing. Don't let your money rust in the bank; nothing else in the world will pay you better than to invest

In Growing Asters

In the right kind, such as Godfrey Aschmann grows, the Genuine Crego Asters. These bear an abundance of large trusses of big flowers, suitable to cut and use in bouquets, vases, table decorations, funeral designs; these asters are also excellent for pot culture. We have them in separate colors, Pink, White, Shell-pink, Cardinal-blue, Lavender. We are well provided and can meet the rush. 50,000 in 2½-inch pots, large, strong plants, ready for immediate shipment, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000. Take the hint and consider what a profit you can make growing these Crego Asters. In the latter part of July and August your Asters are ripe to cut. Then what? Empty benches again! Then we can raise another crop—replace the Asters with stock for fall and Christmas sales, such as Nephrolepis of all kinds, Poinsettias, Cyclamen, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine and other winter-blooming Begonias, Rubbers, Solanums, Chinese and Obconica Primroses, etc. This is what we call hustling—utilizing your bench room to best advantage. If you want to be successful as a grower, you must be wide-awake and utilize to best advantage every part of your bench room at all times; every square foot of your bench space must bring you from $2.00 to $3.00 per year.

IPOMOEA NOCTIFLORA (Moonvine)

"Isn't that a sight?" "A sight; yes, more than a sight. The greatest show I ever witnessed," explained one to another gazing from the other side, pointing at an old, fashionable residence. There, exposed in the moonlight, was a heap of waxy, large, white, fragrant flowers. "What kind of a vine is that?" they asked one of another. "It is that so well-reputed white-flowered moonvine," answered a gentleman, hearing the conversation of the two. "Godfrey Aschmann, of Philadelphia, is the man who raises them and ships them all over the entire country. It is a rapid grower and a constant bloomer; grows 50 feet high in one season. Nothing better for quick shade; grows everywhere, on the garden walls, the roof gardens, the barns and all around the houses and arbors, covering everything in a remarkably short time. Thrives well in any soil. The botanical name is IPOMOEA NOCTIFLORA." We raise them by the 100,000, and it is one of our great specialties. Thirty-five years on the market. It bears an abundance of sweet, pure white, waxy flowers as big as a saucer. Nothing is more amusing than watching them when opening. 2½-inch pots, per 100, $5.00; 4-inch, $12.00 per 100. Now is the time to plant. Danger of frost is now over.

BEGONIAS. Our so well known strain of improved dark red Begonia Vernon and the beautiful pink Erfordii beat all the old types of Vernon to a standstill; they grow small foliage, but they flower and flower and nothing but flower—when geraniums fail to bloom, our Begonias will do the work. 4-inch, $8.00 per 100; 3-inch, $5.00 per 100; 2½-inch, $3.00 per 100.

MANY USES FOR CYPRESS.

Cypress, generally conceded to be the best of all woods used in greenhouse construction, is put to almost every use as an interior trim for dwellings. It may be finished in natural color or stained. The wood contains little resin and thus affords a good surface for paint, which it holds well. It is much used for door frames, window frames, transoms, ceiling, wainscoting, panels, doors, sashes, balusters, inside blinds, brackets, newel posts, grilles, mantels, and, to some extent, for flooring. It is a popular wood for kitchens, where it is subjected to dampness and heat. It shrinks, swells or warps but little, and is used for drain-boards, sinks, kitchen and pantry tables, cupboards and kitchen cabinets. For the same reason it is used for bread-boards and wooden implements about the pantry, ironing boards and clothes driers.

For the parts of houses exposed to the weather it serves equally well. As siding it practically wears out before it decays. When made into porch and portico columns it retains its shape, holds paint and has sufficient strength to sustain necessary loads. It is placed as cornices, gutters, outside blinds, pilasters and railing, and is much used for porch floors and steps.

Geum Coccineum

Mrs. J. Bradshaw

This is one of the finest plants of recent introduction. It will put quite into the background all the Geums at present found in gardens. This fine variety produces very large flowers, 2 inches or more across, semi-double, and with plenty of substance in them, of the most brilliant scarlet. They are produced on long wiry stems, and continuously from June to October. For cutting and border decoration it is very hard to beat, and no doubt it will figure conspicuously on the show table in future.

GERANIUMS

Some growers depend on the culls left after the bedding season is over for their propagating stock. The wise grower uses the best plants he can get for that purpose. Young plants propagated for that purpose are the best. We have a few thousands of just that kind, of the following varieties:—Marvel, the best deep red; S. A. Nutt, deep red; Decorator, the best orange scarlet; A. Ricard, orange scarlet; Bte. de Poitevine, salmon.

Plant these out now for your fall propagating.

PANSIES.

PANSY PARK PERFECTION is the most thoroughbred strain of giant show and fancy pansies, the flowers of largest size and most perfect form. I have made growing of pansy seeds and plants a specialty for 40 years and it is the result of many years of breeding and selection. It also contains every variety introduced by foreign growers to date. One of many reports: "Pansy plants purchased of you some time ago were fine and are about sold. Will you send me 1000 more at once?" H. L. Chadwick, Houlton, Me. Medium sized, hardy field-grown plants from seed sown thinly broadcast, giving extra fine roots; beginning to bloom; good stock for late bedding. They will make better plants and bear larger flowers during the heat of summer, and will last in good condition much longer than plants grown under glass. Over 75 varieties mixed, the reds, bronzes and best fancy sorts in large proportion, $3.00 1000; 500, $1.75. Cash with order. White, yellow, light blue, dark blue, same price.

PEONIES."PEONIES FOR PLEASURE"

This book of "Peonies for Pleasure" gives information on peony history, soil and plants to use, how and when to plant, fertilizers and how to apply, and describes the most extensive planting of really valuable peonies ever gathered together under the sun; describes old and new as well as the plebeian and aristocrat of the peony family. If you want information on the plant that stands next to the rose in beauty, that is practically known to the amateur as simply a red, white and pink peony, then send for "Peonies for Pleasure."

We also issue a special wholesale price list of peonies for fall sales, 1913. Send for both of these booklets.

PLANTS FOR AMERICAN FLAG.

I am called upon to make a landscape design of the American flag in flowers. As I have not done that kind of work as yet, I should like to have your advice as to how to make it and what kind of plants to use. I am located in the western part of West Virginia. A. S.

In order to secure the red, white and blue colors, use scarlet alternantheras, such as A. brilliantissima or A. major, for red. For blue, Lobelia Emperor William would be fine, but would be a failure in your locality. The next best plant to use is the ageratum, and this you can depend upon; Stella Gurney and Princess Pauline are good dwarf varieties. Santolinas are good to use for white, but need rather more trimming to keep them in shape. As a dwarf silvery white plant, Echeveria secunda glauca would do well with you, and, being of compact growth, could be effectively used as dividing lines. The flag would show to best advantage on a sloping piece of ground. C. W.

Cherryvale, Kan.—Mrs. Clara B. Grew, proprietor of the Cherryvale Greenhouses, finds that My Maryland is one of the cleanest and most satisfactory roses to grow. She has sent to The Review a photograph of a Maryland that has a 32-inch stem and a 5-inch flower, and she believes that, as a beginner, she has no reason to be ashamed of the results she has attained.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE FUEL MARKET.

There has been no change in prices for coal at the mouth of the mine, and little change in prices of demurrage coal. The operators are not letting coal come to market faster than it can be taken care of and the prospects are that those who have been accustomed to pick up, during the summer months, some cheap cars out of the supply on track, will find there are few such opportunities this season. The operating companies appear more inclined than ever before to let the coal stay in the ground rather than mine it at cost.

Buckwheat, the grade of anthracite that is used for steam purposes by many florists, is slightly weaker than it has been, but it is holding steadily in comparison with other seasons. The mines are reported to be putting more or less buckwheat on the ground rather than let it come on to a not strong market.

The West Virginia smokeless coals that are burned so extensively by florists in the middle west are not showing the usual signs of the season in wavering prices. The better grades of bituminous coal are firm. New River and Pocahontas are quoted at $1.25 at the mine and coal men who usually are well informed say they look for no cheaper price, predicting, rather, that there will be a steady advance, from time to time. The coal trade evidently believes the days of low priced coal are over, but it many times before now has happened that what the coal trade unanimously predicted failed to come to pass.

INADEQUATE PIPING.

I have bought a greenhouse, 32x217. It runs north and south, is even-span and has 18-foot bars. There are four feet of glass in the sides; the south end is glass; the north end adjoins the boiler house. The greenhouse is heated by a hot water boiler, which consists of eleven or twelve sections and is 6 years old. The draft is good. The boiler has two 4-inch outlets. The rear outlet is plugged; the main from the front outlet rises at an angle to a height of about six feet and is then reduced to a 3-inch header. From this header there are five 2-inch flows, and from the flows there are eight 2-inch returns, extending around the sides of the house, four on each side.

Is the boiler large enough for a temperature of 50 degrees in this Massachusetts climate? Are there enough pipes in the house? I was thinking of putting in a 2½-inch feed pipe from the rear outlet and connecting it to two outside flow pipes. By doing so I would have the 3-inch main feeding three 2-inch flows and the 2½-inch main feeding two 2-inch flows. Would this work satisfactorily, or what would you recommend?

P. A. F.

As nearly as can be determined from the data given, about 2,400 square feet of radiating surface will be required, to maintain a temperature of 50 degrees in the house described. This is fully

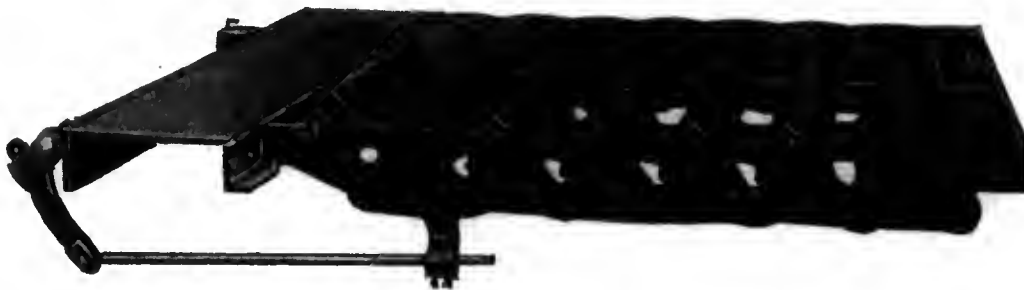

Continuous Firing for Four Years Twenty-four Hours a Day Fails to Burn Out Cyclone Grates

We have installed many sets of Cyclone Grates where these figures have held true.

Any grates that show no evidence of burning after four years' continuous firing twenty-four hours a day must have something exceptionally worth while about them.

Cyclone Grates resist burning because the Cyclone Plan insists upon a mixture of iron being used which years of experience and experiment have found best suited for the purpose.

Both of the outlets should be used, and, instead of using a larger number of 2-inch flow pipes, it will be better to use five 2½-inch flows. more than 250 feet of radiation will be carried by a 2-inch main. For this plant, a boiler rated for 3,000 square feet should be used.

IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

We are building a greenhouse for general purposes, one in which we may grow lettuce, force bulbs, grow bedding stock, propagate nursery stock, etc. The house is 19x100 and has 6-foot walls. In the center is a glass partition, so as to provide for different temperatures. On one side there is a lean-to, extending the whole length, to be used as a propagating house; this also has the division in the center. The main house has three benches. What advice would you give us on the heating system? It will have to be a hot water system. What size of boiler do we need and how is the pipe to be placed? What will be the best size of pipe? Any information will be thankfully accepted.
C. V. A.

The width of the lean-to is not stated, but we shall consider that it is six feet, and while the minimum winter temperature in your part of British Columbia is not stated, we shall suppose that the winter temperature does not drop lower than 15 degrees below zero. For heating such a plant with hot water a boiler rated for about 1,000 square feet of radiation will be needed.

In the way of piping, run one 2½-inch flow on each of the wall plates and another under the ridge. Connect each of the flows on the walls with three 2-inch returns, to be carried underneath, and use the flow under the ridge to feed two 2-inch returns in the lean-to. This should give 50 degrees. For 60-degrees in the end nearer the boiler, take off two additional returns on each wall, from the wall flows.

HEAT FROM RESIDENCE CELLAR.

I have a small greenhouse that is situated sixty feet away from my dwelling house. Can I heat the greenhouse by any method known to you, with the heater in the cellar of my dwelling and the flow pipes going underground to the greenhouse and then rising into the greenhouse? The flow pipe could not be over two and one-half feet below the surface and have any rise, owing to the slope of the land, which has a gradual

The Market.

Trade has been exceptionally good for the last two weeks. The florists doing a bedding business have had all they could handle. This has been the best season in the plant business that we have had in a number of years. Blooming geraniums and vines are already scarce. Retail cut flower trade also has been excellent for the last few weeks. Stock of all kinds is plentiful. The outlook for Memorial day is good. There will be no scarcity of stock this year. Candytuft, feverfew, stocks, daisies and peonies are plentiful.

Various Notes.

S. T. Hitz & Son are busy building some new greenhouses at their Brightwood plant.

Morton Brandlein has a fine lot of stocks and feverfew for his Memorial day trade.

E. A. Nelson and the Pahud Floral Co. are working day and night filling cemetery vases.

Sidney Smith says that he has about cleaned up his stock and is ready to retire from the florists' business.

Frank Hasselman has had a good plant business this year. He already has cleaned up the greater part of his stock.

Hartje & Elder are well supplied with Memorial day flowers. They have a fine lot of daisies, sweet peas, feverfew and candytuft.

A. Wiegand & Sons have had a busy plant trade this year, having almost cleaned up their stock. H. L. W.

HOW TO PLANT ASPARAGUS.

Kindly inform me how to plant asparagus roots. A. S.

Asparagus needs ground that is deeply plowed and liberally manured. Plant in rows four feet apart and set the roots eight inches deep. One-year-old plants are the best. Merely cover the roots a little with soil and keep filling in about them as they grow. If filled up at once, many of the plants will fail to grow. C. W.

The regular meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club had for an essay a paper by Mr. Byer, of Lapark, Pa., on bedding plants and their culture. The paper was well received and afterward our Mr. Nagle gave an interesting talk on his experiences in southern France, and they were both horticultural and poetic, with a little of Monte Carlo mixed between.

I. Rosnosky, representing the H. F. Michell Co., of Philadelphia, was with us and expressed surprise at the number of members present at the meeting—over forty out of a membership of a few over fifty—and told us of the good times that are coming.

The picnic committee reported making arrangements to picnic at Hershey, the home of the Hershey chocolates, where there is a picnic park over two miles in length, with all the requisites for a good time. As we will be partly the guests of Mr. Hershey and will be taken through his estate and the chocolate works, it will be quite an affair and any florist between the arctic circle and the antarctic, snow-capped hills is welcome to come with us July 14 or 15, the date to be announced later.

The president appointed Harry Rohrer, Chas. B. Herr, Jacob Flear and others as a serving committee, and refreshments were served and a general social time indulged in for several hours.

NOTICE

To all American Nurserymen and Seedsmen desiring to keep in touch with commercial horticulture in England and the continent of Europe: Your best means of doing this is to take in the

Horticultural Advertiser

Our circulation covers the whole trade in Great Britain and the cream of the European firms. Impartial reports of all novelties, etc. Paper free on receipt of 75 cents, covering cost of postage yearly. As the H. A. is a purely trade medium, applicants should, with the subscription, send a copy of their catalogue or other evidence that they belong to the nursery or seed trade.

A Worn Out Argument Knocked into a Cocked Hat.

IT'S a very funny thing that the smaller greenhouse building concerns, who are always shaking their heads in warning against the bigger ones, are straining every nerve possible to get all the business they can, to get as big as they can, as soon as they can.

That's why they want your order. That's why they knock the bigger, better concerns. Isn't that so?

With a concern like ours, whose big force of employees is divided into numerous departments, with an expert at the head of each, it is only reasonable that better results can be secured than in concerns where a few men try to be construction engineers, heating engineers, ventilating experts, manufacturing superintendents, and erection foremen all in one.

This is the age of Big Things. An age when the little things have to be done in a big way. It takes a big concern to do both the little and the big things in the Big Way this Big Age demands.

You will agree with us that we are meeting such demands satisfactorily. Write or call at any one of our sales offices and make a noise like an order.

A 5 TO 0 SHOT "Cypress Wins in a Canter"

As a straw to show how the wind blows, we note that a recent issue of The Florists' Review carried advertisements from the following greenhouse contractors and material men, all of whom recommend CYPRESS in large, black, healthy display type:

JOHN C. MONINGER CO., Chicago, users of Cypress ("and no substitutes.") ALL CYPRESS.

STOKES BROTHERS CO. (Inc.), Philadelphia—specialize in CYPRESS Bench Boards.

LOCKLAND LUMBER CO., Lockland, Ohio, shout for "Spot Clear CYPRESS."

SCHNUTE-HOLTMANN CO., Evansville, Ind., announce "Clear CYPRESS."

ADAM SCHILLO LUMBER CO., Chicago, specialize in "PECKY CYPRESS."

The A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., Neponset, Boston, Mass., while not advertising in this paper, is strong on CYPRESS for sash bars and Hot Bed Sash, with "Pecky" cypress bench lumber.

Now the joke in this is: No dealer in a "substitute" for CYPRESS mentioned his "cheaper" article. Those who use clear, heart CYPRESS seem to be PROUD OF IT. They are willing to "go before the country" on the standard that all experience in greenhouse construction has set—clear, heart CYPRESS, "and nothing but."

THERE'S AN ARGUMENT IN THIS SO PLAIN WE DON'T HAVE TO TELL IT.

There's Profit for You in the Facts—So Plain You're Bound to Go After It.

How about our free booklets in the CYPRESS POCKET LIBRARY? They're attractive—and chock full of greenhouse "hoss-sense." Vol. 1 is the Government Report on the "wood eternal"; Vol. 3 has the last word on GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION; Vol. 20, "Cypress for All Farm Needs"—it's new. A postal will bring you one or a dozen—they're free, absolutely. Write us a letter just for luck and good-fellowship—and as a good business move.

Why Cypress Does Not Rot and Why Some Cypress is Better Than Others

YOU HAVE often wondered, no doubt, why it is that comparatively soft wood like Cypress will outlast a hard, close grained piece of birch or maple. It does seem peculiar, doesn't it? The matter is very easily explained, however. Scientists have discovered that wood decay is caused by microbes that attack the material in countless numbers. It has been estimated that upward of 146,000,000 of these microbes infest one square inch of decaying wood and these tiny mites work incessantly in feeding on the wood fiber. It is small wonder that some of the greenhouse lumber rots away in such a comparatively short time.

These microbes attack wood of every kind in search of food. To resist this onslaught, various woods are provided with a serum or kind of oil which kills the microbes. Chemists have determined the amount of this oil in different species of timber and the amount varies to a large extent. Cypress is endowed by nature with an abundant supply, and on this account is practically impervious to the attacks of these deadly microbes. It seems that Cypress possesses this oil in greater quantities than any other timber known and this explains its remarkable durability. Truly it may be called "the wood eternal." There are different kinds of Cypress, and only in the swamp growth, found chiefly on the Gulf Coast, is there an extra large supply of this serum. Upland Cypress has a much smaller content of this valuable elixir of life, and does not compare with the Gulf Coast species. You get the genuine Cypress when you buy of us.

This microbe theory explains many things. Sap wood, containing a less quantity of the oil, is quickly destroyed. Boards that rot away in ridges and furrows show weak spots and strong spots in the wood fiber. The ridges show where the oil has settled and the furrows indicate a lack of it. Treating wood with creosote and other oils of similar nature helps it to resist the germs.

Creosote and other commercial preparations contain materials, the evaporation of which is injurious to plant life, and, therefore, these preparations cannot be used for greenhouse woodwork.

The nearer the heart of the Cypress tree you get, the more serum you find. This again explains the great durability of Pecky, for it comes from the heart of the tree. The microbe theory may help the government to discover the cause of the peck in Cypress.

It is estimated that about two hundred years would be required for these microbes to destroy one cubic inch of sap-free, Gulf Coast, Red Cypress. On sap spots one cubic inch would be devoured in four to five years, due to the extremely small quantity of oil in the sapwood.

Why try any substitute wood? Why waste time and money when Cypress costs very little more?

This Company has never used anything but Gulf Coast Cypress. You are absolutely sure of getting it here. We don't sell Cedar or Redwood. Never did, and don't expect to as long as the "everlasting Cypress" can be had in sufficient quantities.
